TIRED OF BOLSHIEVISM.

The French Ambassador at Moscow has returned to his post with instructions to give the Soviet Government an unofficial hint that the Red propaganda in France has become "intolerable." This is not surprising. It will be recalled that British relations with Russia were broken off just after a meeting between Sir Austen Chamberlain and M. Briand. It was denied at the time that there was any prearrangement, and this no doubt was literally true. But there may well have been some assurance given that France was in sympathy with the step. The actions of the Soviet representatives had been as offensive in Paris as in London. If this warning is not heeded it is difficult to see what else the French Government can do than follow the British example.

Will it be heeded? No attention was paid to a similar protest from the British Foreign Office. It is unlikely that meanwhile the Soviet leopard has changed its spots. Nothing is more surprising than the utter recklessness of Moscow in its dealings with the rest of the world. Again and again the folly of its course has been demonstrated.

But Bolshevism appears to be a sort of insanity impervious to reason. The duty of every Government that has had any dealings with it is plain. There should be a strict boycott of Russia until the Soviet is overthrown or comes to its senses. The latter alternative does not appear to be probable.

Today's important thing may have nothing to do with your regular job. It may lead to no material profit. It may be no obvious task. It may be the writing of a letter, a simple errand, a bit of a gift. Today's important task may be such a little thing that it will not take five minutes. In its effect on your character an don your achievement it may outrank the full routine of all the remaining hours. Do you know how to choose the important?

How true it is that "great thoughts, like great deeds, needs no trumpet!" Little use of telling our high motives and our unselfish purposes and acts. We shall rise only so high as our thoughts. If our thoughts are high, our actions will quickly show them forth. And if our thoughts are low our actions will not ring true.

"No, no," said the stern Premier to the 5-year-old king, "not another ice cream cone till you sign this nice long proclamation to the soldier boys."

Too many people care more about what people will say of their doings than about whether they ought or ought not to do certain things.

We wonder if that proposed new car of Henry's is a product obtained by crossing the two extremes of his present output?

In order to hold friends, it is necessary to restrain the impulse to tell them things that one believes to be for their good.

AN ENORMOUS QUANTITY OF LIQUOR SEIZED

to the city and after being weighed at the express office were loaded on a car at the C. N. R. depot and shipped to Saint John. The truck-load stored for the night at the barracks was also forwarded to Saint John. The Customs authorities here are without storage facilities for such a large quantity of contraband wet goods.

A Valuable Seizure.

It is estimated that the seized liquor is worth from $10,000 to $15,000, without taking into account the amount of the duty. While there is no clue as to the ownership the impression seems to prevail that it is the property of a rum running syndicate and was intended for American palates. There is always a good market for alcohol over the line, as it is by the addition of water and coloring matter readily converted into a decoction which passes for whiskey.

The officers, who made this big seizure are working from Saint John under the direction of Mr. L. A. Agnon, former Chief Game Warden and now chief preventive officer. The seized liquor was evidently landed by a vessel at some Bay of Fundy port, presumably in Saint John or Charlotte counties.

The Windsor Guests.

Among the guests at the Windsor are the following: Seymour Ballard, Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. J. Portch, Betty Portch, Toronto; J. H. Andrews and party. Rotheray; Mr. and Mrs. N. E. Bartlet, Boston; A.
