RIDING THE RODS

Commenting on a recent statement in Calgary by Premier R. B. Bennett, the Ottawa Journal says:—

The Prime Minister announced in Caglary that after September 30 some definite steps will be taken to end the practice which has grown up despite efforts of railway police of unemployed transients riding free on Canadian freight trains. Presumably this notice s given so that transcients en route from somewhere to somewhere else m y have time and opportunity to get back to their home towns or the place of most reecnt regular employment.

Mr. Bennett described this movement of transients as "one of the greatest evils the country has ever seen." The unfortunate consequences of the practice aer obvious, apparent to everyone. It tends to develop in young men the habit of aimless wandering, to unfit them for the more serious business of life, to expose them to moral contamination through the agency of the criminal and the lawless. Furthermore, the existence of a large class of floating unemployed complicates the problems of relief which every municipality has had to face and which unquestionably will continue to demand serious attention in the coming winter. Every town and city in the Dominion has experienced the diffculties this situation has put upon relief offiicals and probably all of them will welcome the announcement of Mr. Bennett.

As a matter of fact the man, single or married who is so unfortunate as to be unemployed is better off in his own community than among strangers. The hope of a job in the next city or province almost invariably proves a delusion and the man acquires nothing but disappointment and added hardship if he is permitted to travel up and down the land on foreign trains.

Proefssional tramps who ride "on the rods" we have had with us always but only recently hae the practice grown to anything like like serious proportions. Unfortunately, there is for a while at least to the young man unemployed and with no encumbrances a certain glamor about it that appeals to the adventurous spirit of youth. Mr. Bennett has done well in drawing attention to evils for the whole community that follow in the trail of a custom that has hitherto been viewed with too much indifference.

R. B. Hanson, K.C., M.P., officially opened the Fredericton Exhibition on Saturday evening, being the first local man to officiate at that ceremony in recent years. Those who listened to his eloquent address, must have concluded that the directors might have gone farther for an official opener and fared worse. Mr. Hanson in his address easily sustained his reputation as one of the ablest and most forceful of Maritime parliamentarians. He touched on the economic depression and other matters of great interest, and in closing his eloquent address urged his listeners to have faith in Canada. His remarks entirely free from any political coloring, were timely and made a deep impression on the large audience.

An election in the State of Maine for the governorship and congressmen is taking place today. "How Maine goes so goes the Union," is an old saying ,but both parties are confident of success on this occasion. Maine is looked upon as a staunch Republican state, but has returned a Democratic governor before now. It did this 24 years ago. The indications are that the state will go Republican in tomorrow's election.

Th exhibition directors have been working hard for weeks without any hope of reward, but have the consolation of seeing their pictures in the papers.

LIVE DECOYS ARE NOT TO BE USED THIS SEASON

New Ruling Applies Only to New Brunswick and Nova Scotia — Wild Fowlers Complain of Short Notice.

The open season for duck shooting begins on Thursday of this week and local wild fowlers are now making ready for a try at them. The recent ruling at Ottawa that the use of live decoys for water fowl shooting had been prohibited created some surprise here. And there is further surprise because it applies only to the provinces of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, where but few birds are killed as compared with the west. Local wild fowlers are complaining of the shortness of the notice given and say they incurred considerable expense in caring for the live decoys during the close season. They claim that this expense could have been saved had the ruling been made last spring. As one man put it, "I suppose, we will have to obey the law and provide ourselves with wooden decoys which will of course mean more expense."

GOVERNMENT COSTS

Richmond, Va., Sept. 12—Town government in Virginia, about which little is known by state officials, is costing approximately $5,000,000 a year, according to estimtes of the finances of 190 towns in te state, prepared by Dr. William H. Stauffer, state tax economist.

PROPOSES A DEBT MEMORIAL

Brussels, Belgium, Sept. 12—Senator Cyrille van Overberghe wants a Belgian monument to defunct reparations.

"This monument," he writes in eL Soir, "ought to reproduce the solemn pledges made to Belgium by her former allies and the enemy, assuring Belgium full reparation for her war damages."

On one face he would put only two figures—130,000,000,000 francs for war damages, 24,000,000,000 francs reparations.

COLLEGE EXPENSES TAKE DROP IN NEB.

Lincoln, Nebraska,, Sept. 12—Students at the Nebraska College of Agriculture can pay their year's expenses for $300 or less, according to figures compiled by H. K. Douthit off the instructional staff. This represents a substantial saving as compared with previous years.

Boarding clubs, organized by students themselves, provide two meals daily for $3.25 per week, he pointed out. Men sharing a room find the average cost him $4 to $5 per week each. Tuition and books cost $100.

At The Gaiety

"The Crooner" is the show at the Gaiety for Monday and Tuesday featuring David Manners. It is a satirical jab at the radio and night club crooners. It boasts of some very funny satire and offers a fresh topic and a fresh world.
