A PARALLEL CASE

Montreal Star: Curiously enough, the very point which Mr. Bennett has made so effectively against the demand of Mr. Mackenzie King that he tell us now what "Ministers" he will take to London, if he wins the elections, has come up for authoritative pronouncement in Great Britain. Lord Rothermere wants Mr. Baldwin to tell him in advance who will be his important Ministers if he is returned to power. Mr. Baldwin's friends reply for him that it would be contrary to constitutional usage for him to do any such thing.

Sir Frederick Pollack, a great constitutional lawyer, says, for instance, that "no man expecting to form a Ministry is in a position to say publicly who his Ministers are going to be, because the Ministers are not appointed by the Prime Minister but by the King, and the Sovereign may object, and sometimes has objected, to the appointment of a particular Minister."

Thus the demand that Mr. King makes upon Mr. Bennett to tell him at once what Ministers he will take to London is a demand for what Mr. King should know better than most people is impossible. But even if the Sovereign or his representative does not object, Mr. King should also know—again better than most people that the sovereign people may object most effectively.

Had Mr. King been asked just before the elections of 1925 what Ministers he would take to any important conference scheduled to follow those elections, he would certainly have included such names as Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Hon. George P. Graham, Hon. Vincent Massey and Hon. Herbert Marier. Yet when the elections occurred, the sovereign people cancelled the puissant names. How does Mr. King know what name this same sovereign people will cancel on the 28th of this month? He himself may not be able to take the men to London whom he hopes; and surely Mr. Bennett is very decreet not to attempt to snatch from the people in advance their right practically to dictate his Ministers.

All a weekly magazine of humor needs nowadays is a handle, most of them being thin enough to shave with.

Perhaps the safest life of them all is that of the laboratory rat we read about, which is fed all manner of delicious food to determine if it contains Vitamin C.

The New York fellow who wrote a book on "How to Commit a Murder and Get Away With It," collided with a police car the other day, and was fined $25. He'd better be careful and not write a book on "How to Live 100 Years."

A group of college girls down east moved all the furniture, including a grand piano, from a burning home "while men stood outside and looked on." And perhaps pondered sadly how easily such girls could move husbands from their homes.

Applications of electricity, says a doctor, stimulate the mind. For example, when turning on a light switch with the other hand on a water tap the wind tells you at once to let go.

"Am American explorer claims to have discovered a Himalayan peak which he believes is higher than Everest." You're apt to find anything in the housecleaning season.

"The pigeon is one bird," says the Boston Herald "that never goes into a popular song." Why, years ago there was a Folies tune, "Marie Odile," in which "pigeon" was rhymed with "religion."

A dentist in Louisiana was tarred and feathered by a crowd of unidentified hoodlums. It is said authorities on the case are embarrassed by the multiplicity of motives.

Often the old ways are best. A neighborhood Boy Scout made fire from sticks the other night faster than his father could get any reaction from a cigar lighter.

A soda fountain has been installed aboard the U. S. S. Memphis, and the next London conference will doubtless have to take up the whole matter of a proper calibre for ice cream cones.

Juniper juice, says Dr. Willem Rudolfs, the entomologist, makes the mosquito sing in a higher key. The song we assume, would still be "sweet Adeline."

Mr. Rockefeller is giving out nickels now instead of the erstwhile dimes, but reports are not in on what kind of service he gets in hotels.

"There's a slight scraping sound in the transmission," said a local young husband to the service manager, "as of the little woman preparing toast."

There is an appeal in passive resistance as observed by Ghandi's followers. A group of women sat for twenty-eight hours near a salt depot without saying a word.

SCALERS EXAMS BEING WRITTEN HERE TODAY

The semi-annual examinations for Scalers' Licenses is going on at the Parliament buildings here today, under the supervision of the Boards of Examiners headed by ex-officio chairman, G. L. Miller, chief provincial forester. Eight are writing this year, more than usual.

Those writing the papers are John Gould, Dalhousie; J. Swim, Doaktown; H. E. Irvine, St. Stephen; Samuel E. Denning, Chatham; H. D. Sadler, Perth; R. M. Lord, St. Stephen. Two others were expected to arrive here this afternoon.

Practical Work

The practical work of the examinations was completed this morning at F'ton Jct. and the theoretical half was undergone this afternoon. These examinations are conducted every half year and the applicants are increasing yearly.

Besides G. L. Miller, the other member of the Examining Board are A. T. Murchie, chief scaler, and R. K. McFadden, another prominent scaling authority.

CHINESE LAW COLORFUL

Shanghai, July 9—Chinese lawyers are objecting to new regalia decreed by the Nanking Government. In court they must wear black gowns bedecked with white silk ribbons and headgear that looks like that of Nationalist soldiers. A petition sent to Nanking urges something less conspicuous.

The buddies and their pals had better avoid the Flannagan road in future. What's the attraction any way?

Was In Bed All Summer

"I have to work in the store and do my own housework, too, and I got nervous and run-down and was in bed nearly all summer. The least noise would make me nervous. I was told to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I have taken seven bottles. It has made me stronger and put more color into my face. I am looking after my store and housework and my four children and I am getting along nicely now."

SEPTEMBER BABIES ARE HEALTHIEST

Springfield, Ill., July 9—Babies born in September enjoy the greatest chance of survival according to the state department of health which reports it finds that 10 per cent of the children born in January perish during infancy while only 7 per cent of the September arrivals succumb.

The explanation, the department states, lies in the fact that prospective mothers eat more foods, rich in vitamins, during the summer because vegetables are plentiful and cheap.

Fire Insurance Enough?

You have some fire insurance, of course; few householders tempt fate by going without any fire insurance. But enough—that's the point. If a destructive fire does attack your home and you find you are but partially insured, you will never forgive yourself for not taking out sufficient protection when it could so easily have been done. We suggest that you phone 291-21.
