A CONSERVATIVE VICTORY

The provincial elections in the Province of Prince Edward Island yesterday resulted in a decisive victory for the Conservatives led by ex-Premier J. D. Stewart. At last accounts they were practically sure of nineteen seats out of a total of thirty. This is a majority of eight which is sufficient for all practical purposes. In the House just dissolved the government of Hon. Walter M. Lea held twenty-two seats, the Conservative six and two seats were vacant.

The Liberals of the Island under the leadership of Hon. A. C. Saunders won a decisive victory in 1927 on a dry platform, the Conservatives having advocated government control. Soon after Premier Saunders retired to the Supreme Court bench and was succeeded by Hon. Mr. Lea, who held the portfolio of Agriculture.

While prohibition was not an issue in the campaign which closed yesterday it was charged against the administration that it had failed to enforce the prohibitory law. This charge was well founded. The Island is too close to the rum running islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon and no government whether it be Liberal or Conservative, can do the impossible. The outcome was that the people of the Island got all the liquor they needed at a low price and the revenue of the country was defrauded to that extent.

The campaign which has ended so disastrously for the Liberals has been a strenuous one. Public meetings were held nightly and the various issues were threshed out on the public platform. Both leaders pledged themselves to introduce an old age pension bill based on recent legislation enacted at Ottawa under which the Federal Government is to pay 75 per cent of the cost.

While Dominion issues did not enter into the contest, the Beauharnois scandal was made to do duty by the Conservative and no doubt won them many votes.

Yesterday furnished the first opportunity which any province has had to express its views through the ballot box since the Bennett Government took office a little more than a year ago. It is but natural therefore that Premier Bennett and his colleagues should regard the verdict as an endorsement of their policy.

As a result of yesterday's election Quebec is now the only province in the Dominion which remains in the Liberal column. On the 24th the electors of that province will go to the polls, and it is believed that the Conservatives under Camille Houde have more than a fighting chance to win.

DRUDGERY

What housewife, on a hot summer day, has not remarked that she wishes she could live where there are no dishes to wash? What worker has not lamented the grind of daily facing the same desk or bench? The attitudes we carry to our tasks spell the difference between finding the routine dull drudgery or interesting activity. We make it one or the other. We should remember that any toil that serves a human need is important. Thoreau, living alone in his cabin at Walden pond, did not lik with contempt upon his household duties. He gave a glory to these lowly concerns because they were essential. He wrote in his journal: "In heaven I hope to bake my own bread and clean my own linen." He searched for satisfactory living. It is important to note that he did not try to dodge routine.

Hon. Edward Matthew Farrell, Liberal senator from Queens County Nova Scotia, passed away in a hospital at Ottawa yesterday, following a brief illness. He was a son of the late Patrick Farrell, a native of Newcastle, N. B., but was born at Liverpool and resided there all his life. He served as High Sheriff of Queens County for a number of years and was in 1896 was elected to the Nova Scotia Legislature, eventually becoming ing Speaker of that body. He long enjoyed the personal friendship of the late Hon. W. S. Fielding, the federal representative of his constituency and their friendship resulted in his elevation to the senate in 1910.

How pleasant it is to sit on the porch of an evening, watching the sunset display of clouds the gathering of darkness over the grassy commons and the housetops, the new moon sliding down the slope of heaven, the pale stars brightening minute by minute—and hear the busy little mosquito going about its task and singing as it works.

One of those very positive, determined dames, who recently addressed the Business and Professional Women's Club, of New York, told the members that woman's mind is now superior to man's but in the mind of a woman of that sort it always has been.

A Chicago man ran his car into a train at the crossing running a lot of perfectly good railroad equipment and turning the tables on the old theory that it couldn't be done. We would advise that chap, however, to be content to rest on his laurels.

It has become quite the thing for radio announcers to refer to a new selection on the programme as an "illustration of the higher type of jazz," but so far as we have been able to observe it is always the same old lower case stuff.

That woman who wants a divorce because her husband beat her when she creased his pants up the sides ought to keep on the lookout for a sailor for her next venture.

The man who is continually telling what he would do if he was in some other man's shoes is generally barefooted himself when it comes to doing things.

We have an idea that China would be all right if it were not for Russia, but then, there are many other things that would be all right too, if it were not for Russia.

Evidently a war isn't over until you finish saving the country you finish licking.

THROUGH OUR SIEVE

 Circus day is here again.

There is nothing slow about Fredericton, it has one house with eight kitchens and a hotel with four.

It is to be hoped that the new law against nude parades will not be strictly enforced on our bathing beaches.

The motorist who persists in stepping on the gas and speeding will sooner or later bring up in the hospital.

The free tourist camping ground is certainly getting a good share of business these days.

Not for some days has the city police been observed in the act of arresting a dog.

We have been having some hot weather, but then wood is going to be cheap next winter.

Times have not yet become so hard that public officials find it necessary to forego a vacation.

Lord Reading at the age of seventy years who has taken a wife thirty-three years his junior, is a man of courage.

Some of the hotels are complaining of a falling off in tourist trade. They should break away from pre-war prices and give the overnight camps some competition.

Saint John is exacting a tax of twenty bucks from non-resident workmen. How are jobless going to raise the necessary capital in order to get on the payroll.

Members of the government are getting better acquainted with Fredericton. When they assemble here now for a meeting they stay over night and all next day.

ARSON IN SOME CASES IS LEGAL

London, Aug. 6.—His Majesty's Privy Council, with Lord Blanesburgh presiding, has just given judgment that Chief Tshhekidi Khama of Bechuanaland could burn down the houses of his subjects, John and Simon Ratshosha.

Chief Tshhekidi Khama has already burned down John and Simon Ratshosha's houses, but now the highest royal court has relieved a painful situation by asserting that according to the laws and customs of the Bamanwato tribe, he was justified in doing so.

Chief Tshhekidi Khama's two naughty subjects were summoned in April 1928, it was brought out in the hearing before the Privy Council, to attend a tribal conference. They did not obey, however, and went to a wedding instead. Thinking better of their temerity, they did come to the conference, very late.

Upon arrival, the Privy Council learned, John and Simon were perceived by Chief Tshhekidi Khama, who thereat ordered them to lie down on the ground and be beaten. John obeyed under major force, but Simon and other brothers of the family of Ratshosha fled. They also fired on Chief Tshhekidi Khama with rifles.

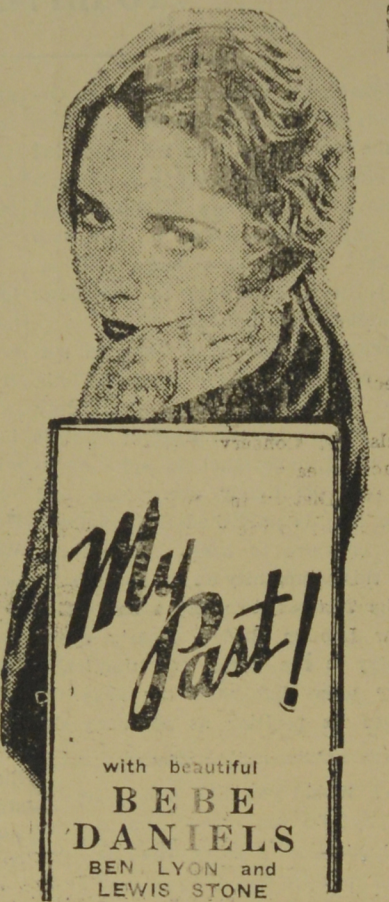

The chief thereupon sentenced them to ten years imprisonment, but when the sentence was appealed reduced it to four years for attempted murder. At the same time, Chief Tshhekidi Khama ordered their houses to be burned down, which was done.

Followed various appeals and counter-appeals, until now, when His Majesty's Privy Council took cognizance of the state of affairs in Bechuanaland and acted accordingly.

What is the multitude doing this summer that was standing in line last year to put a gold ball through a stove pipe?
