LION'S ROARS TOO REALISTIC

Chicago, Oct. 5—A lion's roar, to sound realistic, should not be confined to a studio. The fact was found by Tom Corwine, Chicago, NBC animal imitator, when he was rehearsing for a Rin Tin Tin Thriller program.

To solve the problem Tom made a trip to the Lincoln Park zoo, and came back with the information that he needed more room; the long corridor in the nineteenth floor would prove ideal.

Microphones set, Tom stepped off the proper distance and cuped his hands to his mouth. Engineers and production men listening to the trial at a receiving set in the studio were astonished. The roars were fine, but what was all the curious noise in the background?

Investigations showed that Corwine's sound effects were so real that they frightened employees in the offices. The uncalled-for sounds were caused by the braver persons dashing out to see what was the matter.

Thornton and Zoller Score Hit

Gladys Thornton and Jack Zoller are scoring a big success with the afternoon radio audiences in their highly amusing "The Low-down" skit over WLW in which these clever artists give listeners the "absolute lowdown" on the various stars of the Nation's Station.

"The Low-down" is on the air daily except Sunday at 4:45 o'clock.

Says Pat Barnes, NBC philosopher: "Prosperity was so long turning the corner that a fellow can't tell now whether it's skidding or kidding."

So many of Jimmy Walker's woes seem to grow from the fact that he never got out of the hands of his friends.

Canadian Two-Bit Piece Taboo With This Popular Actor

Charles Egelston, veteran radio actor now co-starring with Helen Spring in the "Puddle Family" series over WLW every Tuesday and Friday evening at 8:15 o'clock, has long believed the Canadian quarter dollar to be far more potent bad luck omen than any black cat that ever sallied across one's path. Egelston would far rather be penniless than have a pocketful of these coins clinking ominously in his ears.

In the midst of the Puddle Family studio rehearsal last week, Egelston suddenly discovered a Canadian Quarter in his pocket and insisted on interrupting the rehearsal long enough for him to dispose of the offending coin.

Hotel Women in Radio Talks

Mrs. Lute M. Sohngen, Social Director of the Greater Hotel Gibson, in Cincinnati, will conclude her "Entertaining our guests" broadcast series over WLW with two talks, one Saturday morning, October 8, at 9:45 o'clock, and the other the following Saturday at the same time.

"To the average goner the privilege of improving his lie seems to mean the downward revision of his score," says Harry Reser, NBC director.

WLW Will Broadcast All Ohio State Games During Fall Season

Beginning with the season's opening with Ohio Wesleyan, Saturday afternoon, October 1, all football games played by Ohio State University this fall will be carried over station WLW.

A running play-by-play account of these gridiron classics by Grant Ward, ace sports announcer, will be picked up by remote control by WLW at the field and will be relayed to that station's transmitter in Cincinnati for broadcast. This football series is being offered under the sponsorship of the Storrs-Schaefer Company, maker of Beau Brummel clothes.

The Ohio State complete schedule of football games follows: October 1, Ohio Wesleyan; October 8, Indiana; October 15, Michigan; October 22, Pittsburgh; October 29, Wisconsin; November 5, Northwestern; November 12, Pennsylvania; November 19, Illinois.

Dameron, Holcomb Feathred in Tangee Musical Dreams

A new arrangement of "How Do You Do It," song hit from "1932 Ballyhoo" now playing on Broadway; "I Guess I'll have to change my plans"; "Always in My Heart"; and "AM I Wasting My Time" are among the musical offerings to be heard during the Tangee Musical Dreams matinee broadcast, Thursday, October 6, from 4:15 to 4:30 o'clock, over WLW and an NBC network.

These popular afternoon broadcasts which feature Charlie Dameron, tenor, and Harry Holcomb in a character role, originate in the studios of the "Nation's Station" in Cincinnati and are carried by the following stations: WJZ, WBZA, WTAM, KDKA, WTAR, WENR and WJR.

Tight times are ending because the country is loosening up, according to George Rector, NBC's food expert and student of economics.

These NBC conductors began their musical careers young: B. A. Rolfe at six was playing a piccolo and at ten a trumpet soloist. He organized his first band at Lowellville, N. Y., when he was 20. Buddy Rogers played a horn in a boys' band in his home town of Olathe, Kansas, when he was nine. Don Voorhees was leading an orchestra in Allentown, Pa., when he was twelve.

A DRY CLEANER MAKES GUESS ON ELECTION

(New York Sun)

Out in one of Westchester's suburbs may be found a dry cleaning shop which is nothing less than a prophecy on the election about which this nation will get so excited come November. It is now shop and the prophecy is contained in its name. Naturally, it had to have a name. The time has gone by when any proprietor of any dry cleaning shop would simply paint "Dry Cleaning" on his window and hope to draw business. More is required now. So you find the doubly attractive "Busy Bee Dry Cleaning" shops and what not. But in this year an even better name was offered and the new dry cleaner was quick to grab at it. He grabbed and caught, and so now he sits waiting for a trade he hopes will improve a lot after November 8, and he is doing his sitting behind a window which reads, "The Roosevelt Dry Cleaning Shop."

LIKE ALL THE OTHERS ABOUT THE CHERRY TREE

(New York Sun)

The argument was just about at red heat. Buddy has insisted there never was any cherry tree chopping down incident. Doris swore up and down there certainly had been.

"G'wan," said Buddy. "Why, George Washington's father never even had any cherry trees."

Doris flooded him with scorn from a couple of huge blue eyes.

"He did so."

"He didn't."

"He did, and I prove it."

"All righty then! Prove it, Miss Smarty."

"George Washington's father did have cherry trees! Because how could George Washington have cut one down if his father didn't?"

There was a blank silence while Buddy's round face fell and fell into an abyss of chagrin.

"Well!" finally, "maybe you got it right at that."
