

SOME INTERESTING RADIO FEATURES FOR THE WEEK

The premiere performance of "Pagan," a symphony written for band presentation by James R. Gillette, will be played by the Goldman Band, with the composer conducting, Tuesday at 9:30 p.m., over WJZ. Gillette is head of the music department, Carlton College, Northfield, Minn. This concert, broadcast from the New York University campus, is presented by Goldman in honor of the American Association of Bandmasters, convening in New York at the same time.

Gang warfare will be brought to radio listeners over WEAf during the police dramatization of "The Fighting Jewelers," at 10 p.m., on Tuesday. Material for "The Fighting Jewelers" was taken from the police records of New York City and is a true story. Walter O'Keefe, master of ceremonies, and Jack Denny and his orchestra also will be heard on the hour program.

Helen Board, soprano; Theo Karl, tenor; the Four Eton Boys, a male quartet, and a chorus ensemble will be featured with Freddie Rich's orchestra in a musical revue to be heard over WABC on Wednesday at 7:15 p.m. Miss Board will be heard singing a current love song, "Remember Cherie"; Karl will offer the well-known ballad, "Just A Cottage Small," by Hanley, and the Four Eton Boys will sing two comedy numbers, "So Does Your Old Mandarin" and "In 1933 They're Going to Set Me Free."

Lieutenant J. J. Gagnier, conductor of the Montreal Symphony Orchestra and bandmaster of H. M. Canadian Grenadier Guards, will direct his own composition, Epilogue II, "Goat Footed Pan," for its radio premiere during the Goldman Band concert over WEAf at 8:30 p.m. on Wednesday. Captain William J. Stannard, of the United States Army Band, will lead the Goldman Band in the first presentation p.m. on Friday. Countess Albani will over WEAf of George C. Gault's over-composition will be played by the Goldman Band during a special concert on the Mall in Central Park in honor of delegates attending the American Bandmaster's Association meeting in New York.

Episodes in the life of Ambrose Pare, who in the early part of the sixteenth century proved that it was not necessary to pour boiling oil into wounds to cauterize them, will be dramatized during a program over WJZ on Thursday at 9 p.m. Pare was a surgeon-barber, and his treatment of wounds without adding to the agony of the patient revolutionized this phase of medical practice.

Caribbean tunes, sung and played by the Porto Rican Sextet to the rhythmic beat of palitos sticks against gourds, will be a feature of Nathaniel Shilkret's program on Friday at 9 p.m. over WABC.

Countess Olga Albani, soprano, with the Cavaliers Quartet and Rosario Bourdon's Orchestra, will be heard in a varied program over WEAf at 8

"The Order of Good Cheer," a Canadian operetta by Healy Willan, of Toronto, will be featured over WEAf at 7 p.m. on Saturday. The story has its setting at a banquet at Fort Royal, during the regime, and is written around a collection of French Canadian folksongs, finishing with an Indian atmosphere.

Ralph Grosvenor, tenor, is to be guest soloist on the program of the Little Symphony Orchestra, directed by Philip James, over WOR on Saturday evening at 8 o'clock.

SPAIN SELLS ALFONSO'S DOGS

Madrid, Spain, July 27—In dispersing livestock of the royal family several thoroughbred dogs were sold recently for prices ranging from 7 to 15 pesetas.

SUNKEN TREASURE PROVES LURE TO TWO EXPEDITIONS

Lewes, Del., July 27—Pirate gold sunken Ward liner Merida, and other treasure said to have been looted from Spanish galleons and re-puted to be worth $40,000,000 is the prize for which New York and Baltimore are today staking a small fortune.

Notwithstanding other attempts that failed, the modern fortune hunters, equipped with deep-water diving equipment, hope to locate the English brig Debraske, which sank off the Delaware Cape in 1798.

The salvage forces have charts and maps indicating, they believe, the exact spot where the Debraske foundered, carrying down a seized brig which was supposed to be loaded with a fortune in gold coins and gems.

Two Heading Party

Heading the party are A. C. Robertson of New York and J. H. Steele, of Baltimore.

Documents brought from England show that the Debraske went down about one mile out in the bay directly opposite Cape Henlopen.

The present salvagers already have determined that the water at this point is only 80 feet deep, and they are spurred by the belief that much of the sand has washed away at that point during the last few decades.

They further believe that the treasure ship was built virtually entirely of teakwood, which is considered almost indestructible.

Hampton, Va., July 25—Three craft were at sea today in quest of precious metals and jewels in the hold of the

The Salvor, chief of the craft on the treasure expedition, sailed from Norfolk on Saturday and yesterday two Hampton fishing vessels, the Seagull and the Sea Rambler, put to sea.

A drag line stretched between two trawlers will scour the ocean bottom in an effort to locate the treasure ship.

Repeated efforts have been made to salvage the cargo.

The Merida sank more than 20 years ago after a collision with the steamer Admiral Farragut.

RUSSIAN WOMEN WANT MARRIAGE

Moscow, July 27—The highest ambition of a world-minded girl in new Russia is to marry a commissar, or a man as near to the center of communist power as she can possibly manage.

This is true despite the fact that commissars' wives work in offices and on farms like ordinary mortals. The conventions of the new society here require everyone to work—loafing is as disreputable in Moscow as shop-lifting in Paris or New York.

But within the limits of this convention, marriage to a man in power provides a woman with privileges and advantages by the dozen, even aside from the satisfaction of being the wife of a famous man. Power in the Soviet union means what money does in capitalist countries. Social position is even a more potent force here than elsewhere in the world.

Enjoy Advantages

A great deal of romantic nonsense has been widely published about the Spartan qualities of the wives of soviet leaders. The simple fact is that they apart as the lucky few compared with ordinary women.

Elsewhere wives of leaders devote themselves to charity, social teas, art, and bask in the limelight of their husband's prominence. Here they head factories, run collective farms and usually work under their own rather than their husband's names.

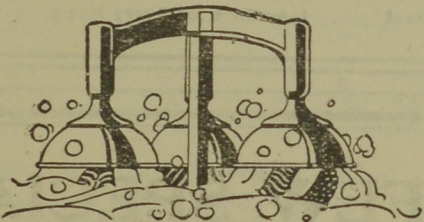

Commissars' wives have comfortable apartments in the Kremlin, or in newly built houses. They have "datchas," or country houses. They have automobiles at their disposal. They have access to special closed shops stocked with food and manufactured goods not to be found in the run of shops.

In short, they live at the highest level of comfort possible under soviet conditions, however low that level may be as compared with standards in the outside world.

Some women, married to outstanding communist leaders do not take advantage of the additional privileges open to them. They are themselves old bolsheviks, who have lived and struggled in a tradition of Spartan self-sacrifices.

At the other extreme are wives who wring every ounce of utility out of their martial connections with a prominent leader. These are chiefly younger women, who dress as elegantly as they can under Soviet conditions, attend all the theatre and opera premieres, dance at diplomatic functions, and generally make the most of opportunities.
