A TOUCH OF NATURE

In commenting on the birth of a daughter to the Duke and Duchess of York at Glamis Castle, Scotland a few days ago the Philadelphia Ledger says:

"Not many Americans who welcomed the news that a daughter was born to the Duke and Duchess of York have any great concern for the royal line of England, though most Englishmen sleep sounder—even in these days of determined democracy—if they knew that the succession is safe. It was a more human interest that crossed the sea to Glamis Castle and there found reason for rejoicing in a royal birthday. This is a child of destiny, indeed; but the fact is universally important only because every child is born under a star. It is a star that is usually seen only by the eyes of proud parenthood, but it is nearly always beautiful with hope and brilliant with promise.

"A little head that may some day wear a crown is a rather lovely symbol of the pride and joy of parenthood. There were many young Americans born on the birthday of the new Princess and for them also there are high hopes of a crown of success and happiness. Into this birthright of opportunity and the best of intentions most babies are born, and the little Princess in Scotland is just like the rest of them in that she takes it all for granted and keeps her own counsel. Her future is part of the mystery of babyhood, though destiny watches in robes of state beside her cradle. And it is not the pomp and circumstance of royalty nor concern for England's heir that have aroused world-wide interest in her birthday. It is the universal tenderness for babyhood and the honor due to all motherhood that have chosen her for a symbol and greeted her so cordially with congratulations and good will."

REAL WELFARE

Scientists, gathering in Paris, are told the conference is called for the purpose of reuniting scientific workers of all nations, the contacts of whom have been interrupted and retarded by the World War—and to reawaken a sense of profound interest in the welfare of humanity.

This is hopeful. Thoughtful men are learning to think and talk in terms of human rather than national welfare. Contacts in science and social work, broken down by the war, are made again. The government is important; the people are important.

The Princess Helene, a splendid steamer of the latest type, has been placed on the St. John-Digby route by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company. Tourist travel in the Maritimes has made rapid growth in recent years, but it is still in its infancy. That is recognized by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, a concern which always keeps abreast of the times. The new steamer is sure of a generous patronage, and the time will soon come, as intimated by President Beatty, when it will be necessary to put on another boat of the same capacity and speed in order to keep pace with the traffic.

Can you cultivate the ability to have foresight? If you can, it's wondrous piece of mental equipment. The ability to see what will happen if you do something or other, or what will happen if you do not, constitutes a rare—perhaps a non-existent—kind of talent.

Another thing that never ceases to astound us is the bridge expert's reasoning: "Since West bid one diamond, it is plain he must hold the King, Jack seven and three of spades."

"A frog with six legs so jointed that it may hop in any direction is reported from California." It is not known, though, how it stands on any of the important issues of the hour.

So far we have had little success at visualizing Mr. Mencken, the new bridegroom, in the act of trading in surplus gravy ladles for a clothes wringer.

It's a bit disappointing to us to read that in his 156 years Zoro Agha has had 12 wives. If he were a real Turk, in that length of time he'd have had 144 wives.

One of the experts says that the public expects too much of the stock market. Expecting anything of the stock market these days is too much.

According to a Chicago Chemist, a watermelon is 92 per cent water, and according to any small boy, it is another 66 per cent seed.

Shiny cloth, say a Parisian designer, is a feature of the coming mode. A survey of our trousers suggests may be the glass of fashion.

Culture is widespread, but in remote regions there are races still so benighted they haven't even heard of a hole in one.

Accentric; An ordinary man who is in the habit of doing things he is not in the habit of doing.

Business, says the town cynic, seems to be one of the things that isn't to be opened until Christmas.

Dollars went further in the old days, but they go far enough now so that it is hard coaxing them back.

FACES 3,060 YEARS IN PEN GETS ONLY 12

Shanghai Aug. 27—With a sentence of 3,060 years staring him in the face, Yang Su-ling, formerly with the Bureau of Public Safety of the Chinese Municipality, gratefully accepted a mere 12 years.

Yang and a companion induced "investors" to give them money on which 5 per cent was to be paid. It was but not very long. When $637,000 had rolled in Yang allowed himself to be "kidnapped," but his depositors discovered him in Tientsin and laid against him 765 counts of fraud each punishable with a four year sentence.

Fire Insurance Enough?

You have some fire insurance, of course; few householders tempt fate by going without any fire insurance. But enough—that's the point. If a destructive fire does attack your home and you find you are but partially insured, you will never forgive yourself for not taking out sufficient protection when it could so easily have been done. We suggest that you phone 291-21.
