ON THE AIR!

SMALLENS TO BROADCAST OPENING PHILADELPHIA SUMMER CONCERTS

Alexander Smallens, assistant conductor of the Philadelphia Orchestra, will wave the baton for the opening broadcasts of the Philadelphia Summer Concerts season over WABC and a nationwide Columbia network, Saturday evening, July 8, from 8:30 to 9:30 P. M., A. S. T., and Sunday evening, July 9, from 8:30 to 10:15 P. M., A. S. T.

The Saturday broadcast will mark the first summer air performance of the distinguished group of Philadelphia Orchestra musicians it will be transmitted direct from sylvan Robin Hood Dell in Philadelphia's famous Fairmount Park. Such symphonic favorites as the Prelude to Wagner's immortal music-drama, "Lohengrin", and George Gershwin's Piano Concerto in F will be included in the initial presentation. Harry K. Kaufman will be at the piano for the Gershwin number.

FIRST DROP IN RELIEF COSTS IN UNITED STATES

Washington, July 3—The first rift in the black clouds of the depression was seen last night by experts who have made careful studies of the relief administered to jobless and the destitute in the last three years.

The Department of Labor, through its Children's Bureau, brought forward figures showing that for April of this year the first decrease was registered in the amount of money spent for relief since June, 1932.

In arriving at this conclusion the bureau took a cross section of America and received reports from 1,008 relief agencies in 120 American cities. In April those agencies spent $37,156,684; in March they spent $40,635,634.

There were indications also that there has been a substantial shrinkage in the vast army of homeless transients who have been patrolling the highways since business stagnation set in. Between March and April there was a drop of six per cent in the sixty-one cities which reported on the particular phase of the relief problem.

Personally we don't know the secret of success, but we are afraid it's work.

Properly it is good until you know people thoroughly an dthen it is better.

SHILKRET TO TAKE FIRST VACATION IN EIGHTEEN YEARS

Nat Shilkret, radio's hardest-working musical director, will take his first real vacation in 18 years when he sails for Europe at midnight, July 4, for a tour which will take him to Egypt, Italy, Spain, France, Denmark, Sweden, Holland, Scotland England and other countries. During his absence, his brother Jack will take over the baton to direct the Shilkret Orchestra in the "Evening in Paris" presentations over the WABC-Columbia network on Monday evenings at 9:30 P. M., A. S. T.

There is no conductor who can match Nat's achievement during his 18 vacationless years. In part that record includes an average of three sponsored broadcasts a week for eight consecutive years; synchronizing the music for 20 movie shorts; and recording some 30,000 selections on phonograph discs, with the aggregate sale of the records reaching millions. In that time he also has composed more than 1,000 pieces of music, having to his credit ten "hit" songs, which sold 500,000 copies each; made 12,000 orchestral arrangements for radio and records; and collected one of the finest orchestral libraries of classic, semi-classic and popular music in the world.

Nineteen hours daily is usually Nat's working hours. He rises at 9:00 A. M., and goes to bed at 4:00 A. M., having the happy faculty of being able to work constantly with little sleep. His trip, to last until the end of August, will be a complete rest, for there will be no orchestrations in his baggage. However, he will devote a large amount of time to gathering new musical impressions as he travels abroad. For the first time in nearly 20 years he will be separated from his musicians, who are today outstanding players in the radio and concert field, many of them well known as leaders themselves.

MICROPHONICS

Rubinoff, NBC's master of the violin reports that Stradivarius violin like the one he owns sold originally for about $50,000. Now they cost many thousands of dollars.

The horse may be passing out in this machine age but not in the affections of radio artists. The summer, among the NBC singers who arrange almost daily canters are Mary McCoy, Frank Luther, Ruth Lyn and Robert Simmons.

William Daly, NBC orchestra leader, whose pet aversion is golf, says he never took up the game because he feels he is too old to start in sowing his wild oats.

Tom Howard, comedian of NBC's Musical Grocery Store program, lost his job in a real Philadelphia grocery because he annoyed his employer by reciting "The Face on the Barroom Floor". All twenty five verses were at Tom's command and he delivered them so persistently that the boss urged transference of his talents to a more appropriate rostrum. Soon afterwards Howard was in vaudeville beginning his career as the "boob" comedian.

Glimpses of Louise Starkey, Isobel Carothers and Helen King before the mike in NBC's Chicago studios as Clara, Lu 'n' Em: Clara speaks with arms folded across her chest, her fingers toying with a string of beads.... Lou ruffles her hair and surreptitiously rubs her ankle.... Em constantly plays with and rattles her script.

Familiarity doesn't breed contempt in the case of Jessica Dragonette, popular songbird. After six years of broadcasting Miss Dragonette still thrilled at the magic of the mike every time she faces it.

NBC's Jim Jordan: No, we can't go to the mountains this summer—just think of all the bills we owe. Marion: Why, we can't we think of them there as well as here?

"Chess players usually live to a ripe age", remarked a speaker on the NBC air waves. "Certainly", exclaimed Ben Bernie, the old maestro. "How else would they ever finish a game?" attendant at New York book auctions attendant at New York book auctions adding to his library, which now exceeds two thousand volumes.

PRATICAL HINTS

FOR HOUSEWIVES

To save time in mending hose and also to prolong the life of the hose rub the toe, heels and other parts of the foot where wear occurs with paraffin each time the hose are laundered. Put the hose over a mender and rub paraffin on. This provides a smooth surface, which prevents frictional wear of hose against shoes. New hose treated in this manner will need little, if any, mending during the life of the upper part of the hose.

A half-cup of ammonia in the washing machine will keep white clothes snowy and will also keep the colored clothes more brilliant and clear colored.

The water in which lemon peel has soaked for several hours or longer makes an excellent rinse when taking a shampoo. The same is fine for washing the hands or adding to the bath water if you have used quite a few lemons so as to have sufficient of the liquid to give the body a rub.

If you are sewing something that requires a hemstitched edged press the material after it is hemstitched, before cutting, and cut the excess material at the far edge of the stitching to obtain a smooth finish.
