

MONKEY GLANDS BELIEVED CAPABLE OF EXTENDING THE NORMAL LIFE SPAN TO 140

(Montreal Star)

The possibility of the extension of human life to 120 and 140 years by the grafting of glands from healthy young monkeys to the human body, was visualized this morning by Dr. Serge Voronoff, famous French surgeon, whose application of the Brown-Sequard theory of using animal secretions to supplement deficiencies in human beings has brought him world-wide fame. He is staying at the Ritz-Carleton hotel.

"The Chimpanzee, gibbon and gorilla have glands the same as those of a man," Dr. Voronoff said. "They are what we know as 'superior monkeys,' their blood being the same as that of human beings. Of course, it is not possible to get men to sacrifice their glands for other men, but even if it were possible, we should prefer the glands of superior monkeys, because their ancestry is guaranteed to have been free of evil habits and social diseases."

Motive Power

"The interstitial glands control other glands. More than that, they supply motive power to the mind and body. Therefore, when they have become useless, their stimulant secretions cease to flow into the arteries and the moral effects of increasing age march on."

The doctor pointed out that the grafting of glands would not succeed in making time turn backwards and tured aged men into youths, nor would it restore fecundity.

"In the interstitial glands," he said, "there are two elements. One is for the life of the race; the other for the animation of the individual. By grafting interstitial glands, we merely revise and renew the energy of the individual."

"I am often asked whether I can make men live for ever by continuing the operations. This I do not know. When a patient becomes old, I can merely graft again."

The gland specialist declared that most people who consulted him were not seeking "rejuvenation because they wished to make physical appeal to the opposite sex," and that those who had lived well-rounded lives had no desire to regain their youth.

Absurd Dreams

"Such dreams are absurd," he said. "To think old people wish to regain their youth for mere physical joy which comes of being young is erroneous. Even those who have that wish are seldom actuated by desires that are generally ascribed to them. No more than five per cent of those who come to me to be operated on do so because they wish to make appeal to members of the opposite sex."

The actual operation of transferring the gland from the monkey to the human being is not an expensive one, according to the gland specialist. The chief cost, he said was the purchase of the animal from which the necessary gland was obtained.

Long Life Assured

"I do not know," he said in conclusion, whether grafting will enable us to prolong life beyond the limits assigned to man by nature, but I am certain that it will enable us to reach these limits. Every year, in every country, the death is recorded of people who have reached the age of 100 and over. Those of us who die earlier at 70 and 80, do so, not because we have exhausted all the normal possibilities of life, but because we have become old and feeble and unable to combat with the illness or illnesses which cause our death."

"Old age leads to death. By augmenting our vital energy when we begin to lose it, we increase our chances of life and acquire the possibilities of living at least the number of years of living at least the number of years to which a man has right. To be strong and vigorous is the secret of life; to be weak and feeble is the cause of death. The graft of a gland taken from a young monkey in perfect health infuses new energy into our bodies at the commencement of old age and will henceforth enable us to extend the possibilities of life to the extreme limit—120 or 140 years."

and enabled the demonstrator to make deep gashes in a piece of soft wood and cut fine strands of hemp as they hung limply in the air—and prior to meeting up with the wonder strop the blade wouldn't dent warm butter, according to the salesman, of course.

For a neighbor the razor strop vender had an old man who offered his public a choice in gayly colored capsules which tumbled about a plush covered tray in quite a mysterious manner. Only five cents a piece, including the bit of buckshot within the capsule which caused its gyrations about the tray.

The most vociferous of the band was a young man who had a large group about him under the "L" station at West Broadway who were mightily interested in the greatest bargain of all time, a wrist watch for two bits. This shameless gentleman was doing a big business, selling his wares right and left. But most of them to a couple of decoys, who turned over their quarters and smilingly walked away with their watches only to return in two or three minutes for another. Your observer noticed that one of the decoys bought at least five watches within fifteen minutes, but he got away with it in so far as the ever changing crowd was concerned, and his purchases had the desired effect in coaxing others to buy.

The wrist watch episode proved to be the last of the rather long line but mingling among the passersby were several cripples with beseeching eyes who offered philanthropists penny pencils for whatever you choose to give in return. One who described himself as a world war veteran, had one arm, another was without legs and pushed himself along the side walk on a little casted platform, and two others held forth cups and by means of placards announced to the world that they were blind.

Chambers street for many years has been a workable street for fakers, but never so much so, perhaps, as recently. Cortlandt, Liberty, Fulton, Dey and Vesey streets, all of them heavily patronized by New Jersey commuters, have their share of panhandlers, but they are far behind Chambers street in their quota of bargain promoters.

GUARD BABY'S HEALTH IN THE SUMMER

The summer months are the most dangerous to children. The complaints of that season which are cholera infantum, colic, diarrhoea and dysentery, come on so quickly that often a little one is beyond aid before the mother realizes he is ill. The mother must be on her guard to prevent these troubles, or if they do come on suddenly to banish them. No other medicine is of such aid to mothers during hot weather as Baby's Own Tablets. They regulate the stomach and bowels and are absolutely safe. Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

OFFICE BOYS LEARN GAME VERY FAST

(New York Sun)

The very new and pretty fresh office boy who had just started work hustled into the drug store and ordered a frosted chocolate.

"Put that in a carton to take out please, and don't fill it too full," he said when the drink was ready.

The soda jerker poured it in the carton and as he fitted the lid on the office boy looked into the mixer.

"I'll just have what's left in a glass," he said and helped himself to one.

"You've got your nerve," said the soda jerker.

Just a drink on the boss, that's all," laughed the office boy, and strolled out with his package.

Simile: As badly patched as the Queen Street Sidewalk.

Every day brings many thing that can be laughed off, provided we are not serious.

Evidently there is no sympathetic relationship between the low price of wheat and the high cost of bread.

One thing that would help this country through the semi-hard times period would be an endless chain of debt-paying.

A wisecracker is not necessarily a nut.

CHAMBER'S STREET GYP ZONE ALWAYS WELL PATRONIZED

(New York Sun)

More kind-hearted persons and more easy marks traverse Chambers street in the course of a day than any other short street in the city, if you credit the inevitable panhandler with any thing that borders upon intelligence.

The fakers who play the streets of New York are an alert clan, and they are as diligent in their search for suckers as P. T. Barnum ever was, or as are the night club operators and fight promoters. A lucrative field is not long the sole property of its discoverer, and judging by the number of sidewalk salesmen to be found on Chambers street and Broadway was a gentleman with a Woolworth store on wheels who offered at least fifty bargains at prices ranging all the way from five cents. Twenty feet west on the street of opportunity one could purchase for a nominal sum a piece of rubber which, when properly connected with sufficient air became an immense varicolored balloon—just the thing to take home to the kiddies.

On the otherside of the street, Old Man Opportunity himself was waving some marvelous bits of haberdashery which were labelled "ties that cannot be wrinkled, worn out or beaten for price, class and variety—Just twenty-five cents." Almost rubbing elbows with the tie salesman was another gentleman who made the eyes (of some) open with wonder at a toy gyroscope which any child can operate and which he operated on a fine string.

Back on the other side of the street a man who was badly in need of a shave displayed a razor strop which did wonders to some of the dullest razor blades you ever saw. A couple of well directed passes across the miracle of the age made the blade as sharp as the salesman displaying it.

Reduce the Acid

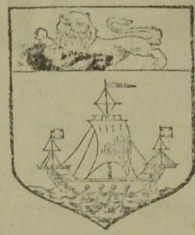

In sick stomachs—instantly

Sick stomachs, sour stomachs and indigestion usually mean excess acid. The stomach nerves are overstimulated. Too much acid makes the stomach and intestines sour.

Alkali kills acid instantly. The best form is Phillips' Milk of Magnesia, because one harmless, tasteless dose neutralizes many times its volume in acid. Since its invention, 50 years ago, it has remained the standard with physicians everywhere.

Take a spoonful in water and your unhappy condition will probably end in five minutes. Then you will always know what to do. Crude and harmful methods will never appeal to you. Go prove this for your own sake. It may save a great many disagreeable hours.

Be sure to get the genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia prescribed by physicians for 50 years in correcting excess acids. Each bottle contains full directions—any drugstore.
