Stomach Was Bad. Could Eat Hardly Anything.

When the stomach gets out of order the whole system seems to become affected in one way or another. The breath becomes foul, the tongue furred, the appetite becomes disturbed, nausea and vomiting occur, there is a rising and souring of food caused by the acidity of the stomach, and the stomach and bowels become distended causing flatulency. Unless these symptoms are met with immediately, dyspepsia or some other serious trouble is liable to follow as a consequence.

That grand old remedy, Burdock Blood Bitters, has been on the market for the past forty years, and we claim, without any fear of contradiction, that there is not another medicine on the market to-day that can compare with it for the cure of all disturbances of the stomach. Miss Lillian E. Phillips, Plumwescop, N.B., writes: "My stomach was so bad I was in pain and misery. I could eat hardly anything. I had been treated by skillful doctors for it, but they did me no good. I was giving up in despair when I happened to hear of Burdock Blood Bitters. You can't think how fast it helped me, for I had only taken two bottles before I was better. I will recommend your medicine very highly to all my friends and sufferers."

Burdock Blood Bitters is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

A Romance of Monte Carlo

They had raised the hill of La Mortola now and were passing the gates of the Villa Hanbury. Then they began the steep descent that leads to Ventimiglia.

Carslake was practically safe now and when the houses of the town came into view he turned to his companion "I want you to shake hands with me," he said. "I have no words to thank you with. We'll be in the town in a few minutes now and it's better that we say good-bye here. I don't even know your name."

"Adams," she said.

"Adams isn't all your name."

"Jane's the other part."

They shook hands and she laughed.

"I expect I'll be back late for dinner. We are staying at the Beau Rivage—I ought to have given you my address as well as my name. I'm staying with my uncle, John J. Adams."

"I know that name," said Carslake. "He is the financier."

"Yes."

They had passed the city boundary now and Carslake was safe.

"You are going to the railway station?"

"Yes," replied Miss Adams. "I must, for form's sake, though what I'll say to Mrs. Adams I don't know. There's just the chance that the Genova train may have started and if that's so, I'll have no trouble. Other wise, I'll have to tell lies and pretend that I came on just for a freak."

When the car stopped at the railway station, Carslake wriggled out of the coat, gave up the goggles and got out.

"I shall be staying at the Hotel Angst, Bordighera," he said. "It's only three miles or so from here; why not bring your uncle over to luncheon some day?"

"Why not come and have luncheon with us?" she laughed. "Funny, isn't it? You couldn't if you wanted to."

"Couldn't I?" said Carslake. "What do you bet me I don't? However, we'd better leave the thing open."

"Yes, that's the best way," said the girl.

She got out, they shook hands and she went into the station.

Carslake was at home in Ventimiglia—it was his base of operations; and at the Hotel San Filippo he had some luggage always waiting him and a room reserved.

He went to the hotel, ordered dinner and after dinner called upon a gentleman not connected with the Italian diplomatic service. The interview lasted till eleven o'clock that night and after it was over he found himself free of business for some day to come, with the fruits of his labor in safe hands, to be transmitted to headquarters.

He was not thinking of this as he walked back to the hotel; he was thinking of Julia. The excitement of the last few hours had put her from his mind and, now that he was free to think, she returned in the form of an image living and potent.

This ghost which he could not lay was asking him a question which he could not answer: Of what use is it to a man if he gains the whole world and loses the woman he wants.

Julia was in his hands and he could have clasped and held her—and he had let her go. He had played Jack Leval's game when he might have played his own.

He felt he had done the right thing, but that feeling brought him very little satisfaction. He had let Julia go—spurned her, almost, from him.

Arrived at the hotel, he went to his room.

THE PRESS RECOMMENDS GOVERNMENT WAR FILMS

"Canada's Fighting Forces," the remarkable six reel motion picture taken by Lieut. D. J. Dwyer of the 30th Battalion, received an enthusiastic reception at their first showing in Toronto. The Toronto News said: "The pictures are undoubtedly the finest that have ever been seen in Toronto and offer a wealth of education and interest that would cheer the heart of the most pessimistic Britisher. They deal with the handling of the Canadian troops from the moment of embarkation at Victoria up to the now historic fight where Canada made her name immortal among the nations of the world."

Of course, as they are the Official Canadian Government films, every possible opportunity was given the cameraman to make a full record of the life of Canadian boys in khaki overseas and the result has been the most wonderful military film ever made. In one scene, when His Majesty the King reviewed the Canadians at Shorncliffe, over forty thousand troops are shown and the visit of Major General Sir Sam Hughes and Premier Sir Robert Borden has been made an interesting part of the picture. The work of the many service corps which controls the distribution of ammunition and the feeding of the army. The Duchess of Connaught's Canadian Hospital at Clivedon and the Queen Canadian Hospital at Beachborough Park, Shorncliffe, both show the admirable work done by the Canadian nursing sisters and the splendid care taken of our boys when they are wounded. Particularly prominent in the film are the 42nd Highlanders, the 23rd Battalion and the 22nd French-Canadian Battalion. The latter are shown at a military mass where Cardinal Bourne gave them his blessing before they departed for the firing line. Of course, the trench work is thrilling in the extreme and the use of hand grenades—the high explosive weapons of modern warfare which are now so largely used, are among the most fascinating parts of this remarkable six-reel film, which holds an audience spellbound from beginning to end. The first performance in Ottawa was attended by Their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Connaught and Princess Patricia, who were very much delighted with the showing made by Canadian troops as so well displayed on the screen.

They will be shown in Fredericton for two days, at the Gaiety Theatre, on February 16th and 17th, an admission price of 25 cents being charged. In most places the prices for this picture have been 25, 50 and 75 cents.

VALENTINE DESSERTS.

Fruit Jelly.

The housewife who has on hand some of her own jelly made from raspberries and currants can make a most artistic dessert for a St. Valentine's luncheon. If the dining room is not too warm it will also serve as a centerpiece. Melt a pint of the home-made jelly and set aside. Have ready half a box of gelatine dissolved in half a cup of cold water. Bring to a boil in an agate or porcelain saucepan one scant cup of sugar, one cup of tart orange juice and the juice of half a large lemon. Add the gelatine to this, the melted jelly last and bring to a simmer for a few minutes; then pour through a jelly bag into a pitcher. Dip a deep, heart-shaped mould into cold water, shake out the water, but do not wipe with a cloth. Settle this in a bed of chopped ice, and pour in enough of the jelly to cover the bottom of the pan to the depth of half an inch. Have ready a cupful of nicely prepared fresh fruit, small sections of peeled oranges, seeded Malaga grapes, sliced banana, bits of preserves or candied pineapples. When the jelly has formed a little, arrange a layer of the fruit, sticking it deeply enough in the half-formed jelly so it will not move; then pour another layer of melted jelly over the fruit. Continue this process until the mould is full. Set away on ice to chill, turn out on a cut glass dish and surround with whipped cream.

Cupid Cakes.

Warm but do not melt half a cup of butter. Cream with this two cups of sifted sugar, pulverized or confectioners' sugar preferred. Add very slowly half a cup of sweet milk and alternately the whites of four eggs and one-half cup of sifted flour. Finally add a teaspoonful of vanilla or half a teaspoonful of almond flavoring and one heaping teaspoonful of baking powder. Bake in square pans. It should be two inches or a trifle less in thickness when baked. Cut this, when cool in heart-shaped cakes (the scraps can be used for queen pudding later) and ice with rose icing. To make the latter, drop into a cold bowl the white of an egg and a teaspoonful of cold water. Stir into this gradually fifteen confectioners' sugar, rose flavoring and cochineal coloring. When this is thick enough to spread, but not run, ice the tops and sides of the little cakes. It should be a delicate pink. In the centre of each iced cake you can stick half a candied cherry with two leaf-shaped bits of angelica.

DICTATES OF FASHION.

1830 styles will prevail for spring.

Jet is a trimming being pushed to the fore.

A fad for ball buttons of steel is to be noticed on the imported frocks.

Suede leather, it is said, will replace the glazed and patent leather for the spring.

Chamois leather is now being made rainproof and comes in brown, gray and natural color.

Whole bodices or corselets of the jet sequined net are being used, and wide bandings of heavy sequins match on the skirts.

A riding costume recommended for the south is of cream silk striped cheviot, and trimmed with white, glazed kid collar and cuffs, the buttons of white pearl.

Shoulders are sure to be sloping with the sleeves slipping down as they will for the spring. The sleeves will also flare at the wrists.
