OLD DAYS RECALLED

The old days of wooden ships and iron men, the days when New Brunswick built vessels sailed the seven seas, have been recalled by the death at Moncton this week of J. Nelson Smith, retired ship builder, and at Westmount, P. Q., earlier in the month of Capt. Lemuel H. Lockhart, master mariner, formerly of Dorchester, N. B. Mr. Smith was for many years a prominent figure in the commercial life of Albert and Westmorland counties. He built and managed a number of splendid sailing vessels, including the Bark Edna M. Smith, which has been put down as the last square rigger built in Canada. This ship ran into a streak of bad luck during the last year of her existence. She was sold to American parties at a very low price two months before the outbreak of the great war, which was declined to give tonnage a greatly enhanced value, and was wrecked soon afterwards during a trans-Atlantic voyage. The late Mr. Smith was a sturdy representative of the very best type of New Brunswicker, and his passing means the severance of an important link between the past and the present.

Capt. Lockhart was born on a Westmorland County farm and made his first voyage to sea as cook of a sailing vessel while still in his teens. He afterwards studied navigation and was granted a captain's certificate for sail or steam, when he was still in his twenties. He followed the sea for nearly fifty years, commanding sailing ships and freight steamers, visiting all the great ports and making two voyages around the world. He was regarded as one of the most competent ship masters that ever sailed out of a New Brunswick port.

THE NERVOUS RUSH

Much of the average man's or woman's discontent in the world comes from what might be called an overwrought sense of the passing of time. Driven by constantly increasing cares and duties we become irritated by the feeling that everything must be done at once. Everything must be done today. Tomorrow does not enter into our plans except as something to be worried about. The fact is that a great many things can be put off until tomorrow or next week or next month. There are a few things that ought to be done today. Be sure what they are. As to the rest, take it easy.

IN TOUCH WITH RICHES

Speaking of power we learn that the lowly golden rod is one of several promising plants from which Thomas A. Edison says rubber can be made. It is impossible to say at what price rubber can be produced from golden rod. But in great invention, price is usually only a detail to follow.

Riches are all about us. Today's weed may be one of the sources of tomorrow's wealth. Man is only at the beginning of his intelligent adjustment to the universe in which he unaccountably finds himself.

ALWAYS SOMETHING

"It is an old saw," remarks the Minneapolis Tribune, "that some persons are never satisfied. A man in southern Minnesota, tiring of life and its growing burdens, walked a mile and a half up the right-of-way and lay down on the railroad track with his neck over the rail. But the train was late, and the rail was hard and cold. The man finally wore out, walked back to town and wrote a letter to the general freight agent complaining of the poor service on his road."

And while we are on the domestic situation in general, let us quote from a bunch of statistics concerning New York's population of 6,065,000 in which it is stated: "Fourteen are married every hour; a baby is born to them every 4.1 minutes," but we don't believe it.

The resolutions adopted by the New Brunswick Federation of Labor at its annual convention at Moncton this week are important and should have careful consideration from the authorities.

The husband who gave his wife a new hand-manipulated washing machine for a Christmas present is the sort of individual who in August would send her a bunch of flowers on the anniversary of her hay fever.

A breach of promise suit for $200,000 has been brought against Rudy Vallee. Since hearing that all inquiries are referred to his promotion agent, however, we are doing our utmost to lose interest.

The chap who succeeded in putting twenty strands of No. 50 cotton thread through the eye of a cambric needle probably has no difficulty in reading the numbers in telephone books.

"Under the lawn's fleecy blanket," said the Cynic, moved to poetry by the snow, "the little dandelions are sleeping."

A judge may have more sense than a dumb jury, but even that is at times damning with faint praise.

THROUGH OUR SIEVE

Simile: As useless as a last summer's weather forecast.

Lima Beane thinks the average woman wouldn't care to see herself as the beauty doctor sees her.

Our memory tells us that the elders were also concerned when the young people were playing "button" and "needle's eye."

An efficiency expert is the man who asks the worker across the room to "please come over here and touch this button for me."

For any who may be interested the Vienna doctor who declares love is a disease says also that one of the symptoms is a flush skin.

Astronomers have found a black spot on the sun that is as wide as our earth. It will make a good story when they decide what to do about it.

Feeling prophetic for a moment, we venture that the lion and the lamb will sleep spoon-fashion when the Nobel peace prize is divided between Russia and China.

Zane Grey says "no journalist ever became a literary figure of the first rank. Possibly not, though Mark Twain and Edgar Allan Poe, not to mention Charles Dickens, got pretty close to the top.
