AN ANNUAL OFFERING

The New Brunswick Union of Municipalities at its recent convention adopted a resolution urging an amendment to the Intoxicating Liquor Act to allow Municipalities to tax the stocks and property of liquor stores. This is a sort of annual offering by the Union, but it does not seem to be making much headway. In the old days when New Brunswick had a liquor license law the Government collected part of the license fees paid by wholesale and retail dealers, and although liquor was sold in only a few of the counties the money derived from licenses went into the general revenue. The same plan is being followed with respect to the profits of Government liquor stores operated by the Liquor Control Board. There are stores located in all except three of the fifteen counties, but it may be taken for granted that the people of all counties contribute to the revenue derived from the sale of liquor. As the government collects the revenue and expends the money in the interests of the province as a whole there does not seem to be any real cause for complaint.

NO AGE LIMIT

A certain state health commissioner in the U. S. once made the assertion that people a hundred years old are of little interest to anybody except a statistician in a life insurance company. This was a thoughtless remark. There is no age limit of usefulness. People who may apparently be doing little of the world's work, because they are elderly, may provide more happiness for those around them than anybody else. It was said by a poet who spoke truly that nobody is without value so long as he has a friend. There are values too great to be measured by mere work or performance. It may be that the value of being what you are, whether you are 50 or 100, is the greatest worth of all.

We read that a city in Texas is providing accommodation for a million bats which will be turned loose to rid it of mosquitoes. There's some fun ahead when they begin to pick 'em off silk stockings.

"A specialist," says Dr. William J. Mayo, "is one who knows more and more about less and less." This, it strikes us, is quite unethical. The doctor shouldn't give away the secrets of the profession in that offhand manner.

"Colorful styles," says a clothes designer, "would restore national optimism." Except in cases, of course, where one gets down to the colorful styles which one wore eight or ten years ago.

The base ball season will shortly come to a close, at which time the condensed box-score compiler may turn his thoughts to Blagovestchenski, and other whistle stops on the Siberian air line.

"Within 60 years," says Dr. Edward Aylsworth Ross, "the world will have billions more people than it can feed." Well, at least it won't have them very long.

It seems hardly likely, to us at least, that tree surgery will assume any great commercial importance until trees develop something like tonsils.

Moreover, Mr. Gandhi's costume will be just dandy for identification purposes if he becomes lost in one of those London fogs.

Somewhat redundantly, a Chicago judge tried a man for walking about the streets without pants, and sentenced him to 30 days in the cooler.

The old-fashioned girls who used to go in for frills are now coming out strongly for thrills.

"Movie stars," says the Florida Times Union, "can't be expected to marry every Tom, Dick and Harry that comes along." of course not. At least all applicants should be content to fall in line.

Died This Morning

Lena M. Fletcher, aged 19, wife of Clifford O. Fletcher, passed away at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John M. Charters, New Maryland, following an illness of three months. Deceased leaves besides her husband and parents, one daughter, Barbara D.; four brothers, Charles, John, James, Preston, all of New Maryland; three sisters, Mrs. Arthur Stewart, Cole's Island and Misses Edie and Grace at home. Deceased was popular with a large number and her death will be learned with sincere regret and the sympathy of many friends of the deceased and family. The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon from the late home in New Maryland with prayers at 1.30 o'clock and service at the Baptist church at Nasonworth at 2 P. M., conducted by Rev. Mr. Corey. Interment will be made in the cemetery at Nasonworth.

Tennis Tourney

E. Lohnes, ranking player of the local tennis club, defeated young George Johnston in the semi-finals of the Men's Singles on Saturday at the Fredericton tennis courts, the scores being 8-10, 6-3 and 7-5. The match was watched by a large gallery. Johnston took the first set after some strenuous fighting, displaying a fine style and deadly forehand drive for placement. Lohnes came back strong winning the second set on errors of Johnston, and captured the third after both players had displayed some wonderful court work, and looked like victors. Lohnes was the steadier of the two, and refused to be beaten, in the final set, when he trailed Johnston 1-3. Lohnes's terrific forehand and minimum of misplays in this third set, accounted for his victory over his younger opponent. Lohnes will meet Bartlett in the finals.

Improved Today

Improvement is shown in the condition of Frank J. Dow, linotype operator at the Daily Gleaner, who received injuries on Saturday at noon when struck by the rack of a motor truck at the intersection of Regent and King Streets. Mr. Dow was on his way to dinner, when the accident occurred. He was thrown against an elm tree on the side of the street. He received some nasty cuts and bruises about the head and face, but it was later ascertained that no bones had been broken.

Able Sermon

Rev. E. R. MacWilliam, pastor of the United Baptist church at Marysville, preached an impressive sermon at the George Street Baptist church last evening. A large congregation attended.

THERE'S A BIG SURPRISE COMING TO BARNACLES

Cleveland, Ohio, August 31—Barnacles have the sense of smell and because they have, shipowners may be able to save $100,000,000 a year, according to Dr. J. Paul Visscher, head of the department of biology of Western Reserve University.

"I have discovered," the biologist said, "that some perfumes repel barnacles. As the little crustaceans cling to the bottoms of ships to grow a shell and cause no end of trouble, perhaps my discovery will be an aid to science."

"Certain chemicals mixed with the paints used on ship bottoms would rid the ships of barnacles, and the barnacles of their bad habit. Science must find the correct mixture of chemicals."

Accident in Harvey

Provincial Police Sr. Constable Bird investigated an accident an accident case which occurred near Harvey last evening in which the truck owned and driven by Benny Budovitch, was badly damaged by a Quebec car. The driver of the Quebec machine, a man by the name of Webb, was deemed at fault, but a settlement was made between the two parties. No one was injured in the crash, and the exact nature of the accident is not

Population Increased

Late census returns given out recently at Ottawa show the population of Fredericton to be 8,828, against 8,114 in 1921, an increase of 714. The population of Saint John shows a small decrease.

STEEL BALLS MAKE SNAKE EASY PREY

Jacksonville, Fla., Aug. 31—Inability of a snake to tell the difference between pigeon eggs and steel balls cost him his life. James Dietz discovered a snake was stealing eggs from his pigeon loft, and substituted ball bearings for the eggs. Entering the loft one day, he found the snake so heavily laden with the balls that it fell an easy victim.
