London, Nov. 21—A Scotland Yard detective sent hurriedly out of town to investigate a murder case just shouts to a messenger to bring him a "murder bag" and dashes off.

Although little is known of these "murder bags" outside Scotland Yard, six of the bags were always kept packed and ready for a call.

Its contents are:—

Two rubber aprons, two pairs of rubber gloves, fingerprint apparatus, including powder and brushes, one magnifying glass, one electric torch, one luminous compass, one pair of handcuffs, footprint apparatus, including zinc collapsible moulds.

Two 24-inch steel flexible rules

A steel case for stationary, including finger print forms.

Towels, soaps and strong disinfectants.

The rubber aprons gloves and disinfectants are designed to protect the detective from germs while conducting his investigation.

ANIMALS IN KIPLING'S TALES EXHIBITED

New York, Nov. 22—Specimens of 450 animals which Kipling immortalized in his tales of India and Burma went on public exhibition today in the newly dedicated South Asiatic hall of the American Museum of Natural History.

Arranged in habitat groups to give the appearance of life, the specimens included elephants, rhinoceri, hog deer, wild boars, hoolock gibbons, tigers, water buffaloes, four-horned antelopes, smooth otters, spotted chevroton, wild dogs, and leopards.

The collection was amassed and presented to the museum by the late Col. J. C. Fawcett, and Arthur S. Vernay, British big game hunters, who spent nine years in the jungles and deserts of southern Asia.

A THREE DAY MAIL SERVICE FOR ATLANTIC

(Special to THE DAILY MAIL by the British United Press.)

New York, Nov. 22—Three day mail service across the Atlantic is proposed in plans submitted to the Navy Department in Washington by the United States lines, it was learned today. The plans call for two new 50,000 ton liners with a speed greater than either the Bremen or the Europa. The new liners will be equipped with catapults by which fast long distance mail planes will be launched from 600 to 1,000 miles at sea.

RESPONDS TO KEROSENE INJECTIONS

Buenos Aires, Argentina, Nov. 22—A Buenos Aires doctor who had been treating several of his patients for chronic bronchitis with hypodermic injections of petroleum or kerosene discovered that one of them, who suffered from diabetes as well, began to show marked improvement under the treatment.

Amazed by his discovery, the doctor in question, says Critica, has since applied the "petroleum cure" to a number of men and women affected with diabetes, many of whom he claims have completely recovered.

BROADCASTING CREATES A NEW PROFESSION

New York, Nov. 22—Chain broadcasting has developed a new profession—that of production engineers.

The job of the production man is a sort of behind-the-scenes task, for it is he that stands between the broadcaster and the listener. He is in full charge of every program broadcast. One of the important items under his guidance is the timing of the program, such as seeing to it that it fits exactly the period allotted to it on the air.

Devon Boy Captain

Don Burns, son of Rev. Harry and Mrs. Burns of Devon, was elected captain of the 1931 Mount Allison senior football team at a recent meeting held at Sackville. Donald succeeds Ross Corbett, of Saint John, this year's captain. The appointment of Burns is a popular one, as the young man is a splendid football player, proving the keystone of the Mount A. backfield this year. Burns was two years with the University of New Brunswick and went to Mount A this fall.

SCIENTIST SHOWS OYSTER "R" MONTHS FALLACY

Paris, Nov. 22—The time honored belief that oysters are only edible in the months containing an R has been blazed by Dr. J. Herber of Sete, one of the principal oyster towns of France. Speaking before the recent 17th congress on public hygiene, Dr. Herber declared that there was little connection between the months in which oysters are eaten and the prevalence of typhoid fever. Popular tradition declares that oysters eaten in the months without R's generally result in typhoid. He cited statistics showing the oysters where oysters were eaten the year around are comparatively free from fever, the number of cases being generally less in months without R's than during the R months.

Week-end Market

The market this morning was a very large one and for some hours Phoenix Square was the scene of considerable activity. The continued mild weather had a tendency to keep down meat prices, as buyers were inclined to be cautious. Prices were about as follows:

Denver, Col., Nov. 22—Mountainous snowdrifts impeded the progress today of searchers for the three persons who became lost in a blizzard which swept virtually the entire Western United States, leaving death and destruction and suffering in its wake.

The storm coming from the North, took a toll of three lives, hundreds of head of livestock and untold property damage.

A Real Old Timer

William J. Noble, retired lumberman of New Maryland motored to the city today and was warmly greeted by many old friends. Mr. Noble is the last of the old time lumber operators who used to cut logs on the upper St. John and tributaries. Although well advanced in years and somewhat crippled he still enjoys good health and can talk as fluently of the old days as he ever could. "I would sure like to be up on the Allegash with a crew of men" he told the Mail, "But times have changed and so have I."
