THE MAINE VERDICT

For the first time in a period of eighteen years the Democratic party on Monday, won a victory in the State of Maine in the race for the governorship. Latest returns which are practically complete, show that Louis J. Brann, Democrat candidate received 118,790 votes againsht 117,412 cast for Burleigh Martin, Republican, a lead of 1378. In the last election the Republican candidate had a majority, which ran into thousands, showing that a marked change in public sentiment has since taken place. The Democrats also captured two out of three Congressional seats. Strange as it may seem considering the fact that Maine has been under prohibition since the palmy days of Neal Dow, the successful candidates for Governor and congressmen are all classified as "wets". This would seem to indicate that the Volstead Act played an important part in the contest and came in for emphatic condemnation.

The result of Monday's election is regarded as a stunning blow to the Republican party, as an old axium says that "As Maine goes so goes the Nation." In the light of the result in Maine it certainly looks as if the Democrats led by Governor Roosevelt, were going to sweep the country in the November election, unless the Republicans can find some way to whip the disgruntled element of the party back into the fold. Under present conditions with millions of out of employment and the country seething with discontent, it does not seem as if it were possible to turn on even stem the tide. At this distance, even making allowance for what might happen in the next two months, it looks as if the people of the Great Republic were bent on bringing about a change of government.

THE SEPTEMBER AWAKENING

It is a curious anomaly that in our northern climate, says an exchange, the coming of September brings to the human spirit something of the sense of springtime awakening and revival. Activities of mankind run their cycles in time with the motions of the earth, but except among the actual tillers of the soil, the season of greatest activity begins with the waning of summer.

Of course, the farmers, toiling through the heat of the summer, lay the foundation for the year's business structure. Their offering of billions of dollars' worth of newly harvested crops represents primary, basic, created wealth. It is their harvestng and marketing that demand hurrying the wheels of transportation; their furnished raw materials that start the mills; their returns in money that prompt demand for processed goods and start the factories.

And in September, preparations for the whole program must be made. There is a stir all along the line. Schools open and families must hurry back from scenes of their widely scattered vacation activities. Homes must be fitted for winter occupancy. Clothing, fuel, food stores, all the vast requrements that enable modern complex existence under stern conditions of northern winter must be provided.

This is September. Harvest is on. And the big, rich field of the harvest holds promise for every sort of worker.

H. C. Jewett, who might easily be regarded as Fredericton's senior harness racing fan, has executed a real comeback after several years in retirement. His game little mare, Addie McGraw won the 2.22 trotting event at the exhibition yesterday in straight heats making the fast time of 2.10½. It is some time since a Fredericton owned trotter has achieved such an honor at the local track and Mr. Jewett is to be congratulated.

It may be a step toward remorse that the name of the Russian town where the royal family was slaughtered has been changed.

With fine weather so far, the Fredericton Exhibtion is making good, and three big days are yet to come. It is a first-class show in every respect and is being warmly praised by all visitors.

Mr. H. G. Wells may be right in saying we should take the world away from the politicians and give it to the economists. But how can the economists ever be elected? Most of them are not 'silver-tongued orators." Mr. Wells, we fear, isn't practical.

The Western captain of industry who says things are always better when men put their heads together probably never observed and listened to a bibulous quartet singing "Sweet Adeline."

English clergyman who recently attained notoriety in the criminal courts is now exhibiting himself in a barrel at amusement resorts. The container is doubtless the one from which he formerly extracted his sermons.

Hitler, the former paper-hanger, is said by a correspondent to be the business figure in Germany today. Unlike our legendary hero, though, he has the use of two arms.

An Iowa man is said to be getting along nicely with a sheep's stomach. Had he used a goat's stomach, he never would have had to worry about indigestion.

Italian inventors are eliminating all smoke and noise from field artillery guns. Future wars, it seems, are to be little more than periods of silent loathing.

The Iowa farm war is fraught with terrifying possibilities, says an observer. Imagine the lethal quality of an 8-inch green cantaloupe fired from a howitzer.

Ed Howe defends the Lord against the somewhat popular supposition that He created human nature. Howe thinks people themselves created human nature. Perhaps the keen-minded editor of Kansas is right. He is at least fair in the apparent assumption that the Lord could have done a better job. But what we'd like to know is where the devil comes in.

A Double Header

A girl or ratner a woman supposed to have two heads, is being exhibited at one of Ben Williams side shows at the Fredericton Exhibition. This twice blessed female does not move about, but it is exhibited in a cabinet and spectators are allowed only a fleeting glance of her. In answer to a question one of the heads stated that the owner was looking for a husband. Here's a chance for somebody who wants a double headed partner.

GOOD DEMAND FOR THE PELTS OF RED FOXES

Montreal, Sept. 13—Demand was strong, with prices ruling firm, at the closing proceedings of the auction sale of furs here today. In summing up the results of the auction for the past two days it was found that 80 per cent of the entire offerings were sold for $360,000.

Red fox pelts were outstanding in demand, with 92 per cent. of the offerings of 2,775 pelts disposed of, despite a general advance in price of 20 per cent. over the previous sale schedules. Beavers, minks and martens were strong favorites with the large gathering of foreign and domestic buyers.

As compared with the June sale, beaver was unchanged, 87 per cent of the offerings solld, top price, extra large darks, $19. In the lot were 9,070 pelts. Mink, mixed collection, 3,220 skins, were 90 per cent sold, with a top price for fine darks of $28.

Lynx and lynx cats remained unchanged. Otters advanced five per cent. ,with the best lot of extra darks bringing $33. Marten advanced 10 per cent, with 1,040 skins offered and 92 per cent of the offering sold. Red fox advanced 20 per cent and was in very good demand, with 92 per cent sold. Cross fox remained unchanged.

Come to the Fair

Fredericton's Exhibition opened on Saturday and will continue to September 17th.

The Exhibition is a show window, and it is being dressed with the best of everything that the Maritimes produce.

Whether you are interested in fruits or machines, in cattle or in flowers, here you will find the aristocracy of your favorites.

The successful business man, the successful farmer and the successful industrialist of today is the one who keeps in constant touch with his community's latest and best achievements. They are his measuring rod for his own success.

The Exhibition fulfils that function for Fredericton and the Maritimes.

The New Brunswick farmer and the labourer who are willing to leave the progress of their community wholly in the hands of a few active leaders, are patriots as poor as the prominent citizen who takes no interest in the difficulties and aspirations of the worker and the agriculturist.

In these times of crisis it is the duty of all citizens to take upon themselves a share of the patriotic burden of community thinking.
