HARD ON THE POOR

Even persons who find winter, old-fashioned winter, to their liking may still wish that the cold were tempered to the "shoddy lamb." Zero weather always comes upon many who are unprepared for it and are unable to combat it on even terms.

"Love keeps cold out better than a cloak." So wrote Longfellow. For the average mind to keep step with that thought there must be the complacency that goes with bodily comfort. The idea belongs with the fire-side.

Associated with a well-filled coal bin and warm clothing there is delightful harmony in the poet's fancy. But it is without appeal to the thousands who are scantily clad and poorly fed. To them winter is a horror. Nobody has a greater demand upon helpful sympathy.

ABSOLUTELY FIXED

Harry F. Ward, well known religious teacher in New York, says there is a real danger that religious ideals will become out of date and unimportant. There can be no absolutely fixed standard in religion or religious belief. There is such a thing as truth but so far nobody can be sure that he has all of truth within his understanding. What seems to be truth today may be somewhat changed by tomorrow's findings. Professor Ward is right. No matter how high or how plausible ideals may be, they may have to be changed. Thinking people will not fear change. Only the lazy minded do not change or desire to change.

Recently several persons were convicted before a Hamilton Magistrate and fined $5 each for failing to take out a radio license. After imposing sentence the Magistrate discovered that he did not himself possess a license and on instructing the clerk of the court to lay a complaint he fined himself $5 and costs. Some years ago a police magistrate in this city, fined a number of people for failure to connect their properties with the city sewerage system, and it was afterwards discovered that his own dwelling was not connected.

Charles Evans Hughes, Jr., Solicitor General of the United States has resigned since the announcement that his distinguished father had been nominated to the post of Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court. Young Mr. Hughes felt that it would not be right for him to appear as counsel before a court presided over by his father. This should be the means of establishing a precedent not only for the United States but for other countries.

A musician in Chicago actually lost a bass drum, in a taxicab. Not only that; we see where a receiver of a New York cab company lost 24 taxicabs.

We told the last young man who was working his way through one of our large universities that we were signed up till 1970 on all the magazines we cared for.

What we anticipate is that some hence some archeologist is going to dig up a May cantaloupe, and try to reconstruct the twentieth century man from his head alone.

Fritz von Opel's idea of speed, with his rocket machines, is only 2,000 miles an hour. This illustrates how conservative a fellow tends to become after his junior year in high school.

What ever became of the chap of whom there was usually one in every town of 2,000 or so, who could make a fiddle of a cigar box?

Following an automobile crash, police in Secaucus, New Jersey, are searching for the ninth passenger in a three passenger college coupe.

We'd kind of like to be on hand when they inherit the earth just to see what the meek will do about any crisis then prevailing in Chicago.

A neditor says almost any convict has one good novel i nhim. Some, of course, are second-story men, too.

THROUGH OUR SIEVE

Among the banks that are doing well this winter are the snow banks.

Zero weather adds a clear, appealing note to the coal chute.

Apologies to Eddie Guest—it takes a heap o'lovin' to make a home homey.

A scientist declares that bees are lazy. Not conclusive until he tells which end of the bee he studied.

Lima Beane says the frequent slurring remark that money isn't everything hasn't made it unpopular.

Our faith in the modern young people remains strong under all circumstances. To us they represent the self-rising generation.

Solomon gets credit for wisdom because the modern debunkers can't say which among his seven hundred wives wrote his paragraphs for him.

Usually there is little risk of overdoing the something that ought to be done about anything that is of importance to the community.

Really, again thinking of the prophesied war between the sexes, probably there will never be anything between them more serious than little love spats.

Some day we hope to get the true story of Shakespeare—that instead of being a poet and dramatist it will be found that he was a junk dealer who discovered the manuscripts of the plays attributed to him in a bag of old papers.

Some policemen, so they say, go dog-catching every day. Prithree, Townsmen, should we pay Full-grown men for childish play? Surely, nay.
