To Establish a Branch in Canada

New York, Dec. 11.—The Tribune this morning says: "The International Arms and Fuse Company, which has been manufacturing 3-inch shells for the Allies at its Bloomfield, N. J., plant, will open a branch in Montreal, Canada, early in 1917, it was announced last night.

More than 3,000 men are employed at the Bloomfield plant, and in the neighborhood of 2,000 will be set to work in the Montreal branch, the establishment of which is due to England's determination not to renew shell contracts in the United States.

Must Keep Wings Moving Says Sir Sam

Toronto, Dec. 11.—"I am not meddling in Toronto elections at the present juncture, but in case Mr. Kemp should be opposed out of mere party or local selfish objects, I would feel inclined to assist him being elected, as I have certainly asked my friends to use their very best endeavors to get him an acclamation."

These were the interesting words of Sir Sam Hughes, who arrived in Toronto yesterday on his way to Lindsay after a tour in the United States.

"We must keep the war in sight. The great thing is to keep things moving as rapidly as possible," added General Hughes. "And I don't wish to take Mr. Kemp an hour from his duties as Minister of Militia."

FORMER C. P. R. OFFICIAL IS DEAD AT TORONTO

Mr. Robert Kerr Was Formerly Traffic Manager of the Big Railway.

Montreal, Dec. 10.—Robert Kerr, formerly passenger traffic manager of the Canadian Pacific Railway Co., passed away quietly at his home, 9 Madison avenue, Toronto, on Saturday morning.

The deceased was born at Toronto on August 13rd, 1845, and his career was marked by adventure as a soldier and by success as a railway man. During the American civil war of 1861-65 he fought on the side of the North, and was distinguished for his bravery in the many battles through which he fought.

In 1866 he entered railway life with the Northern Railway of Canada, and in 1879 he was made through freight agent for the same road. Also, in 1879 he was appointed to the position of general freight and passenger agent of the Northern and Northwestern Railway.

It was in June, 1884, that he went to the C. P. R., and in the service of the company he found a wide field in which to exercise his abilities. He began as general freight and passenger agent for lines west of Fort William.

MAJOR OSBORNE'S RETURN

have the honor today, on behalf of the citizens of Fredericton and your fellow countrymen everywhere, to welcome your return from the blood-stained fields of Europe. Pride and satisfaction at the brilliant record you have made in the service of the Empire, regret because you have been disabled as a result of your courageous efforts to drive back the King's enemies.

When the call came to Canadians to do their part in upholding the honor and integrity of the Empire, you were among those who on account of their loyalty and devotion to Canada and to the sacred principles of Christianity, went forth to win immortal fame for themselves and for this great Dominion.

How well you sustained your reputation on these splendid qualities is attested by the foremost part which you took in repelling the enemy in the great battle of the Somme, when the Regina trench, with all its wonderful fortifications, was captured from the Germans, and where so many gallant lads went out. It was in this battle that you received the wounds on Oct. 2nd, which resulted in your return to Canada.

Your fellow-citizens have followed with intense interest your career since you left us to do your duty in defence of everything they hold most dear, and today we are glad to welcome you back to your home and family after your splendid record in the great cause to which the Empire is marshalling her forces.

We can readily picture the great suffering through which you passed during those months in hospital, but we trust that the careful nursing you will receive from those nearest and dearest to you may speedily restore you to health and strength.

To your brave and devoted wife and family we offer our best wishes and heartily congratulate them, as well as yourself, on the conspicuous part you have played in the noblest cause in which man can enlist, the defence of their homes, their Empire and their King.

Once more, Major Osborne, permit me to extend a hearty welcome and to say, Brave and gallant soldier of the King, who, knowing his duty, had the will to perform it with such conspicuous courage.

MOSES MITCHELL,

Mayor.

Major Osborne's Reply.

Major Osborne made an excellent impression by his modest reply, which was as follows:

"Your Worship and Fellow Citizens. I feel overcome with the demonstration you have given me on my return to my home city, a place which at times I never hoped to see again, but a kind Providence has willed it otherwise.

"I have been in some tight places, of course, but I have done no more than my duty. It affords me the greatest pleasure to be with you again for a

"Only those who have been in the firing line know what it is, and I don't know that with my limited vocabulary I can do justice to it. Perhaps I should not, anyway.

"The boys from this place have done well. I speak particularly of the 55th Battalion, which I am sorry to say was broken up. That made no difference to their ardor. They fought to oppose the would-be despoilers of Europe, never flinching and standing at their posts with their wounds and all.

"This will be a long hard struggle. We are against a determined and a strong people. It looks as if every man will have to go. Canadians will be there, I know—that is, every man who is fit, for by that I have seen I know it is no place for the man who is not fit. Men who thought they were fit, but were not, have gone under.

"I am pleased to see you all, to see the faces of those whom I know. There are some, however, which I will never see again. I wish to thank the boys who are not in here—the Kilties and the Kilties' band,—for turning out to meet me. It is some time since I have marched behind martial music. I will have wear a kilt myself. I know the Kilties will do what they can when they get there and it looks as if there will be a place for every man.

"The shell has left me not well able to express myself, and I cannot make a speech. In fact this is the first speech I have made in a long time. That effect, however, is wearing away gradually. The sea voyage—longer than I expected—has done much good. I can only thank you for the reception you have given me."

Funny, but a woman may loathe bald heads, until she chances to fall in love with a man whose hair is getting sparse on top; then she will suddenly begin to think of them as "nice and clean, and intellectual looking."

The modern girl's idea of a "regular fellow" is one who is clever enough to make a lot of money and foolish enough to throw it away on her.
