BRITISH GOLF EXPERT PRAISES HORTON SMITH AND BOBBY JONES

Darwin, English Expert Says Jones Starts Slow But Is Terror at Finish—Smith Beautiful Stylist—Compston Was One of Best In Recent Open Championship Fight.

Hoylake, England, June 21—Yesterday was another lovely day for golf and more low scores were expected in the British open championship here.

But to begin with things went rather badly with the leaders, and the Americans did not as well as they did on the first day. Mac Smith and Jim Barnes were the first two men out. Each finished with a 77, so one stroke over Barnes. It cannot be said that either played well. Smith had a couple of sixes on the way out, which swelled his outgoing score to 40. Barnes let a number of notable putts slip and had some serious trouble at the short thirteenth hole, which cost him a five.

Fell Down

Henry Cotton, the young English pro. fell sadly away from his 70 of yesterday and took a 79 today. As a result of this, Archie Compston, who did 74 on the first day, was able to catch up with Cotton. Compson's 73 made him equal with Mac Smith and one better than Barnes. Truth compells the admission that while Archie played a brave round, he did not play a good one. A number of his second shots were exceedingly sketchy. He had luck with him in holing his pitches, and his own indomitable confidence helped him through. Still, handsome is as handsome does—a 73 is a 73—but I am sure Compston was profoundly grateful when the round was safely over.

Lost Lead

Compston and Mac Smith did not hold their lead long, for Horton Smith came in with a 73 and dethroned the pair of them with his 145. What a beautiful golfer this young man is! Nobody, not even Bobby Jones, has a more perfect or more inevitable fellow through, and nobody can make the game look more transparently simple.

Morton began with a 4-4-3, and by that time he had gained strokes on all of his most dangerous rivals. I could not watch all of his game, and I know he made some slips, gut he finished like a hero with a three after having gone out of bounds at the seventeenth. His 73 was the result of thoroughly sound golf.

At Worst

Had Bobby Jones been at his most devastating best when he started, he might have opened up such a lead today between himself and the next man as to leave the final issue in small doubt. Instead of this, however, he began with his devastating worst. He does not like the first four holes and he played them here today as if he ddi not. His five at the first was due to too much caution and he was lucky in jumping a bunker at the second to get his four. At the third, Jones nearly hooked out of bounds, the ball jumping back in the round. At his next effort, a rather ill judged forcing shot, as I thought, jumped another bunker and went into more rough. The result was a six and three whole strokes were wasted.

Set Teeth

Then Bobby Jones set his teeth and started. From that point until the end of the fiftenth hole, he did every hole in exactly par score. There were just two misadventures at the two short holes, but in each case he pitched back beautifully, holed nice putts and got threes.

At the sixteenth, which is 530 yards long, Jones was not quite home in two and took a five. Two perfectly played fours finished a really superb round and Bobby was three shots ahead of Horton Smith.

Extraordinary

Jones is a most extraordinary player. You leave off watching him when he is two or three over fours. You come back an hour or so later and he is two or three under fours and nobody knows exactly how he did.

Diegel joined Mac Smith at 147 by means of a 73. It would have been much better bzut for consecutive sixes at the fifteenth and sixteenth holes. Don Moe had a brilliant spell and is well up, if not positively dangerous, with another 147. And then just at the end, came the real challenge to Bobby Jones. Fred Robson, who had done 71 on the first day, very nearly tied the leader. Robson failed by a quarter of an inch on the last green.

WANTS TO FIGHT

Detroit, Michigan, June 21—An offer of $200,000 today was wired Joe Jacobs, manager of Max Schmeling, world's heavyweight champion, for a title fight here in September between Schmeling and Johnny Risko, of Cleveland.

Dick Dunn, matchmaker for Olympia, said Danny Dunn, Risko's manager, had agreed to terms for the fight.

MONTREAL STAR'S VIEWS ON THE N. B. ELECTION

(Montreal Star)

Two provincial elections were held in Canada Thursday and while the extreme partisans of all parties will profess to be able to see new victories won for themselves when the returns are finally tabulated, less blassed observes will discover little more than expected changes in the standing of the various parties. In both cases, at all events, the governments remain in power.

While Premier Baxter has lost a few seats, he is returned to power with a comfortable majority, large enough to permit him to go bodily ahead with the legislative program he set forth in his pre-election platform and elaborated in his speeches. The defeat of the leader of the Opposition, who was a target of much criticism, and the overwhelming victory of the Premier in his own riding will probably solace him for the loss of the seats which the Liberals have wrested from him.

In 1925 when the eighth Legislature of the province was dissolved, the standing of the parties was 29 Liberals, 12 Consecutives and seven United Farmers. At the election held on August 19, 1925, Mr. Baxter was returned to power in one of the most amazing political overturns that has ever occurred in Canadian politics. Not only were the tables reversed, but the Conservatives found themselves with a majority of 26 over both the other parties instead of Mr. Foster's majority of 10, and while the Liberals lost eighteen seats the Conservatives gained twenty-five. It might reasonably have was not a true reflection of the permament standing of the parties and that at the next election the pendulum would swing back with more or less force. This was the expectation of many political obesrvers on the gorund and it was generally conceded that Mr. Baxter would have a reduced majority for his next term of office. The result has to some extent justified the forecast, although the swing back was less violent than was anticipated. In Northumberland County, where local issues told against the Conservatives, the Liberals gained four of the six seats won.
