CHEAP RAILWAY RATES

It was stated at Montreal yesterday by an official of the C. N. R. that it would require a train fifty miles long to handle all the passengers carried by Canadian railways on their cheap week-end excursions, inaugurated last year. It goes to show that cheap excursions have not only worked out advantageously to the railways, but have made a decided hit with the public. The railways have certainly made it plain that they have been able to compete successfully with automobile traffic. Transportation officials should now be convinced that they did not know it all two years ago, and we hope that they will get it into their heads that they still have considerable to learn in connection with both passenger and freight traffic.

The low excursion rates brought the railways many thousands of passengers, many who would have stayed at home. Many of them no doubt availed themselves of opportunity to visit friends in Canada and also in the United States. The operating of low-rate excursions kept the rolling stock busy and provided work for many railway employees who would otherwise have been idle.

When the railways inaugurated the cheap excursion rates last Fall, The Mail published a short paragraph commending the idea and describing it as "good business." This paragraph was copied, with approval, by no less than fifty-two Canadian daily and weekly newspapers.

PUNK MATCH MAKER

History tells us that it was on the advice of one Thomas Cromwell that King Henry the VIII defied the power of the Pope. Cromwell was one of the big men of his time, and was closely associated with Cardinal Wolsey, Lord Chancellor of England during part of the reign of King Henry VIII. It was to Cromwell that Wolsey addressed the historic words shortly before his death, "hod I but served my God with half the zeal I served my king, he would not at mine age have left me naked to mine enemies." Whatever he may have been as an adviser to the king Cromwll was a dead failure as match maker. It was Cromwell who arranged the marriage between the king and the North German Princess, Anne of Cleves. When the king saw her he was so taken back by her homely appearance that it was with difficulty that he could be prevailed upon to go through the marriage ceremony. He divorced her and turned his wrath on Cromwell and sent him to the block.

His Royal Highness Edward Christian Albert George Andrew Patrick, Prince of Wales and Earl of Chester, is today observing his 39th birthday, having been born at White Lodge on June 23rd, 1894. British subjects in all parts of the world will unite heartily in wishing him many happy returns of the day. His Royal Highness has visited every part of the Empire, has honored the United States by several visits and is well known in European countries. No prince ever enjoyed such widespread popularity throughout the world, and the only cause for surprise is that a man with his opportunities should be content to remain a bachelor.

Halifax Herald: In a report of the closing exercises at Sacred Heart Convent Academy, this city, we come across this paragraph:

Special Prize to the pupil who has never been late or absent once in ten years—Miss Constance Redmond.

It may be equalled, but it cannot be excelled; and it would be interesting to know if this fine record has been matched in any other part of the province.

One of the presents that a bride is sure to remember in later years is a bronze statuette about two feet high of anything.

The trouble with a man the first time he leaves his vest at home, is that he usually leaves his railroad ticket, hic change, a memorandum of errands his wife wants done, his matches, his watch and his glasses, if any, with the vest.

Bishop Hafey of Raleigh, North Carolina, says that "too many parents forgot to teach their children to be moral, thinking it smarter to have them witty." And witty children are at least as scarce as witty grown-ups.

Native boats plying the Nile use queer rectangular sails seen on no other water of the globe. Rigged like a curtain on a pole, the single sail can be rolled or unrolled merely by turning the boom.

During the first two days visitors to the Chicago Fair spent $150,000 with the concessionaires at the fair. How much of this went for beer and how much for ice cream cones has not been figured out.

Hawaiian-grown potatoes were shipped to the west coast in the largest quantities this year since the discovery of gold in California.

June is distinctly a feminine month, what with sweet girl graduates and sweet young brides on every hand.

Money talks and every little bit tells.

Even a fat chance may produce a lean harvest.

On the march—June brides.

In the crush—strawberry crush.

Excursion To Montreal

A number of local people are leaving this afternoon and evening for Montreal on the C P R excursion. The regular trains are carrying the passengers both ways. The cheap fares allow the excursionists ot remain in Montreal until Tuesday at the latest.

Taking a Chance

A down town resident says that he overheard his small daughter conclude her prayers with, "goodbye God, for a week. I'm going to St. John to visit my grandmother."

SCEPTICISM IS NOT SHARED BY VILLAGERS

Ste. Jeanne D'Arc D'Almaville, Quebec, June 22—The quarrelsome ghosts of this village are a mystery no longer, at least not to the police, although their scepticism is not shared by some of the villagers. After an inquiry lasting two days, police officers are satisfied the strange noises heard in a supposedly vacant flat were caused by certain living people who had an interest in keeping their activities secret.

Pending further investigation, however, the police refused to disclose more about the result of their investigation. Unusual things have been taking place, they admit, but ghosts have nothing to do with them.

Residents of the village became alarmed at the noises coming from the flat. It sounded as if a man and a woman were quarreling. Then the man seemed to strike the woman and during the proceedings the screams of a child were heard.

The flat is on the second floor of an old wooden structure, once used as a hotel and has been vacant for a long time. Within the past two months three tenants have moved into other parts of the building and it was they who heard the weird sounds.

PASSENGERS WERE CARRIED AT LOW RATES

(Special to The Daily Mail)

Montreal, P. Q., June 23—A train of coaches nearly fifty miles in length, would be required to handle the throng of passengers handled by the two principal Canadian railways on their low rate week end excursions since the trips were put into effect, in 1932, it was stated by A. A. Gardiner, assistant general passenger agent of the Canadian National Railways, in an address before the members of the Advertising Club of Montreal at their weekly meeting. The low rate excursions taken up somewhat timorously by the Canadian railways in February, 1932, had resulted in bringing large numbers of people back to train travel. The Canadian National and Canadian Pacific Railways have operated in all 567 excursions between points in Canada between February, 1932 and the end of May, 1933, and the fares for these journeys had been one cent a mile and even less for long distances. Between them the railways have handled 320,000 passengers between these dates.

HIKING FAD IS POPULAR IN OLD COUNTRY

London, June 23—Although Britons no longer are being urged officially on patriotic grounds to cut out globe-trotting vacations, slimmer bankrolls and the depreciated value of the pound sterling in some continental countries are strong inducements to the mass of King George's subjects in these islands to spend their holidays at home.

With no abatement in the hiking boom and a growing army of Britons taking to camping out in tents and caravans, this is likely to be one of the greatest see-Britain-first summers since the war.

Britain's colony of real Romanys will soon be greatly outnumbered by gypsies of another type—motor "gypsies" of the white-collar stratum of society, now a fast-growing section of the community, who have chosen the caravan as the week-end and holiday abode. In an interview, W. F. Little, secretary of the Camping Club of Great Britain, said there were now between 4000 and 5000 motor caravans in this country.

Holy Name Observance

RATTLESNAKES AT LARGE IN NEW YORK

New York, June 22—Householders in the Kingsbridge section of the Bronx kept their children indoors tonight when they learned a seven-foot Texas rattlesnake was at large in the neighborhood.

Four of the deadly reptiles were discovered sunniny themselves in a backyard this afternoon. Whence they came no one knew. Three of them were killed when Paul Mosher, 25, and Edward O'Rouke, 19, let go with a barrage of pavin gblocks from a safe distance, but the fourth slithered away.

Fred Taggart, of the Bronx Zoo, identified the dead snakes and said their bite would have proved fatal within 15 minutes. He said they apparently had not eaten in some time.
