CREATED A THRILL

The Philadelphia Public Ledger in commenting on the arrival of a square-rigger in Boston, has this to say:

"Bostonians have been getting a thrill this week from the mere sight of a ship. It is an old ship, built in 1876, and last year it was sold for a mere $690. It has no particular record of daring or adventure and it may even now be destined for the junkyard. But it thrilled Boston, as it would thrill New York or Philadelphia, because it is a square-rigger."

The nineteenth century square-rigger had three outstanding qualities. It was, generally speaking, the most economical ship of its day. It was the fastest. And it was just about the prettiest bit of workmanship ever set afloat. The American clipper ships, which girdled the world and made the British East Indians feel even more ungainly than they actually were, were the square-riggers at the peak of perfection. They set every trans-Atlantic sailing record of any consequence. They carried American seamen into every port in the world and built up a maritime trade second to none. For those reasons alone they were a thrilling sight. But above all they were beautiful to look at.

The men who designed and built the square-riggers were artists. Their product, from bowsprit to rudder post, from keel to topsail, was a thing of perfect beauty. Even tied up at a wharf, sails furled and decks strewn with cargo, the clipper was more like a sleek race horse or a carrier pigeon than the everyday commercial vessel it really was."

The best square-riggers that the United States ever produced were built at East Boston, in the early fifties of the last century by Donald McKay, a native of Nova Scotia. The list included such famous ships as the Flying Cloud, the Great Republic and the Sovereign of the Seas.

Premier Bennett in Parliament last week announced that the salaries of judges would not be reduced, but intimated that another way would be found of dealing with the matter. This is taken to mean that it is the intention of the government to reduce the number of judges. At the present time Canada has an embarrassment of riches along that line. The salaries and travelling expenses of judges now cost Canada the enormous sum of $2,350,000.

The result of the Literary Digests straw vote on the prohibition question shows that to date 1,323,204 votes have been polled. Of this number 297,207 have been polled in favor of the continuance of the Volstead Act and 1,024,077 against. In the adjoining state of Maine, 2,437 votes have been cast for the Act and 5077 against it.

Neatest retraction of the week: The Leader-Post of Regina, Saskatchewan having included a living statesman in a list of the recently deceased, explains, "Sir Allen is still with us in the flesh, although in the Senate."

A Chinese laundryman is taking flying lessons in order to get into the big fuss "over there." Watch the Japanese protest to the League of Nations against the inhumanity of raining hot flatirons on trenches!

We learn further from the style experts that the extra-pants suit is no longer popular. Still, it helps one to look neatly pressed at all times—which are the times when one is pressed by one's creditors.

While the bridge war did not stimulate our personal purchases, we expect to lay in a new deck of cards when the spots on the back of the present pack outnumber those on the fronts.

A dollar goes farther today, before it is overtaken.

A playing card manufacturer doubts if bridge wars do much to stimulate the game. Possibly putting up 12 pound hams as prizes at this time, instead of lavender bath salts, would be a magnet.

France wants an international army put at the League's disposal; as if it wasn't hard enough to get squads right done properly where the sergeant and the privates speak the same language.

A Cleveland doctor says that the last 18 months were the healthiest period in the United States in 50 years. But there was an awful lot of nervous prostration in Wall Street.

We thoroughly agree with the Bak-ersfield editor who says: "The reason people are patient with statesmen is that they don't know what to do, either."

Two years without a zero day is Chicago's record, according to the Federal weather observer. The city treasurer however, says to the contrary.

The outlook is that things will be arranged before April so that Col. Ruppert, proprietor of the Yankees, won't have to take Ruth's turn at bat personally.

THROUGH OUR SIEVE

Japan's idea of the open gate is to blow it off the hinges.

With shoes $50 a pair in Russia, the five year plan must have cold feet.

Nothing raises the bristles on sales resistance quicker than two go-getters working together.

Lima Beane thinks the man who asks the Lord to help him with chores he could do himself is lazy.

What do a few disillusionments, more or less, amount to? If we ever got there, Utopia would lose its enchantment.

Depression has been remarkably educational. One lesson is that real estate at top prices is not always a safe investment.

In days before the discovery of vitamins people were satisfied to mind their P's and Q's. Now A's and D's must receive attention.

It's foderol to assume that women dress to please men. They dress to please the saleslady. That's our theory and we're going to stick to it.

Inventors should keep up to date by accepting Clyde Moore's hint: "Another crying need is goggles to keep cigarette ashes out of babies' eyes."

Japan may understand Oriental psychology, but the western world is impatient to see how she comes out with her campaign to make Chinamen crazy to buy her products.

Bridges Sometimes Fall

The fact that bridges sometimes fall and that all bridges are not made for passage was brought home in a dashing manner to an unfortunate gentleman at the residence dance, Friday night. The decorators of the swimming pool had gone to some trouble in constructing an artificial bridge across the pool, hoping to lend the scene a rustic beauty. The gentleman in question, however, seemed to have doubted the artificiality of the bridge and proceeded to prove to his fair companion, that he dared what others feared. As a result, the placid waters were ruffled by a 160 pounds of humanity dropped from a height of four or five feet. Dancing for the rest of the evening was out of the question as far as the victim was concerned and he retired from the festivities with as much dignity as he could muster.

NEIGHBORS TALK

"I am employed in a theatre and it is a problem to make ends meet, as I help support my mother and sisters. I like to dress well but haven't very much to spend on clothes. To give the appearance of variety to my slender wardrobe I change the color of a dress or stockings as soon as the things become faded. I always use Diamond Dyes for the work — using them as dyes for dresses and as tints for stockings. I have always gotten such perfect results that our neighbors talk about the great number of new things I have."

"I learned about Diamond Dyes from our wardrobe mistress. She says she has tried all the dyes on the market but none do such splendid work and are so easy to use as Diamond Dyes. Understand they are the world's most popular dyes—and they deserve to be."

AMIALE OLD WRECK HAD HIS GREATNESS

(New York Sun)

He was the scrubbiest old coot between Forty-second street and the Battery, between West Street and Coenties Slip. And the raggedest. His hair fizzed down the back of his leathery old neck in a sixty day growth. His dusty felt hat was full of air holes. Safety pins and a few stubborn strands of thread, plus the grace of heaven, kept his old coat from falling off his curved back in half a dozen pieces. His trousers would have been recognized even as the remnants of such by any tailor, and any self-respecting sailor would have spurned the piece of rope that held them around his paunchy middle. His trouser cuffs were held by equally disreputable pieces of rope around the tops of a pair of shoes any shoemaker would have thrown in the ashcan.

He was ambling toward the drinking fountain in the public library just as the amiable matron approached the same goal. Amiable though she was, the matron shivered. She couldn't drink after that fellow, even though the fountain was the sort guaranteed to be sanitary. On the other hand, unbelievable but nevertheless unmistakable about the old rip kept her from turning away. It seemed to her that a man with that air, even though he wore such clothes, might be sensitive enough to be more than offended to be hurt. While she was hesitating, the old wreck solved her problem. His shattered old felt swung off with a flourish. His dilapidated old carcass bent in a bow which had the flavor of elevated diplomatic circles.

"After you, Madame," he mumbled. And then he grabbed like any gutter-snipe at the quarter the matron handed him.

Dr. Frank Crane is in harmony with this column when he declares it is a lie about the world owing anybody a living. He says "the world owes you nothing but to bury you when you cease to function." Even that, we say, the world owes to itself as a sanitary safeguard.

"Man wants but little here below." And when he gets a little he wants a little more.

THE SHOW AT GAIETY

"Private Lives" is the photo play at the Gaiety for Monday and Tuesday with Norma Shearer and Robert Montgomery in the leading roles.

Both Miss Shearer and Mr. Montgomery were ideal choices for the leading roles. Each possesses a fine flair for light comedy and neither has ever appeared to better advantage. Miss Merkel and Mr. Denny, too, are splendidly suited to the parts of the abused spouses.

"Private Lives" is a continuous delight. It sparkles with witty lines, effervesces with hilarious situations and abounds in diversion. Put this one down immediately on your must-be-seen list.
