THE TOWER TRAGEDY

The murder of the princes in the tower, a double tragedy of 450 years ago, has been recalled by some research work by Prof. William Wright, dean of the London Hospital. Prof. Wright was given permission to remove from the urn in Westminster Abbey the bones of the two princes, Edward V and his brother the fifth duke of York, and found evidences that they had been murdered by their uncle, King Richard III because they stood in his pathway. The name of the Earl of Richmond, who afterwards became King Henry VII, the first Tudor King, had been connected with the tragedy, but Prof. Wright is satisfied that the murder took place before the Earl came to England and defeated King Richard at the battle of Bosworth Field, King Richard was slain in that battle, after he had offered his kingdom for a horse, and his battered crown was afterwards picked up on the field.

History tells us that during the short reign of King Richard it was generally known that he had caused the death of the princes, because they were the rightful heirs to the crown. On the death of their father, King Edward IV, Richard was made Lord Protector, and one of his first acts was to shut up the two young princes in the Tower. Edward was twelve years old and his brother, the Duke of York was ten. A man named Tyrell was engaged by the king to superintend the murder of the princes and when the gruesome job had been completed, he, according to Shakespeare, who had no misgivings as to the author of the brutal crime, reported as follows:

"The tyrannous and bloody deed is done, the most arch act of piteous massacre that ever yet this land was guilty of. Dighton and Forrest, whom I did suborn to do this ruthless piece of butchery, although they were fleshed villains, bloody dogs, melting with tenderness and kind compassion, wept like two children in their death's sad stories. 'Lo, thus, 'quoth Dighton,' lay those tender babes: 'Thus, thus,' quoth Forrest, 'girling one another within their innocent alabaster arms; their lips like four red roses on a stock, which in their summer beauty kissed each other. A book of prayers on their pillow lay; which quoth Forrest, 'almost changed my mind; but O! the devil—there the villain stopped; while Dighton thus told on; 'We smothered the most resplendent work of nature, that from the prime creation e'er she framed. Thus both are gone with conscience and remorse; they could not speak; and so I left them both, to bring the tidings to the bloody king.'"

The battle of Bosworth Field was fought two years later and resulted in a signal victory for the Earl of Richmond. On the night before the battle we are told that Richard, while resting in his tent, was confronted by the ghosts of the two murdered princes, and Shakespeare quotes them as follows:

"Dream on thy cousin's smothered in the Tower; let us be lead within thy bosom, Richard, and weigh thee down to ruin, shame and death. Thy nephew's souls bid thee despair and die."

"To Richmond. — Sleep Richmond, sleep in peace and wake in joy; good angels guard the from the boar's annoy. Live and beget a happy race of kings. Edward's unhappy sons do bid thee flourish."

Shakespeare, who was born seventy-nine years after the death of Richard and lived during the reigns of Elizabeth and James I, probably had access to the records and no doubt he gave the world the facts in his great historical play, "The Tragedy of King Richard III." Shakespeare was once penalized for poaching deer, but it is not on record that he ever had to defend a libel suit during his great career as a playwright and dramatic poet.

ACTIVITY IN THE WOODS

The monthly circular of the Royal Bank of Canada, in noted increased activity in the lumbering industry in Eastern Canada says:

"Last year operations in the woods in the Central and Maritime Provinces were sharply curtailed. Approximately two-thirds of this year's large shipments have been made from manufactured stocks carried forward from previous years. As a result then of this large reduction in stocks on hand lumbermen are preparing for greatly enlarged woods activities this winter. In northern New Brunswick operations will be on a larger scale than in any year since 1922. In Restigouche County alone it is expected that the cut will reach 65 million board feet."

Greater and more intelligent use of newspaper advertising to tell of values uses and quality is the need of business today, G. W. Sulley told the clerks' section of the Minnesota State Pharmaceutical Association in St. Paul.

Paul A. May, Belgian Ambassador to the United States, says that the saxophone—invented by a fellow-countryman—"perhaps is better than it sounds." Perhaps! But how can we who can only listen tell?

California pops into the news again with a story of a golf professional and his wife shooting each other.

Here's one we can understand. Perhaps he wanted her to listen and she didn't want to.

Times are so hard and money to tight that in five sessions of a stamp auction enthusiasts have spent only $250,000 for additions to their collections.

A correspondent wrote to Gene Morgan, "scientists seem to have agreed that the California earthquake originated in the bed of the ocean. Maybe a slat broke."

Nearly everyone in civilized countries has seen an airplane, but there are still some who can boast they never looked inside one.

When the law doesn't make sense, a good lawyer convinces the judge with precedents.

Man does but work from sun to sun, but woman's work is never done—if she has small children.

California has developed a turkey with full breast and short legs, but has been unable to get rid of the neck.

Sound money is doubtless the kind the producers of the talkies make.

THROUGH OUR SIEVE

Reserved people are those who let others do the handclapping.

Born leaders can absorb great quantities of praise—which they often deserve.

The wolf cuts a large figure in literature; but as a beast, he has almost disappeared.

A man who is perpetually giving orders finally finds a vocation where there is a deal of that.

Alas! If you use good manners where others don't they may be interpreted as a yellow streak.

Things aren't so bad now. The open-face envelopes found in the waste basket have been opened.

Always marching toward moviedom is a great army of talented youth. "Acting" becomes one of the five professions.

In a hick town, a social butterfly is one who can tell where the hostess borrowed each set of spoons.

It is much easier to be humble if you have the power to smash anybody who takes advantage of it.

A man's success is not measured by the people with whom he can boast of shaking hands, but by the people who boast of shaking hands with him.

32 Diplomas Given At Agriculture Short Course Closing

Thirty two diplomas were presented to successful students at the closing of the 11th Annual Agricultural Short Course School at the Dominion Experimental Station, Fredericton yesterday afternoon by Hon. Lewis Smith, Minister of Agriculture.

This school, which has been in operation now for the last eleven years was said to have been the most successful yet held by the Department of Agriculture. Hon. Mr. Smith in delivering the main address at the closing exercises referred to the benefit of the short course schools and pointed out that some of the most progressive farmers in New Brunswick today were those who had gone through the school in former years. He spoke, too, of the remarkable growth of such organizations as the Calf Clubs and Swine Clubs within the province and referred to the bright spots in the agricultural situation in New Brunswick today, as compared to a year ago.

Another feature of the closing was a duet by L. Bellefleur and Alfred Laforge, two of the students. The complete list of students awarded diplomas follows: Leopold Cyr, St. Francis; Narcisse Devout, Clair, Camille Ouellet, Baker Lake, Vincent Daigle, Baker Brook, Aril Cyr St. Hilaire, Archie Picard, Edmundston, Dennis Ouellet, St. Joseph; Rolland Grondin, St. Jacques, Albert Cyr, St. Basile, Enoil Ringette, Green River Edouard Martin, Ste. FIRST CENTRAL BANK

The following notice reproduced by the Newcastle Advocate from an old paper shows that Fredericton once had a central bank but of a different type from that soon to be established in Canada:

Notice is hereby given that George Kerr, Esquire, of Chatham, in the County of Northumberland, is duly authorized by the President, Directors and Company of the Central Bank of New Brunswick, to manage and conduct an Agency for that Institution, in Chatham, from this date.

GEORGE BOTSFORD, President Fredericton, 18th January, 1851.

LICENSES EXTENDED

All motor vehicle licenses chauffeurs' licenses, and operators' licenses, issued by the Department of Public Works in New Brunswick, have been extended to March 31, 1934. Announcement of the extension, was made this week by Hon. D. A. Stewart, Minister of Public Works. This custom has been followed in New Brunswick for several years past and the action is based on section 98 of the Motor Vehicle Act.
