ARE WE WORK-SHY?

Have we come to a sorry plight because of our love for pleasure? The Roman Catholic bishop of Southwark, England, in a thoughtful letter says:

"A short time ago a leading journal printed an article calling for economy on account of the enormous and increasing public expenditure. In private life there are social entertainments and sports in various forms far beyond what is actually necessary. The tendency in every class is to spend much more than we can well afford.

"How different would be the present situation if many of us were not seeking after pleasure, and suffering from a disinclination to work.

"Masters, with their prolonged week-ends of amusement, cannot be surprised at the workmen who ask for shorter hours. Both masters and men are work-shy, and with less production the competition with other countries becomes more difficult."

THE BABBITTS

News writers take interest in the discovery by Sinclair Lewis, American novelist, that there are "Babbitts" in England. Granted that Babbitt is the average middle class business man, on the treadmill of life and yet thinking he is going somewhere, there are Babbitts not only in England but in every town and city in the world. Babbitts get a little thrill out of life now and then; they have a sudden enthusiasm; they have hopes and fears, aspirations and depressions. They wonder what life is all about—die without knowing. The average man, Mr. Babbitt, is not confined to this Continent.

Today is the birthday of Her Gracious Majesty Queen Mary of England and congratulations and good wishes will go out to her from all over the British Empire. Her Majesty became the wife of King George in 1893, and their family consists of one daughter and four sons. Her Majesty has proved herself a wonderful wife, mother and queen and by her gracious personality and practical interest in all good work has endeared herself to the people of the far flung empire ruled over by her royal husband.

Be glad if your time is taken up by "the sum of little things." Life at its happiest is made up of a long list of obligations, responsibilities, simply cheerfully, faithfully discharged. If your time is mostly given up to such as these you are living life to the full. That is success.

So many nurses are going graduated, a hospital report that the supply far exceeds the demand. Again it is the fault of under consumption. The nurses' patients do not marry them fast enough.

The Boy Scout of the family, an expert on knots, tells me that the marriage of Frank Woody and Helen Twelvethrees should be called a timber-hitch.

Dog catcher in New Jersey is to have suit of armor—not for protection against dogs, but rather their owners. Charges of rock salt sting like blue blazes, you know.

Now that it has been officially determined that women can drive motor cars as skillfully as men, about the only point of superiority left to the male sex is ability to light a match.

"I want an oyster stew," announced the grim diner, yesterday, to Tessie, the beautiful waitress. "I know its May, but then your oyster stews are soft at any season."

If Russia's agricultural plans are realized the Soviet Republics may raise enough food to satisfy the appetites of their own people.

Some day some students may go on strike because their teachers don't teach them enough. When that occurs the millennium will be very near.

When we have robots to do all our work there will be no unemployment problem, because everybody will be unemployed.

Any young graduate who is anxious to take over complete management of the world, such as it is, should be encouraged in the plan.

Golf expert advises players to visualize where ball is to land. Speaking form limited experience, it will save time to hunt for it elsewhere.

Ours was the sort of town back home, where it was effeminate to be seen on one's sister's bike, even while learning.

At times it almost seems as if the Cincinnati Reds would have to call the fire Department to get the other team out.

"England cared nothing about me 17 years ago," says Mr. Chaplin. Charlie begins to sound as if he came over in the Mayflower.

Scots are campaigning for tourists. And their slogan, we understand is: "Pass the word along."

A measure of a man is the importance of the thing he is willing to fight about.

A dictator is a wife who would rather keep her husband straight than happy.

THROUGH OUR SIEVE

Keeping step with progress is good physical and mental exercise.

A newspaper is one institution, rightly managed, that grows young with age.

Getting up in the morning is the task that makes us feel overworked.

It's pretty good philosophy to be yourself, even when disgusted with yourself.

Slight variation of familiar theme: It isn't raining rain—it's raining dandelions.

Lima Beane thinks the man who never made a fool of himself has missed something out of life.

Our sympathy to New England. Quoting the Boston Transcript—"only now and then do we get a breath of true spring."

It will have to be admitted that it takes a genius to invent a character as dumb as Andrew H. Brown, of Amos 'n' Andy.

Viewpoint is everything. Men who want employment and can't find it would consider being run down from overwork a blessing.

Square dinner plates, said to be coming in vogue, will be harder for fault-finding husbands to take on the chin.

Sm Hill says there isn't a husband alive that would rather see a smile than powder and rouge on his wife's face. But Sam, the other decorations leave room for the smile.

Caught Big Ones

A party composed of Jack Whalen, James Fowler, Jack Gregory and Fred Ketch spent the holiday whipping the waters of the Pokioik stream with Christopher Murray, of Dumfries as guide. They caught a number of nice trout, two of which tipped the scales at three pounds and another weighed two and a half pounds. The Pokioik is noted for its mammoth trout and it is safe to say that this Fredericton quartette were the high line fishermen of Victoria Day for this section.

Had Good Sport

There has been a good run of salmon at the Hart's Island pool this week and anglers have been having some fine sport. J. M. O'Halloran, R. H. Wheeler and Donald Ferguson are among the lucky ones, each having landed a ten pounder.
