A FEMININE REFORM

While people have more luxuries these days than was the case a few years ago, and women are often accused of possessing extravagant notions, there is one notable exception, for which they are seldom given any credit. It has to do with feminine headgear. Not many years ago the average woman would look with scorn on a hat which cost less than five or ten dollars, and some creations of the milliner's art sold readily for three times the latter amount. What is the situation today? The average miss or dame, when she is in need of a hat will stroll into a chain or departmental store and purchase one, ready to wear, at a cost ranging from one to three dollars. And furthermore, the modern headgear for members of the gentler sex is just as becoming as the old time productions of fuss and feathers. Even allowing for the cost of cigarettes, which many women now indulge in, it would not be much of an exaggeration to say that the saving effected on feminine headgear in the last decade would more than make up the cost of many radio receiving sets, which now bring joy to thousands of homes. By economizing on headgear the women have rendered a good service to mankind in a time of economic depression, and one which should be appreciated by all, except those who once earned a livelihood in the millinery business. There is another commendable feature in connection with the change from high to low gear in millinery and it is this: A person who goes to church or attends a moving picture show, and sits behind one of the fair sex, now has an unobstructed view of what is going on. No longer should the approach of Easter be dreaded by the head of the household with fear and trembling.

WHO PAYS FOR IT?

The Moncton Daily Times recently published the following: "There was being distributed from house to house in Moncton yesterday a four page leaflet of a mischievous and blasphemous nature. The signature attached is that of J. Rutherford, who describes himself as 'one of the servants of Jehovah,' last month Mr. Charlesworth, Chairman of the Canadian Radio Commission, sent a telegram to all radio stations, forbidding them to broadcast the speeches of Rutherford, a foreign anti-social agitator, and the leaflet is a blasphemous attempt to justify Rutherford's utterances. New Brunswick clergymen who had sent a protest to the Chairman of the Radio Commission against the utterances are denounced in the leaflet as 'representing Satan, the Devil.' The authorities in Moncton and other cities should take steps to prevent any further distribution of Rutherford's literature. "In the meantime a question arises as to whence comes the money used in the carrying on of the propaganda of Rutherford and other agitators of his type. Copies of the leaflet referred to by the Times were recently distributed to every home in this city. The leaflet bears the imprint of a Toronto concern and as the Times says is of a 'blasphemous nature.' Judge Rutherford is the head of the International Bible Students' Association, a sect which according to the last census has eight adherents in Fredericton. One of the absurd doctrines which this sect proclaims is 'that millions now living will never die.'"

OLD-FASHIONED WINTER

How enlightening it might be to listen to conversations of the year 1973, to reminiscences of that date by gray-beards who were young in the historic winter of 1933, when on one occasion the mercury made an unprecedented drop of 52 degrees overnight and only a day later the city was buried in a beautiful cover of snow, says the New York Sun.

If we might listen in on those remarks yet to be made we might be certain to hear: "Winters are not what they used to be. We don't have old-fashioned winters any more." Winters are never what they used to be. If more New Yorkers of 1933 were wont to sit by the open fire in Co'sgress boots with a jug of mulled cider and a volume of Dickens, the current, immediate season might be more clearly recognized as just as old-fashioned as ever a winter need be.

The city fathers in making up the assessment for the ensuing year will be well advised if they work over time with the pruning knife. The city has been carrying quite a load for the past year in the way of unemployment relief, and of course the buck must be passed to the taxpayers. All readily understand that taxes are one of the sure things of this life, but we hope that the civic authorities will be able to season justice with mercy.

In the old days when money was plentiful or could be borrowed without difficulty, it was customary for politicians to promise public works. Today the most appealing promise that a government can make is economy and retrenchment, with a guarantee that it will be rigidly lived up to.

Public officials, dominion, provincial and civic, when compiling bills for traveling expenses at a time like this, should exercise extreme caution.

PERSONAL MENTION

Simile: As dumb as the average college graduate.

Speaking about Technocracy do you know what its about? Neither do we.

Ho Hum, the City Council is going into the Exhibition business, which is not so good for the taxpayers.

A critic says the dumb enjoy life more than others. What others?

Whoever dreamed the time would come when so many of us would be keeping down with the Joneses?

Maybe two can't live as cheaply as one, but they have a cheaper look.

Thieves are very clever in guessing where people will hide money. That's their business.

It is next to impossible to understand why some persons don't want you to be friendly.

Repudiation of the idea of being one's brother's keeper, relieves both from an irksome relationship.

It isn't the way that children are raised that makes them geniuses. Heaven knows what it is.

It would be fun to handle other people's money if it wasn't for the danger of catching amnesia.

The major tenet against technocracy according to a recent speaker, is that it would take government out of the hands of the politicians and statesmen and put it in control of technical experts and architects. Are we to understand that that is a fault?

Probably technocracy's chief contribution in the direction of an economic panacea is that it strikes home to the public consciousness, a newer depth to be sounded in social and economic life. In denouncing technocracy the dizzily perched capitalist forgets this. Not in technocracy itself, but in its implications, its appeals to the groping mind of today for greater social stability, lies its greatest value.

SOUTH AFRICA HAS A UNION GOVERNMENT

An Equal Distribution of Cabinet Seats Made With the South African Party.

Capetown, South Africa, Feb. 24—South Africa has followed Great Britain and New Zealand in the formation of a national coalition cabinet.

Agreements were signed today for an equal distribution of cabinet seats by the nationalist party head, Prime Minister J. B. M. Hertzog, and the leader of the South African party, Gen. Jan Christiaan Smuts.

HON. JAN C. SMUTS Who Has Joined the South African Government

It is understood that Prime Minister J. B. M. Hertzog will retain his Premiership and that General Smuts will rank immediately below the Prime Minister.

The expected announcement of the formation of a coalition Government came today following party caucuses. The South African party was said to have been unanimous in favor of the terms which the proposal met with considerable objection in the ranks of the Nationalist party.

The agreement was signed by Prime Minister Hertzog and his Finance Minister N. C. Havenga, and General Smuts and his chief lieutenant, Patrick Duncan, prominent Transvaal leader.

Six Seats Each

The agreement grants Mr. Hertzog's nationalists six cabinet seats including one for labor, while Gen. Smuts' party also will get six seats, including one without portfolio.

The expectation is the House of Assembly will be dissolved next week in preparation for a general election in July. In this event the budget would not be brought down until after the election. It is understood this is one of the terms on which Gen. Smuts agreed to be a party to the coalition.

Several vital points of policies are said to have been agreed upon. These include complete maintenance of South Africa's membership in the British Commonwealth of Nations and settlement of the native question, specifically safeguarding the Cape's native franchise.

The successful arrival at terms concludes nearly two weeks' discussion by the party leaders.

The joint statement issued by Premier Hertzog and General Smuts makes clear the two parties will retain separate identities.

WELLS RESUMED THEIR FLOW IN CALIFORNIA

Porterville, California, Feb. 24—Rain, which saturated the ground to the extent that water gushed from the burrows of ground squirrels, fell in the San Joaquin valley during late January, residents recounted today.

Artesian wells which ceased to flow 12 years ago because of a lowered water table, resumed their flow after the rains, other residents reported.

UNDRESSING RACE

St. Louis, Feb. 24—Stop-watches showed that a hoop-la girl could shed her dress twelve seconds quicker than a hoop girl. Two models staged the "race" in a St. Louis store yesterday, one dressed as a modern girl and the other as an old-fashioned miss. The modern girl required three seconds; the other fifteen.
