

REVENUE FROM ODD SOURCES HELPS DEFRAY GOVERNMENT COSTS IN THE OLD COUNTRY

(New York Sun)

Revenue from some odd sources helps to defray the high cost of government in Great Britain, even though the two chief reliances of the Exchequer are the income tax payer and the national thirst. For instance, the lure which gaudy uniforms has for native dandies in Africa creates a regular demand through second-hand dealers for cast-off Horse and Foot Guard apparel. Then, too, another unique source of revenue is a steady stream of "conscious money" which his found its way into coffers of the State every year since early in the war. The old England conscience—possibly a collateral of the new—appears to be more active some years than others. In 1928-29 it urged anonymous gifts totaling $75,000, the largest sum of the sort in eighteen years. Last year it could not have been so exciting, as only $5,500 was contributed. Nevertheless, since 1915 the total has exceeded $200,000. As it requires an exploration of formidable official reports to get at the unusual sources of revenue, the average Briton is surprised when he learns that among the regularly dependable national revenue producers are such things as the centuries' old royal grapevine at Hampton Court, which brings in between $2,000 and $3,000 a year or the deer that roam over the royal park. The report just issued by the Commissioners of Crown Lands indicates that the sum of $1,820 was obtained in the last fiscal year from the venison, venison fees, skins and horns of deer of the Windsor parks, and $16,110 from the sale of timber and produce of those domains. The Commissioners sadly relate however that this total revenue of $17,930 is more than offset by the expenditure on maintenance of Windsor Great Park, which runs to 5,000 acres; Home Park the demesne of Windsor Castle, and 6,000 acres of woodland and heath.

The gross annual income derived from Crown lands amounts to $8,958,770, principally from office, shop and house property. Had several of King George's ancestors been more careful in the sale or sparing in the gift of urban and rural Crown acres that were once under their control and within their dispensation the revenue today would be far greater than it is. From the time of the Norman Conquest until Queen Anne ascended the throne—a matter of six centuries—the English sovereigns could do as he pleased with such lands. Often when the ruler was in need of ready cash he mortgaged or sold parcels of it. There were occasions too, when he conferred valuable portions on his favorites. When James I came to the throne he succeeded to an inheritance large course of redevelopment, a large estate adjoining Victoria Park, and considerable areas in the Strand, Oxford street, St. James's the neighborhood of Whitehall and Grosvenor Road and extensive tracks in Kensington and other parts of the metropolis, particularly its outer fringe.

BACK TO THE TRENCH

Nebraska City, Neb. Sept. 27—World war trenches furnished an idea for Lawrence Gibbs, war veteran, when he lost his job. He found a likely site in the side of a river bank and dug out a neat little shelter. With a stove bunk and a few utensils he aims to keep cozy all winter.

ELECTRIC WONDERS AT THE GARDEN SHOW

New York, Sept. 25—A preview of some of the electrical marvels which will be seen at the Madison Square Garden was given last night in the Madison Square Garden Club for the benefit of newspaper men.

The eleven day show is the first to be held jointly by the radio and electrical industries since 1923.

Dr. O. H. Caldwell, president of the New York Electric Society, demonstrated the new cathode ray device with which the show will be opened by President Roosevelt from the White House. The President's own handwritten message will appear before the audience in Madison Square Garden in letters of fire at the moment it is written.

Another invention demonstrated was an amplifying attachment which enables various musical instruments to be imitated by a pianist playing on an ordinary key-board.

Among the displays on the lower floor will be a theater of scientific wonders and a complete police radio system in operation. Actual reception of radio alarms broadcast from Police Headquarters will be interpolated on a large table-map of the metropolitan area showing the position of every cruising radio car.

The American Radio Relay League will maintain a booth for the reception and transmission of short-wave messages. Contact will be made with cities in all parts of the world.

DEATH SENTENCE

San Jose, California, Sept. 26 — The death sentence was pronounced today upon David A. Lamson, young Stanford University publishing house representative convicted of wife murder, after he had professed innocence in a statement in the court.

NEW BRUNSWICK PROTESTANT ORPHAN'S HOME

OFFICE, ROOM 12, 50 PRINCESS STREET
SAINT JOHN, N.B.

TO THE PROTESTANT PEOPLE OF NEW BRUNSWICK:—

SEPTEMBER 27th, 1933.

Dear Mothers and Fathers: Suppose your little one or little ones were left alone because suddenly the hand of death entered your now happy home and took away either or both of you. Unless relatives can step in and keep your home together; or take into their care your children; or your estate can provide competent help to keep your home and children together; what else can be done in fairness to the children, but to ask other Mothers and Fathers and others to help support them in the Home. Just exactly this, is what very many widowers and widows are asking of you today.

Or suppose your unmarried daughter made the mistake that is made far too often today. Naturally you would want to help her in every way you could; and you would do so almost every other mother and father similarly placed would do; namely, try to cover same up as completely as possible. At the rate of approximately four such cases a month, we give such daughters another fair start in life; and such babies at the same rate are placed by your Home under agreements of adoption into good homes as loved and loving sons and daughters. Is this not worth while in every way that you can look upon it? As Your Home only takes first offence cases, it cannot be truthfully said that repentance is made easier. You know not whose daughter may be the next. Therefore which is the wiser? To throw stones, or to respond to the cries from the broken hearts of many other mothers and fathers by sending in now your contribution to this valuable work.

Dear Brothers and Sisters: Suppose your brother or sister, or brothers and sisters, were left alone because the hand of death suddenly entered your now happy home, and both your parents were taken away or either was taken and the other was not able to keep the home together; or no other relatives could help care for little Brother and Sister; what else could be done in fairness to little Brother and Sister but for you to ask other Brothers and Sisters and others to help you support them in the Home. Just exactly this, is what many Brothers and Sisters are asking of you today.

Dear Other Relatives: Suppose a little one, or several little ones, were more or less related to you and became bereft of either or both parents. Naturally you would want to help them; yet it is impossible for you to either go to them and thus keep their home together, or take one or more of them into your own home. In fairness to the children they enter the Home. Surely you want to do your part in helping to support them in your home! Many relatives of Children are asking other relatives of Children to so help today.

Dear Everybody Else: Suppose no little one can now or ever be attached as a direct responsibility upon you by any relationship of blood or otherwise. Have you not a soft spot in your heart for one of the many Little Ones who have not a direct claim for support upon any one that can respond? Of course you have, and of course you will gladly respond to the cry from these Little Ones.

Please send your gift now to: The Treasurer, P. O. Box 796, Saint John, N. B.
Thanking you in anticipation; believe us to remain on behalf of these Little Ones who cannot help themselves.

Yours very truly,

JAMES W. BRITTAIN, President.
H. USHER MILLER, Secretary.
