ART OUT-OF-DOORS

An extraordinary event in art circles took place a few days ago. Pictures usually seen in their purple or magenta velvet draperies under carefully filtered light were stood up helter skelter on the sidewalks about Washington Square, New York, for sale by their painters in an outdoor market, the same as crates of strawberries or boxes of cauliflower; and sixteen of the paintings were sold outright then and there.

A slowly moving throng, some of them connoisseurs, studied the works of art under the brilliant sunlight of a June day, and found that art doesn't materially suffer when withdrawn from the cool and shady aisles of its customary temples. We hear of "taking art to the people" as an important aid in securing the people's appreciation and this seems to be a bold step in that direction.

There isn't any doubt that more people would thus see the work of painters than would encounter it in a gallery, although the taste and discrimination of a miscellaneous optience might not be as elevated. But if the spectators have the money to buy, what better way is there to bring purchasers and the work of artists together?

The Saint Croix Courier reports that up till July 6th, 2950 automobiles had entered Canada, via St. Stephen as against 3450 for the corresponding period last year, a decrease of 500. The Courier explains that travel was light on the Glorious Fourth and that the serious decline is due to the fact that in June, 1931, the American Legion held a convention at Calais. It was recalled that the Legion convention attracted many visitors, most of whom had the free run of all the border towns. It is rather surprising to learn that the customs authorities at St. Stephen classified these people as tourists entering the province.

The village of McAdam appears to have a problem on its hands in its sewerage system. The system is apparently a good one as it is reputed to have cost $100,000. According to the councillors of the parish a number of property owners refuse to make connection with the sewerage system but dump their sewage along the railway tracks. The district health officer maintains that so long as a nuisance is not committed the Board cannot compel property owners to make the connection. Just there the matter seems to rest. In Fredericton every property owner who has sewerage to dispose of is compelled by law to make connection with the sewerage system.

While the effort put forth by the York Municipal Councillors to slash indemnities and salaries was only a gesture, the council did succeed in affecting an economy. Hitherto delegates to the convention of the Union of New Brunswick Municipalities were allowed each $50 for expenses. Last year the total amounted to the snug sum of $250. The council reduced the allowance to $25, which will make the total for the ensuing year $125, and it will not be necessary for the delegates to boil the kettle on the roadside in order to come out square.

The St. Stephen town council will promote legislation at the next session to enable it to grant a bonus of $10,000 on a shoe factory which has been crying on in that town under difficulties. Directors and shareholders of the company have undertaken to raise an additional $5,000. Some years ago, it was stated that sufficient footwear was smuggled over the border to St. Stephen to keep a small factory running, but that complaint is not being heard today.

The York Municipal councillors yesterday talked of cutting their own salaries by fifty per cent., and that of officials, janitors, etc., by ten per cent., but it was only a gesture. A motion deferring action until the January meeting was carried. There is a municipal election due in September, 1933, and if good times are just around the corner, they should have made the turn by that time.

The bond market seems to have taken on quite a spurt and several large blocks have recently been disposed of. The City of Toronto has placed an issue of $20,000,000 on the market; a New Brunswick issue of $5,000,000 has been taken up, and Saint John has disposed of an issue.

Coun. Hinchey, a bachelor member of the Municipal Council opposed a motion to impose a tax on the income of women. Two other members of the council, who still enjoy single blessedness, voted in favor of it. They probably forgot that this is leap year.

Although times are supposed to be hard at Newcastle, that town was able to attract a circus this month, something which the capital of the province was unable to do.

A Parisian waiter has just retired with a fortune of $500,000. Now would seem to be the time, with tourists getting keener every minute at arithmetic.

A terrorist who hurled a bomb that broke up an official dinner is held at Belgrade. He neglected, it seems, to sound the warning, "tope me if you've heard this."

A New York sheriff, ordered to report on a subordinate who banked $660,000 in five years, says he was never late morning, and didn't even leave the office for lunch. Evidently.

A fugitive from an Ohio prison farm was found suspended from a barbed-wire fence by the seat of his trousers, an attitude rarely encountered outside the political cartoons.

LONDON ROADS LINED BY GOLD

London, July 9—Country yokels visiting London used to believe that the streets were paved with gold, and that the digging that they saw was mining.

Today Londoners like to think that their streets are figuratively lined with the precious metal (particularly in the "city," where banking and business are concentrated), though the value is represented by the buildings themselves.

A statistical observer, standing on the steps of the Mansion House recently counted four buildings within a stones throw representing an outlay of $60,000,000.

The new Bank of England, for example, cost $20,000,000; the new Midland Bank cost $11,125,000; the new National Provincial Bank cost another $10,000,000, and the new Lloyds still another $10,000,000.

These are not skyscrapers, for English law states that, unless special circumstances bring about special permission, a building may be no higher than 80 feet to the cornice and 120 feet "stepped back" to its highest point. This is because of fire hazards and the "ancient lights" rights.

OLD BIKE WEEK HELD

Stockholm, July 9—An "Old Bike Week" was held here recently at which many ancient types of two-wheelers were ridden. Several of the bicycles, dating from the 1860, proved difficult to ride because of their high and clumsy wood construction.

ONE HOME TOWN BOY FAILS TO MAKE GOOD

Chicago, July 8—Richard Rollins is just 20. Six years ago he left his Detroit home and hasn't had a day of work since. Thursday, hungry, he found an old rusty pistol in an ash can. So he determined to quit begging. At Randolph street and Lake Michigan he saw a quiet, gray-haired man in an automobile. He slipped up to the car and said: "This is a stickup. I don't like to do it, but I'm hungry. "Sure!" the man said, "I understand. "I'm broke myself, and out of work, but I'm sorry for you. Let's split what I've got?" He counted his money, $3.04. He gave Rollins $1.52. Later, Rollins sat at a plate of beef stew in a restaurant. The first mouthful choked him. He paid his bill and rushed out on Wabash avenue, and here is how he was arrested, and why he probably will go free. At Adams street he handed his pistol to Policeman Richard Downs, and told his story. "If we find the man you robbed," asked the detective bureau sergeant to Rollins, "will he sign a warrant against you?" A couple of tears rolled down the cheeks of the vagrant. "That man won't complain about me," he said. "I know, because of what he said when I left. That's what made me feel so bad." "What did he say?" inquired the sergeant. "Goodby, and God bless you."

PHONE SERVICE IN JUNGLE NOW

Resistencia, Argentina, July 9—The Gran Chaco may be a jungle wilderness but its residents can now talk to the world. Telephone circuits were recently hooked up for a conversation between this capital of the Argentine Chaco and Eastbourne, England.

The great trouble about balancing budgets is that so many other smaller budgets are unbalanced in the process.
