Preparations Are Being Made for the Session at Ottawa

The Most Important Business Will Be In Connection With the Macmillan Report on Banking; A Feeling Exists That There Should Be More Public Speaking and Greater Publicity.

OTTAWA, Nov. 6—A great deal of routine business, particularly regarding relief measures, is being disposed of and preparations are under way for the Parliamentary session, but, outwardly, Ottawa at present is not as active as usual. Since his return from the west Premier Bennett has been continuously engaged, but there have been few Cabinet Councils.

The sequence of political events in the Provinces furnish no great inspiration. Many well-wishers of the Government, and even members of it would be better satisfied if they did a little more shouting from their own house tops with more public speaking and more publicity of their achievements and sustained endeavors and more organization for the election, even if it is a long way off. When Parliament meets, these views, it is suggested, may find expression in the party caucus.

The most important thing to come before the House is the Macmillan report. It is to be distributed, first among the members and then made public.

PHANTOM CONVICT PUZZLES POLICE

New Orleans, Nov. 6—Authorities today struggled with the problem of the phantom convict.

Everett Thompson, held in parish prison, said he was an escaped convict from the North Carolina Penitentiary. His fingerprints gave verification.

North Carolina officials sent word that Thompson was still in the penitentiary and had not so much as tried to escape.

TASHEREAU A DUCK HUNTER

Texas Guinan, Night Club Queen Passes in Vancouver

Widely Known American Entertainer Ends a Colorful Career in Vancouver Hospital

Vancouver, B. C., Nov. 5—Texas Guinan, the glamorous night club queen who was known best for her contributions to Broadway's vocabulary, died in a hospital here today of an intestinal illness. She was 49 years old.

The robust entertainer sent the phrases, "Hello, sucker," and "give the little girl a big hand," virtually around the world.

Born Mary Cecelia Guiana in Waco, Texas, she experienced a Kaleidoscopic career that ran from the plains to the picture making of early Hollywood and then to a noisy New York climax that was studded with courtroom battles with the prohibition law.

On Western Tour
She had been absent from Broadway much in the last three years and just had completed a Pacific Coast theatrical tour with her troupe of girls. She opened here on Oct. 28 and had another engagement scheduled at Victoria, B. C., this week.

"I can't go on with this pain, but I must go on," she told Dr. J. A. McLachlan, president of the British Columbia College of Physicians and Surgeons, when he was called to attend her.

After her operation Saturday forenoon she seemed to rally somewhat, but from early last night until her death she was semi-conscious and apparently was aware that the end was coming.

Miss Guinan for a time wrangled cattle on her father's ranch, when she 14, and was educated in a convent. After her father moved to Denver, she won a scholarship at the Chicago Conservatory of Music. From an obscure start Hollywood cast her in more than 100 motion pictures in the early days of the screen and there she earned the sobriquet of "the female William S. Hart."

Soon after 1920 her name began its Broadway ascent. For financial support she had Larry Fay, slain taxicab and labor promoter. By 1928 her "Three Hundred Club" in West 48th Street, New York, was in its heyday. Rotund visitor from the Hinterlands were "big butter and egg men." Out-

CHASE RUM RUNNERS

Rum runners, facing capture at Marysville today when accosted by an R. C. M. P. car, chose a desperate means to escape when they crowded the police car off the highway and made a temporary getaway. Neither constable was hurt. The rum runners were still being pursued late this afternoon.

Asks That Judgment of the Chief Justice Be Quashed

Montreal, Nov. 6—Harry Davis, 31-year-old gambler and former co-owner of the Frolics Cabaret, convicted on charges of smuggling and conspiracy to smuggle narcotics and recently sentenced to 14 years imprisonment and 10 lashes, has filed a plea with the Court of Appeals asking for a new trial and requesting that the judgment of Chief Justice R. A. E. Green shields be quashed.

The night-club owner entered a four page memorandum through introduced extraneousptga:t eain to his attorney Joseph Cohen K.C., M.L.A., charging that the Chief Justice introduced extraneous matter at the trial which adversely affected the defence.

Among other claims, Davis, who was sentenced to a total of 30 years on the two principal counts of smuggling and conspiracy to smuggle $200,000 worth of narcotics into the Dominion, alleged that some of the questions of law introduced at his trial were illegal.

"The judge," Davis' appeal asserted, "wrongly exercised his judgment in denying the verbal application made before the trial that the accused should be tried upon the two counts separately."

Outlining the efforts being made by the Federal, Provincial and Municipal governments to prevent sickness and disease and reduce the mortality rate, Dr. Chipman declared that the segregation of the feeble-minded and the eradication of venereal diseases are the two fundamental problems, which, if solved, will cleanse the stream of Canada's national life.

Many Plungers In Liquor Trade Likely to Lose

Large Quantities of Wines and Spirits Being Purchased in the United States by Novices To Be Delivered "If and When"—Hamburg Exporter Believes That Few Will Survive.

MONTREAL, Nov. 6—Hundreds of business men, stock brokers, bankers and many others, without the least experience of the highly skilled liquor business are plunging into it in the United States, buying large quantities of wines and spirits to be delivered "if and when" prohibition shall be repealed, according to Samuel Cohn, Hamburg exporter of European wines, who was interviewed last night in the Mount Royal Hotel.

"Many of them," Mr. Cohn said, "will lose their money, because they know nothing of a trade which is a difficult one. I expect that a bare fifty will survive out of each thousand new firms venturing into the liquor business."

In the pre-prohibition era Mr. Cohn knew perhaps a hundred real experts in vintages in the United States. The dry years that have intervened have accounted for many of them. There are perhaps 30 or 40 left, and a large proportion of these are established in other businesses now.

POLA ANGERED OVER STEP-INS

New York, Nov. 6—Pola Negri, ex-otis star of screen and stage, tonight issued a vigorous denial that a pair of her step-ins had been seized upon early this morning and exhibited as prize loot in high society's latest fad, a game called "schvenger hunt."

Miss Negri was fairly having fits at the Hotel Ambassador as a result of the episode, in which Henry J. Topping and Bobby La Branche, of the Social Register, waved a pair of scanties bearing her autograph before a large gathering of upper crust folk at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel.

"I'm Miss Negri informed the United Press, "am humiliated. I am deeply off half of his beard during the trip in humiliated. I am perturbed. I am on the verge of taking drastic steps."

The Imperial Parliament Will Reassemble Tomorrow

Signs of a Gathering Storm Are Looming Up On the Horizon in Great Britain

London Nov. 6—Parliament will resume its session tomorrow with signs of a gathering storm that have led some political prophets to hint at dissolution next spring with a straight party fight at the polls.

Victories in municipal elections and success in recent by-elections are stirring the Labor Party to new political efforts. Liberal followers of Sir Herbert Samuel are moving gradually from their attitude of benevolent neutrality toward the government. Their transfer to the opposition benches is considered only a question of time.

Disarmament will give the opposition its first chance to strike at the government. Disarmament debates usually are more or less academic with speeches following a stereotyped course. But the government now has to meet a many-sided criticism. Some who see security only in armaments want a bigger navy and a bigger air force. Some would wipe out such international obligations as those exemplified in the Locarno treaties.

Labor on the other hand wants more disarmament and threatens to issue again but political observers think such a program is unlikely of success. The British official view when expressed in Parliament, is likely to be one of disappointment over the Anglo-American inability to reach a final settlement.
