

ROOKIE BRINGS 'SLIDE BALL' TO BIG LEAGUES

Winter Haven, Florida, March 21—Stewart Bolen, left hander, drafted by the Phillies from Baltimore, is bringing something new to the majors—a "slide" ball.

He says it neither breaks like a curve, drops like a knuckler or hops like a fork, just takes a sudden sidewise slide when it reaches the batter.

"Even the umpires miss that one the first time they work behind me," Bolen said.

Manager Shotton thinks the "slide" has possibilities.

SCHOOLBOY ERRORS

London schoolboys are responsible for the following answers to recent test questions:

"A passive verb," said one student, "is when the subject is the sufferer and the object the doer, as He is married to her."

"White is a color that stands for joy; women are married in white, but men never are," another wrote.

Other observations:

"Curtail—the end of a mongrel."

"A bankrupt is a man who broke the bank through gambling and taxes."

"A toadstool is a thing that looks like a mushroom. Then if you eat it you die and you know it is not a mushroom."

"Venus was a goddess who used to cure colds with lightning."

WARNS GIRLS TO MAKE THEIR LIVES RICHER

Topeka, Kan., March 20—Miss Margaret Slattery, the internationally known writer and lecturer, and long known as the exponent of the old New England ideals, has been making a profound impression here with high school girls and business young women with her lectures.

For Rich Life

"It is not enough to make a living," she told one large group. "You must also make a life. That means a mind fit to conceive it and a spirit great enough to appreciate the power of that life. I am proud of women, of what they have done and what they will do. We are going to do bigger things by having confidence in one another and by realizing that women are capable of as big things as men are."

"Making a rich life depends largely on the things on which it is based. If one chooses solid substantial things, the life most surely will be rich. But if strange substitutes are used, including the thrills that don't continue to thrill, instead of lasting values, the life is apt to be empty."

"The food of foolishness, frivolity and sordidness which is being pressed on young people everywhere in literature, so called, a type of movies and amusements, must be crushed out."

"If you want the fine things of life you must cultivate them. If you go in for cheapness and commonness you can not get any joy out of refinement and delicacy. You have what you make. You can have a living or you can have a living and a life."

"It is up to the individual."

FLOWERS ARE JEWELS

As spring approaches, the vogue of flower jewelry increases, particularly for evening wear. Necklaces and bracelets of enameled flowers or posies done in jewels go beautifully with many of the flower shades in spring fabrics. Coral is still high in favor, too, and its various shades blend well with several of the spring rose tints and contrast beautifully with dull blues and greens.

FISTIC ENCOUNTER STAGED IN LOBBY OF N. S. HOUSE

Halifax, N. S., March 21—Turbulentment to task for considering the ap- scenes, unparalleled in the history of Nova Scotia's Legislature, featur- ed yesterday afternoon's sitting of the House. But the most hectic pro- ceedings were not confined to the House of Assembly Chamber. The real battle occurred in the lobby adjacent to the main door of the House, where A. S. MacMillan, leader of the Opposition, and R. H. Butts, Conservative M. L. A. for Cape Breton East, met in a brief but none the less exciting fistic encounter. Blows were exchanged before cooler heads, including Premier Harrington and Attorney-General Hall stepped between the belligerent members and further hostilities were carried on orally.

The MacMillan-Butts encounter followed a rather stormy debate in the House earlier in the afternoon and the two members clashed in the lobby just after the House had adjourned for the dinner recess. During the budget debate, Mr. Butts, who is one of the few colorful figures of the present House, and a veteran parliamentarian of some years experience in both the Federal and Provincial Parliaments, was directing some rather vigorous and outspoken criticism of the Liberal Opposition.

On the previous day Mr. MacMillan had seen fit to read to the House some correspondence forwarded to the Government by Rev. H. R. Grant, veteran leader of the dry forces in Nova Scotia, protesting against the issue of a permit for the establishment of a distillery at Berwick. This correspondence dealt mainly with the activities of one Richard Steppanski, who is the head of the new distillery and alleged that Steppanski had operated somewhat similar plants in New Jersey and these places had been padlocked by the federal authorities in the United States. Mr. MacMillan said that Dr. Grant had referred to Steppanski as a "jail-bird", and the leader of the Opposition took the Govern-

Blows Are Struck

When the sitting concluded and Mr. MacMillan was leaving the Chamber shortly after six o'clock, he met Mr. Butts near the main door. Mr. Butts walked over and was about to extend his hand to the Liberal leader. The latter, apparently in anger, hurled an epithet at Butts and called the latter a "coward." Butts then struck MacMillan across the face and the Liberal leader returned with a slap at Butts, knocking a cigar from the latter's mouth.

Premier Harrington, who was in the group of members chatting in the lobby, rushed to separate the combatants and then Attorney-General Hall, who is an old rugby star, rather husky in build, stepped between MacMillan and Butts. The fistic encounter was at an end, but the now greatly aroused combatants proceeded to hurl verbal brickbats at one another unrestrained by any rules of parliamentary debate.

For some 15 minutes the lobbies were seething with excitement. Most of the members had left the House, but there were some half dozen or so, as well as one or two members of the press gallery, and a few attendants on hand to witness this unusual occurrence.

In the evening, when the House resumed, Mr. MacMillan, speaking on a question of privilege, said he had never travelled with Miller and had not seen that gentleman for eleven months.

Mr. Butts replied himself, adding that he would later have something to say regarding Miller and Mr. MacMillan.

BIG INCREASE IN SALES TAX IS EXPECTED

Montreal, Quebec, March 20—The Montreal Gazette today publishes the following despatch from its Ottawa correspondent:

"Abandonment of the proposal to ask Parliament to approve of the imposition of a turnover tax of two per cent., it is understood, has been decided upon by the Government. For some time this suggestion was receiving careful consideration, but it has been decided that it would be unwise at the present stage to abolish completely the sales tax, and while it still remained it would be impracticable to introduce another tax of a similar nature so that the turnover tax is now regarded as an impossibility."

"There is expected to be, though a considerable increase in the sales tax, possibly to four per cent. This is one of the most profitable sources of revenue and it is estimated that a four per cent. rate would produce from $70,000,000 to $80,000,000 given anything approaching normal business conditions."

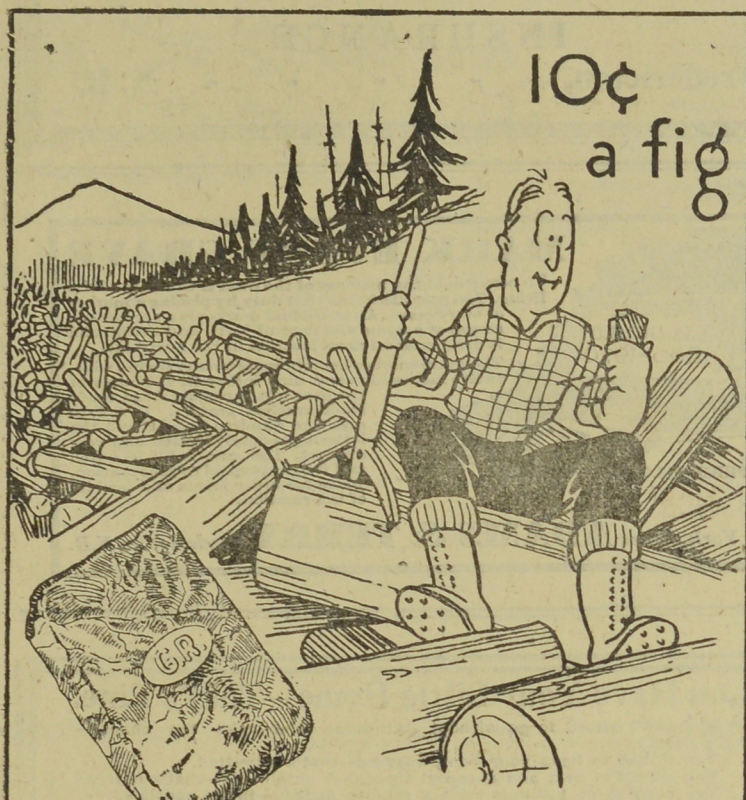

Mrs. Nipp—"The X-ray is a wonderful invention, isn't it?"

Mrs. Tuck—"Oh, it don't know. It doesn't take one of them to make me see through some people."
