GREAT BRITAIN IS DRAFTING ANOTHER NOTE TO THE U.S. ON QUESTION OF WAR DEBTS

London, Nov. 27—Drafting of the new British war debt note to Washington was begun tonight at a special meeting of Cabinet members with Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, Rt. Hon. Neville Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir John Simon, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, and Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin participated in the conference. A full meeting of the Cabinet probably will be held tomorrow morning to discuss the note.

The document may be dispatched tomorrow afternoon or Tuesday. The new memorandum is expected to set forth the British financial position in detail and to indicate reasons why the mid-December British war debt installment of $95,500,000 should be postponed.

Tonight's conference of the Cabinet members lasted about three hours. It was explained afterwards that no Cabinet session had been called definitely for tomorrow, but a meeting was expected to develop during the day. Otherwise the Cabinet would meet in regular session Wednesday.

The pound sterling showed some appreciation Saturday, closing at $3.22 1/4. Friday is registered a low of only a fraction above $2.20.

Await Next Move

Washington, Nov. 27—European optimism that an extension of the moratorium on war debts will be forthcoming has State Department officials at Washington puzzled as they await the next word from abroad.

The administration is described at a loss to understand edspatches from London and Continental capitals indicating a belief prevails in high official circles that some means will be found to postpone the December 15 payments due the United States despite the polite refusals that already have been sent to Europe.

The replies of the United States Government to the requests of Great Britain, France, Belgium, Poland and Czechoslovakia for an extension of the time on the war debt payments due next month were uniformly negative and made it clear that Congress alone could alter the debt agreement.

However, the overseas Governments apparently still regard the payments as open to negotiations in spite of Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson's statement that "no facts have been placed in our possession which could be presented to the Congress for favorable consideration."

Not Fully Accepted

In the face of the explanation in all the notes that President Hoover is without authority to modify debt agreements and that from Congress, where this power is lodged, repeated expressions of opposition to the moratorium have been heard, Europe has indicated that it has not accepted the decision as final.

Notes are being framed in London, Paris and Brussels, presumably citing the economic situation as reasons for a delay in the December payments.

The British Cabinet will meet tomorrow to pass on a reply to Secretary Stimson's note, and France and Belgium are reported to be prepared to follow the lead of Great Britain.

In almost identical notes, the State Department yesterday told Poland and Czechoslovakia the United States could not relieve them of payments due Dec. 15 but said "the President is prepared to recommend to Congress that it constitute an agency to examine the whole subject" of war debts.

France's Next Move

Paris, Nov. 27—The next French move in the war debt situation was discussed at length today by Premier Herriot and Louis Germain-Martin, Minister of Finance.

The Foreign Office had nothing to say about the meeting but the newspaper Petit Parisien said a rough draft of a reply to the United States not asking payment of the $20,000,000 due on December 15, was considered.

Retirement of Boston Police Inspector is a Popular One

at any time during his 38 years' service had he resorted to third degree methods on prisoners. He had discovered the more human way to be the most effective.

Briefly he recounted the work of the Homicide squad of the Boston Police. He outlined the system employed when a death by violence is reported. Boston he said was comparatively free from the crime nature of other large cities in the United States. Gangster killings were fewer and almost negligible. Like many another police official, the inspector was proud of the record of the Boston police department, and asserted that it was one of the cleanest cities in the United States.

Though he was not born here, nor ever lived in this part of the world, Inspector Dennessy considers it almost like home. He has many intimate friends, who are tendering him a warm welcome on his second trip here this year.

McLaughlin Held by Police After Coroner's Jury Decision

do but take the injured man to the hospital and report to the police. McLaughlin also said that he had a license to drive, having been operating the car for three months and half. P. J. Hughes, K. C., appeared in the interests of McLaughlin and recorded objectionable questions that might incriminate him in any action.

The jury was out only thirty five minutes before they brought in the verdict freeing the driver from all blame in connection with the accident. They recommended that "inspection of cars be made from time to time by the proper authorities."
