THE NASHWAAK OBSTRUCTION

Premier Richards, who as Minister of Lands and Mines, did much to develop salmon angling in this province not only as a medium of sport, but as a revenue producer, paid a visit to Marysville yesterday and witnessed the futile efforts of scores of salmon to negotiate the quick water, which flows through the gateway of the dam across the Nashwaak River at that place. He is convinced that something must be done to enable the fish to overcome the obstruction and reach the spawning grounds. The premier is leaving for Ottawa today and will bring the matter to the notice of Hon. E. N. Rhodes, Minister of Fisheries, and supply him with first hand information. The Premier is convinced that the Nashwaak can be made a first class angling stream and a great asset to Fredericton and will do all in his power to bring this about.

PREPARATION

What can be done in the way of educating adults for better places in life is shown by the report of one of the "Continuation" schools in New York. Closing exercises recently showed that 1,100 of the city's unemployed had been receiving vocational training in fourteen commercial subjects. Two hundred pupils were graduated; 150 were given jobs.

During times when work is slack every young man and woman who can possibly do so should take advantage of idle hours to train the mind for better times and better jobs later. It is an increasingly competitive world and the race will be won by the well prepared.

ORGANIZATIONS

It's all right to belong to an organization that stands for some things you believe in or promotes some things you like to do, but don't let any association do your thinking for you. If you aren't big enough to keep your head up and your chest out and think over and above the organization to which you belong you don't deserve anything better than to trudge along with the rest.

W. H. Covert, K. C., a prominent lawyer of Halifax has been appointed Lieutenant Governor of Nova Scotia, in succession to the late Hon. Frank Stanfield. The new Governor is a native of Musquash, N. B., and a son of an Anglican clergyman. The late Hon. D. L. Hanington, prominent in the New Brunswick Legislature for many years, and afterwards a judge, was his uncle. Since Confederation New Brunswick has had two Lieutenant Governors, who were born in Nova Scotia—Hon. E. B. Chandler, born at Amherst, and Hon. W. B. Snowball, a native of Lunenburg.

The sudden death of Senator Dwight W. Morrow of New Jersey removes an outstanding figure from American public life. For some years he served as American Ambassador to Mexico and on giving up this more than a year ago he was, after a spectacular campaign, in which he made the repeal of the Volstead Act an issue, elected to the senate by a large majority. The marriage of his daughter to Col. C. A. Lindbergh, gave him additional fame and he had been mentioned as a possible presidential candidate for 1932.

A number of Canadian brokerage houses have been hard hit by the recent slump in international securities. Yesterday Greenshields & Company and MacDougall & Cowans, of Montreal, filed petitions in bankruptcy. No statement of their affairs have been given out, but it is believed that the banks are the largest creditors and hold stocks as collateral.

The death at Vancouver, B.C., yesterday of His Grace Archbishop Casey, will be deeply regretted by many old friends in New Brunswick, particularly in this city where he was pastor of St. Dunstan's Roman Catholic church for several years. The late Archbishop was a native of Charlotte County and had been many years in holy orders. He enjoyed the esteem not only of his own denomination, but of Protestants as well. His death removed a distinguished son of New Brunswick and is a distinct loss to the Roman Catholic Church.

The recent failure of three prominent brokerage firms, two in Montreal and one in Saint John has called attention to the seriousness of the economic situation. So far as can be learned the customers of the concerns, now in difficulties, will not lose to any great extent.

Charlie Paddock, long known as the "fastest human", has become the father of a son, and it remains to be seen whether he can break the record getting around the table when it falls out of the high chair.

A Swiss artist has written 18,000 words on a common post card. Since the feat apparently was not performed while crossing the Channel on water skis or shooting the Falls in a barrel, we are unimpressed.

Maurice Chevalier's assertion that there is a man for every girl and a girl for every man will hardly fit well with the unmarried ladies for they have never been known to practice such economy.

Nothing learned from a book is worth anything unless it is used and verified in life, says Will Durant. In the case of a bride with a cook book, verification is a mild expression for hubby's interior feelings.

A refreshing note, among Hollywood's affectations, in the comedian who will furnish one room in his new home with an iron bed and cheap wallpaper, where he can be "self-unconscious."

It is assumed that when Mr. Pope, a fair thinker in his day and age, remarked "A little learning is a dangerous thing," the subject uppermost on his mind was economics.

THROUGH OUR SIEVE

When one is insulted, he is never prepared.

Nature doesn't care for individuals. But she gets results in the large.

Dora thinks the end of the world will be frightfully unromantic if it comes on some nice girl's wedding day.

Were Gandhi given to signing on the dotted line you'd wonder where he carried his fountain pen.

Could it be possible that present troubles were caused by scientific, though futile, efforts to split the atom?

There is always pity for the orphan but nothing for the unfortunate married couples who are without children to tell them how to conduct themselves and manage life's complications.

Darwin might not have been right, but he has a lot of supporters in the present day big game hunters, who are asserting in their own way that man does bear considerable resemblance to the animals. The only variance is that Darwin picked the monkey, the big game hunters pick the deer.

GRAND TRUNK RAILWAY WAS OPENED IN 1856

It is not generally known that October 27, 1931, is an outstanding date in Canadian railway history. It was on this day in 1856—75 years ago—that the main line of the Grand Trunk Railway, now a part of the Canadian National System, was officially opened for operation between Montreal and Toronto, and the first through trains operated between the two cities. The main line was opened in divisions, on the following dates: between Montreal and Brockville, November 9, 1855; Brockville to Belleville, October 27, 1856; and Toronto to Belleville, August 11, 1856. F. E. D. McDowell, writing in the "Canadian National Railways Magazine" reproduces the first Grand Trunk advertisement of train service over the main line, which states that the trains will "run on Montreal time, which is 8 1-2 minutes faster than Brockville time; 12 minutes faster than Kingston; 14 1-2 than Belleville; and 23 faster than Toronto time." He speculates upon how many people missed their trains as a result of this peculiar operation timetable mix-up, and points out that in those days it required 14 hours to make the trip, while today "The International Limited" makes the run in exactly six hours.

The railways have become so much a part of our modern life that they appear to be very old, to have always been a part and parcel of our general scheme of things. It is therefore, surprising to recall that only a year, or two, ago there was living a centenarian who saw the first train operated in Canada—that was in 1836—and that today is a man who lives in Napanee who saw the train pass that opened the main line of the Grand Trunk between Montreal and Toronto—that was on October 27, 1856. Extra Pringle is still hale and hearty at the age of 81 years and his remembrances of this event and of his hauling wood for the pioneer engines of the line, are as vivid as if they happened but yesterday. He recalls these events of three-quarters of a century ago in the "Canadian National Railways Magazine" for October issue.
