How You May Throw Away Your Glasses

The statement is made that thousands wear eyeglasses who do not really need them. If you are one of these unfortunates, then these glasses may be ruining your eyes instead of helping them. Thousands who wear these "windows" may prove for themselves that they can dispense with glasses if they will get the following prescription filled at once: Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Dissolve one Bon-Opto tablet in ½ glass of water. With this harmless liquid solution bathe the eyes two to four times daily, and you are likely to be astonished at the results right from the start. Many who have been told that they have astig-matism, eye-strain, cataract, sore eyelids, weak eyes, conjunctivitis and other eye disorders, report wonderful benefits from the use of this prescription. Get this prescription filled and use it; you may so strengthen your eyes that glasses will not be necessary. Thousands who are blind, or nearly so, or who wear glasses might never have required them if they had cared for their eyes in time. Save your eyes before it is too late! Do not become one of these victims of neglect. Eyeglasses are only like crutches and every-few years they must be changed to fit the ever-increasing weakened condition, so better see if you can, like many others, get clear, healthy, strong magnetic eyes through the prescription here given. The Valmas Drug Co., of Toronto, will fill the above prescription by mail, if your druggist cannot.

A prominent City Physician to whom the above article was submitted, said: "Bon-Opto is a very remarkable remedy. Its constituent ingredients are well known to eminent eye specialists and widely prescribed by them.
It can be obtained from any good druggist and is one of the very few preparations I feel should be kept on hand for regular use in almost every family."

Helping Hersey

BY BARONESS VON HUTTEN

[Author of "Pam," "Kingsmead," "The Black Patch," etc]

Barnes started, honestly horrified.
"Oh, but you can't do that. You can't possibly, you know. It—it wouldn't do at all."

"There—that's just what they'll say—Mother and Alfred, I mean. I thought you would be more—more sympathetic."

Her voice broke and she put a corner of her handkerchief into her mouth, as if to stifle a sob—a childish gesture that seemed to him infinitely touching.

"I am sympathetic," he said gently, "indeed I am, Miss Frewen. But I really don't see how you can go on the stage."

She looked at him seriously, sometimes very like reverence in her great eyes.

"Don't you? Really, I mean, when you think? Lots of girls do; nice girls, I mean."

"I know. But it's an awful life, and you are too—too—well, I don't quite know how to put it, but you are," he said lamely.

She turned and bent over the fire.
"Besides," he resumed, snatching frantically at his ebbing dignity, "your mother would hate it."

"I know. Oh, Mr. Barnes, I am very fond of Mother, indeed I am, but we are very unlike. I suppose I'm like my poor, darling father," Barnes winced—"and—don't think me horrid, but—I can't stay there any longer. I must get away; I must, really."

She clasped her hands in her lap and again looked at him.

There was a short pause, during which the old lady, whose eyes were excellent, though her ears were not quite what they should have been, watched them closely. Then Barnes said with an effort that made his face appear to the observer rather fine:

"But—Mr. Cox? When are you to be married?"

Hersey hesitated.
"He—he wouldn't like it, of course but—well, I might just as well tell you the whole truth. I—I am not going to marry him—ever."

The fire as which Barnes was looking seemed suddenly to go out, then to leap to the ceiling.

"Not to marry him ever," he repeated stupidly.

"No. Listen, Mr. Barnes. I—I know you think it horrible of me, but —don't—care for him. I never did.
I only said I would marry him in order to get away from Mother. There, now it's out."

Barnes did not speak.

"I love Mother," she continued wistfully, "but we are so unlike—I simply can't go on living with her. And I hate Bloomsbury, and I hate being poor, and I want to see people and have a good time. I—I even want clothes. Now you will loathe me, but I can't help it."

Tears stood in her eyes, but did not fall as she gazed at him with a curious expression of mingled shrinking and bravado.

"I understand," he said slowly. "I understand perfectly. But Cox is very—nice. And—excuse me for speaking plainly—he loves you and would take good care of you."

She shook her head impatiently and the accumulated tears suddenly rolled down her cheeks.

"He shan't take care of me. I don't love him, and I think it is vile to marry a man one doesn't love.
So there you are. I wanted to ask you to help me persuade Mother about the stage, or at least to help me through the worst of the row.
She likes you—and then you knew my father. I thought," she went on imply, "that you might help me for my father's sake."

Barnes rose and walked to the window. The fog was closing in now and it was very dark. Some one behind him, presumably the old lady with the good ears and the good eyes, switched on the light. With it, Barnes's heart rose with a bang that nearly took away his breath.
He went straight back to the fire and stood in front of the girl, thus hiding her from the old lady, whose cap strings quivered with thwarted curiosity.

"Hersey," he said in a low voice,
"if you really can't marry Cox—will you marry me?"

It was done and it seemed years before she answered. There was a green wing in her little black hat and as she sat with bowed head the green wing held Barnes's gaze with a sort of fascination. There were eleven little black spots on it and two larger spots of a bright orange. And time went on.

The old lady at this unture left the room, closing the door carefully.
Barnes wondered why she had gone.
Was it that she had an engagement, or was she just kind? Nine, ten, eleven little black spots on the wing.

Then Hersey spoke.

"I—I am going to cry," she faltered.

Then she cried, beautifully and inoffensively cried, without reddening her nose or mottling her complexion, without any ugly sounds.

"Don't," Barnes faltered, sitting down by her. "You mustn't. Please don't—I am sorry I said it. Forget all about it. I was a fool." She looked up.
"It isn't that," she said, nearly in a whisper. "It's—it's only that I am so—glad!"

VI.

When Barnes was again alone, he went for a walk. Hersey had gone home to write to Cox and Barnes had no doubt but that the young man would come to see him that evening.
The interview promised to be a painful one, but Barnes was too convinced of the fairness of his act, as well as too strangely happy, to dread it overmuch.

SOME NEW RECIPES

Cup Cake.

One cup butter, 2 cups sugar, 4 eggs, 1 teaspoonful baking powder, 3 cups flour, 20 drops extract bitter almonds.
Rub the butter and sugar to a cream, add the eggs two at a time, beating five minutes after each addition, sift together the flour and powder, which add to the butter, etc., with the extract. Mix into a smooth medium batter. Bake in well greased cups or muffin pans in a rather hot oven for twenty minutes.

Salmon Loaf.

Mix all together and put in buttered pans 1 can salmon, either red or pink; 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, 1 cup of milk, 1 egg, 2 crackers rolled fine and a teaspoon of butter. On top put ½ cup milk, 1 cup rolled crackers, ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, 1 teaspoon poultry dressing, ½ cup of water, 2 teaspoons butter. Bake one hour in moderate oven. Is good both hot and cold.

Delicious Chocolate Cake.

One egg, 1 cup sugar, 1 tablespoon melted butter, ½ cup sour milk, 1¼ cup of flour, 2 heaping teaspoons cocoa, or 1 square melted chocolate, ½ teaspoon soda in ¼ cup boiling water.

Two quarts beef stock, 1 small onion, 1 can tomatoes. Boil a piece of shin five or six hours in enough water to make about two quarts of stock.
Turn in a can of tomatoes and onion and cook until tomatoes are soft; then thicken with a little flour, season with salt and strain. Serve very hot.

Hot Milk Cake.

Two eggs well beaten, 1 cup of sugar, 1 cup of flour, 1 teaspoon of baking powder, pinch of salt. Warm together half a cup of milk and 1 teaspoon of butter; when butter melts add to the above. Nice for layer cake.

LUNCHEON DISHES.

Tomato fritters are very nice. This is how they are made: Cook one can of tomatoes, six cloves, one-third of a cup of sugar, and three slices of onion, for twenty minutes. Then rub all through a sieve except the seeds and season with a teaspoon of salt and a few grains of cayenne pepper.

Melt one-fourth of a cup of butter and when bubbling add one-half a cup of cornstarch and the tomato gradually. Cook two minutes and then add one egg slightly beaten. Pour into a battered shallow tin and cool. Turn on a board, cut in squares or strips, roll in crumbs, then egg and crumbs again; fry in deep fat and drain.

Old Fashioned Baked Beans.

The real old-fashioned baked beans are made as follows: Soak a pint of beans all night in cold water. Drain and put in fresh cold water. Simmer and when the skins are nearly ready to break, which you can tell by blowing on a few of them, take from the fire and drain. Cut off a slice of scalded and rindless salt pork and put in bottom of bean pot. Fill the pot with the beans and bury the pork in it.

Mix a teaspoon of salt with a tablespoon of molasses and three of sugar; add a cup of boiling water and pour over the beans to fill the pot. Cover closely and bake in a slow oven for six hours or longer. Take the lid from the pot during the last hour to brown the beans.

FOR BUSY HOUSEWIVES.

If busy housewives can spare an hour or so each day in the exercise necessary to retain her youth and beauty, all well and good; but if not, each daily task can be utilized to improve some part of the body. Dashing cold water, followed by hard rubbing, tones up the skin and prevents colds, improves the circulation and takes no more time than a languid rub with a wash cloth. Even dressing can be made useful in this respect when the housewife leans down to button her shoes. The knees should be kept rigid and the bending should be entirely at the waist. Instead of sitting to dress the hair, hang the mirror at a convenient height and as you put in the pins rise and fall slowly on the toes, keeping the chest well up. This strengthens the back and ankles to a great extent.

HELP FOR MRS. NEWLYWED.

"I have some machine grease on a blue linen dress, and I am afraid to use anything that will take out the color.
Do you know of anything that will take out the grease, but not hurt the color?" asked Mrs. Newlywed.

"Rubbing the stains with cold water, ammonia and soap will take out machine grease without harming the color," said Mrs. Neighbor.

Slants Of Humor

THE REALISTIC REPORTER.

Professor Brander Matthews, the famous critic, said at a tea in Brooklyn:

"Realism is less pleasing than idealism. Hence idealistic writers like Hall Caine or Sydney Harrison sell better than realists of genius like Pasternak or Mr. Howells."

"Realism is less pleasing. I once knew a reporter who was sent to write up a charity ball. His copy came in late—it was not edited—and the city editor said to him the next day:

"Look here, Scribbler, what do you mean by writing in this ball story, 'Among the most beautiful girls was Alderman Horatio Dingleley.' Old Dingley ain't a beautiful girl. He's one of our principal stockholders, you duf!"
"I can't help that," said the realistic reporter. "That's where he was."

SPRING POME.

There's sumpin in the air, I've noticed it everywhere;
For work I have no taste,
It seems an awful waste—
I guess it's Spring.
