BIG LEAGUE SCHEDULES END ON SEPT. 27

New York, Feb. 8—According to the big league schedules, the pennant races will end on Sunday, September 27, one day earlier than last fall. That should permit the beginning of the world series not later than the following Tuesday. But, nevertheless, the world series will be played after the college football season gets underway.

There are enough open dates in the schedules to warrant a wind-up a week earlier, on Sunday, September 20, when the International League pennant race will be concluded, although its schedule will comprise 168 games, fourteen more than are booked for the majors. That is proof that the big magnates are unwilling to wipe out games on the last Sabbath day in September so that the world series could be decided without a serious conflict with the gridiron.

Before the National League men adjourned yesterday, they re-elected Barney Dreyfuss, owner of the Pittsburgh Club vice-president. Dreyfuss, who was unable to attend the session, first became a National Leaguer when he became identified with the Louisville club in 1895. Five years later he purchased the Pirates and has headed them ever since.

SETTING THEM BACK—Speaking of sports, there is that impending clash between Max Schmeling and Young Stribling some time early this summer—And then a probable battle in Miami before the winter is over—Coach Ted Coffey of U. N. B. has a good hockey team, but it looks as if Mount A. had a better one—At least so it would appear on the first game—There is danger in that defensive strength of U. N. B. though—They say, the local Millionaire outfit are simply reacting from the strain of too many victories—And there is some logic in this—The Campbellton Tigers are one cocky lot now—Some of it deserving of course, because they beat one of the best teams in the province at the rink the other night—After all is said and done, the Millionaires are really missing Walter Ferguson from the defence.

Commenting on the recent flareup of overemphasis in college football in the United States colleges,—it happens in Canadian universities too—Grantland Rice remarks as follows:—“The two most needed reforms in college football have been the elimination or the reduction of all athletic scholarships and above all the standardization of entrance requirements and college work. There are still any number of institutions where it is possible to enter college with only a few units and where no high stand-

MANITOBA GRADS WON THE HOCKEY TITLE FOR CANADA

Krynica, Poland, Feb. 8—The University of Manitoba Grads today gave Canada the championship in the international amateur hockey tournament, played here, defeating the Boston Hockey Club, representing the United States, two goals to none, in the final round of the Round-Robin series.

The finalists put on a thrilling match entirely different from those between European teams which too often are inclined to adopt defensive tactics. Here fine aggressive play was seen with both teams attacking at every opportunity.

ENGLISHMEN'S KEENEST INTEREST NOT IN POLITICS

London, Feb. 6—Frying “hot dogs” has been added to Winston Churchill's accomplishments.

Previously he had scored as bricklayer, newspapermen and hat expert—in addition to his claims to fame as soldier and statesmen.

His boast that he had fried a sausage drew much repartee from fellow members of Parliament and called attention again to David Lloyd George's penchant for giving free movie shows of the American wild west type.

From this revelation of talents came these other facts:

Fred Montagu, under-secretary for air in the British cabinet, is a clever conjurer and has refused offers to go on the stage and pull rabbits out of hats.

Robert W. Smith, conservative member from Aberdeen, likes to design clothes and once draped a stunning evening gown for a niece whose dress had been delayed in arriving from London.

William Graham, president of the British Board of Trade, has been known to stand in the house and quote reams of statistics from memory, but his hobby in that connection is football records.

J. S. Clarke, socialist from Maryhill, used to be an animal trainer in a circus and still likes to visit snakes and lions in their dens.

Arthur Shepherd, socialist from Darlington, likes to pal around with tramps and is reputed to know most of England's regular hoboes by their monickers.

MEGAN LLOYD GEORGE HATES TO DRIVE AUTO

London, Eng., Feb. 6—Miss Megan Lloyd George has proved her femininity in showing that she is old-fashioned, while at the same time being entirely modern.

A member of Parliament, daughter and crony of the great Lloyd George himself, keen, a corking good lawyer, an accomplished sportswoman, and all that and active in religious work, too, she hates, loathes, detests and despises and also dislikes to drive an automobile. She can, but she hates to.

“It is a man's work,” she says, “to drive a car. There is infinitely more pleasure in sitting in the back seat than there is in expending nervous energy on the steering wheel. Of course, I can understand how some women find in occasional motoring alone their only recreation, but as for me I would much rather let the family chauffeur handle the car.”

The Lloyd George family cling to their own pre-war big boat that resembles a battleship on wheels. Miss Megan is very proud of the old hack and says that a good reliable family car improves with the years. Furthermore, among the best people of Britain it is badge of distinction to possess a bus at least 15 years old.

DID DRINK, BUT TAPERED OFF

Atlanta, Feb. 7—A recent visitor to the North Carolina mountain district came to the Georgia Legislature to testify at a committee hearing and brought him this story.

A temperance lecturer was speaking to a fairly large audience and remarked he had learned that Capt. Boney Ridley, 89, was present after walking 11 miles to attend.

He was sure Capt. Ridley was “a teetotaler,” he said, and asked for a testimonial.

PLAN OF BRAZIL'S ECONOMIC REORGANIZATION

Rio De Janeiro, Feb. 7—A program for the most thorough and far-reaching economic reorganization in the history of Brazil was outlined to the United Press by President Getulio Vargas, who came into power with the successful revolution of 1930.

Dr. Vargas related the plans of the Government for certain changes in the banking system under Governmental supervision, stabilization of the milreis, development of national industries and gradual solution of the vital problem of overproduction of coffee, which represents 70 per cent of the national exports.

“The greatest problem lies in the financial situation, which is truly unsettled,” said the president. “The public coffers were exhausted when the revolutionary government took office.”

“We do not intend to reorganize the banking system, but we intend to reform the Bank of Brazil. We will make it a bank of issue and rediscount. Our principal credit establishment will cease to compete with other banks and its aim will be to establish equilibrium among banks and support the national economic system, similar to the Federal Reserve System of the United States.”

“Brazil can improve situations only in two ways; Either by increasing exportation, which would bring gold into the country or by curtailing imports. It would be impossible at present to increase exportation, due to overproduction of coffee.”

“The Government will examine and annul the large contracts injurious to the country. Among these being studied is the ‘Baixada Fluminense’ contract for reclaiming large low land tracks in the state of Rio de Janeiro, and also that for collection of taxes from cable companies, which the Government formerly failed to do.

“I also expect to unify all national navigation and freight companies under a single directory to cheapen rates.

“Another measure will promote use of an alcohol motor to cut use of gasoline; another will be for exploitation of coal and still another for use of mandioca wheat bread—a method which still required study—to reduce the imports of wheat.

“We are studying plants for substitution of cotton sacks for the jute brought from India for coffee bags, and the Government also will seek a new orientation in choosing diplomatic agents abroad along more business-like lines.

“We cannot maintain an erroneous system of retaining coffee in an effort to valorize it—a system which produced fatal consequences. We must restore liberty of commerce to growers.

“We are facing the situation fearlessly and the Federal Government is co-operating with the State Government to acquire the existing stock of coffee, which will be placed on markets other than those regularly used. By means of advertising and commercial treaties we hope to place this stock on new markets.

“The people have acquired confidence and the situation is improving slowly but firmly.”
