British Industry To Have the Benefit Of Cheaper Money

Removal of Restrictions on Capital Issues Are Announced by the Treasury — Countries Outside of the Empire Will Not Share in the Benefits—Will Help Conversion of War Loan.

(Special to The Daily Mail by the British United Press)
LONDON, Jan. 14—Removal of restrictions on new capital issues to allow British industry and trade the benefit of cheap money were announced today by the Treasury.
Restrictions were not removed, however, from foreign issues, or issues of which the proceeds are remitted directly or indirectly to countries outside the British Empire, or from the optional replacement of existing issues by new issues if they rank as trustee securities and involve either underwriting or the invitation of the public to subscribe new funds.
The restrictions were imposed to enable the government to carry out conversion of the five per cent war loan, now practically completed.

THE STUBBS CASE ATTRACTS MUCH ATTENTION

Attorney - General of Manitoba Denies That Any Vindictiveness on His Part in Laying the Charges Against Judge

Winnipeg, Jan. 13—Under gruelling cross-examination, Manitoba's Attorney-General, Hon. W. J. Major, today denied any "vindictiveness" existed on his part against Judge Lewis St. George Stubbs.
Action to remove the fiery little jurist from the County Court bench was instigated purely in his capacity of Attorney-General, Mr. Major told Mr. Justice Frank Ford, commissioned by the Minister of Justice to hear charges of judicial misconduct against Judge Stubbs.
Throughout four hours of answering rapidly-fired questions from E. J. Murray, defense counsel, Mr. Major denied there was any "feud" between the accused Judge and himself, at least as far as he was concerned. He scoffed at the suggestion he had kept the Judge under "microscopic examination" for several years, and then stressed the Court actions by Judge Stubbs, which he contended constituted judicial misbehavior.
Beyond His Rights
There was no rig. held by any Judge to criticize his fellow-jurists or courts and allege corruption, witness declared, nor should he make utterances that would "bring the courts and judges into contempt and place the administration of justice on a level with the gutter."
In his administration of justice, Mr. Major continued, Judge Stubbs was "trying to measure sentences by a ruling of the Court of Appeal." He had criticized the work of his predecessor, and wanted to "dismiss a capable court clerk because he apparently had taken a dislike to him."
It was here the controversy between him and the Judge first arose.
Also he read to the Commission the complaints received from barristers concerning alleged inability to obtain letters of administration from Judge Stubbs. An affidavit from the Court Clerk advised the Attorney-General, witness showed, that applications for letters of administration had been allowed to pile up for at least a month. In one case application had been made

WORLD EXHIBITS PLANNED FOR LEIPZIG FAIR

German City Ready to Handle 150,000
Buyers

Leipzig, Jan. 14—Despite the economic unrest, more than 30 countries are sending their products to the forthcoming Leipzig Fair, which will be attended by buyers from 72 countries.
The reservations for space already assure a well balanced display with some 8,000 exhibits. An attendance of about 150,000 buyers is expected, rivaling last years record. With a continuous history of seven centuries, the fair easily is the most important enterprise in the service of international trade. The spring fair will be held from March 5 to 12.
The fair was recommended to American business men by Benjamin Franklin, following his first visit to Europe. More than 100 American exhibits will be seen at the fair this spring, including samples of our latest labor saving and quantity production machinery.
The fair maintains over 400 branch offices throughout the world. Germany has a very vital interest at present in overseas trade and every effort is made to facilitate the international exchange of goods. Although the throngs of business men create a modern babel, the difference of language offers no barrier. An elaborate system of interpreters and a well organized international banking system enable the visitors to enjoy to business facilities of their own homes.
The exhibits are displayed as usual in the special halls in the heart of the city. One building is devoted to the toy exhibits of Germany and other countries, and overflows with some 700 different exhibits, forming by far the largest toy fair in the world. Here are first displayed millions of toys which will latter be shipped to all parts of the world, in readiness for another Christmas.
to a Chief Justice of the Court of the King's Bench because "Judge Stubbs had adopted the attitude not to have anything to do with the case" in question.
"Others started the damn thing," he was quoted as saying, "and they can go ahead and finish it."

MONCTON BROKER GETS FIVE YEARS IN DORCHESTER

J. A. Pincock Pleaded Guilty to the Theft of Bonds from a Lady Client.

Moncton, Jan. 13—John A. Pincock, investment broker of this city, was sentenced to serve five years in the Maritime Penitentiary at Dorchester here this morning by Magistrate Milton after he had entered a plea of guilty to a charge of theft of $8,500 in bonds from Mrs. Etta Chapman, Dorchester, and was taken to prison this afternoon by the R. C. M. P. after he had waived his right to appeal the sentence.
For some years Mr. Pincock had conducted an investment and brokerage office here and recently, after several sessions with creditors, in which he failed to effect a settlement, made an assignment in bankruptcy. Liabilities were given as $61,651.53, and assets at $27,982.7.

Pincock was arrested Tuesday by the R. C. M. P. after information had been laid at the direction of the attorney-general and until today was confined to a cell at police headquarters, unable to raise the bail set by the magistrate.

The court room was crowded this morning when the case was called. James C. Sherren, counsel for the accused, asked that he be allowed to be tried by the magistrate. R. P. Hartley, deputy attorney general who, with E. C. Rice and F. P. Murphy, appeared for the prosecution, agreed. After the charge was read, the accused entered a plea of guilty.

Stirring Appeal

Mr. Sherren made a stirring appeal in behalf of his client. He contended Pincock had done the same thing as many other persons had when the depression arrived, used bonds and securities in his possession to maintain his bank standing. He maintained that Pincock had no intention of that Pincock had no intention of borrow them.

Mr. Hartley said: "While I fully session of all facts and considered the case one of deliberate theft. He felt he would not be doing his duty if he did not insist that the sentence be severe."

Magistrate Milton then sentenced Pincock to five years in the penitentiary.

"Justice Accomplished"

Mr. Hedley said: "While I fully appreciate, by reason of being familiar with all the facts, the seriousness of the offence with which the accused was charged and the other offences with which he could be charged, yet, five years of liberty taken away from a man of Pincock's former position, will I think, be a great punishment to him—more so than to a man who had not held such a position of trust and enjoyed such a reputation in the community. It is not the policy of the law to punish a man unduly. On the other hand, the law is not satisfied unless a man receives such punishment as he deserves. I think that swift, silent and effective justice has been accomplished, that the punishment will prove to be sufficient and that the prompt action taken in the case will have a deterrent effect on this province in the commission of future crimes of this character. My

PARIS PREVIEWS DISPLAY SLIGHT STYLE CHANGES

Gowns Reveal No Radical Departure From Present Styles

NOTHING OF A RADICAL NATURE

(Special to the DAILY MAIL by the British United Press)

Paris, Jan. 14—If the small and private collections shown to the limited gathering of press and clientele recently is any indication of what the big collections will be the end of this month and in February—if the little parades are a sample and suggestion of what the big ones will be, we can tell you now you can be glad, just plain glad!

Glad in the first place that there will be no changes so radical that the clothes you already have can't be worn anywhere; glad because you can put your waistline wherever Nature intended it; and glad that spring and summer color schemes are going to outshine the depression.

Museum Pieces

There still are a few museum pieces in the world to whom the price tag means smartness or mediocrity, but they, like the majority of antiques, are breaking down and realizing that because a shop girl can afford to wear the same kind of a dress is no sign that there is any lack of chicness to the model in question. It isn't half so much what you wear as the way you wear it.

The dressmakers, however, will be delighted to have the museum pieces pay any price they like for exclusiveness, and are ready with their scissors to produce masterpieces. Because clothes—good clothes—have become reasonable if it doesn't mean that there are not many that will still be expensive in accord with the descending price scale of living. We are going to get better values for our money, and be better dressed at the same time, an accomplishment which only the truly great in the dress-making world are able to accomplish for us.

Whets Appetite

And now, just to whet your appetite here's what the little parades showed:

Colors: Coral, Eleanor Blue (something new), gray, pink, chartreuse green, bright purple, bright blue, lots of white and black and white, red, and a limited range of pastels.

Fabrics: A beautiful line of new jerseys—many weights and some of the oddest and most interesting designs you ever imagined; feather-weight wools, printed silks (yes sir, and lots of them too); chiffon, both plain and figured; satin and velvet.

White hats, we add as the parting shot are marching in formidable array toward the front ranks of fashion. They have colored bands around their crowns, brightening up the landscape.

entire sympathy goes out to the unfortunate people who have lost their money, and if it were possible for the attorney-general's department to do anything to assist them recovering it I would be only too glad to devote my efforts to that purpose."

Chinese Claim to Have Checked the Japanese

IS HOPEFUL OF AN ALL-IRISH REPUBLIC

Both Sides Confident of Winning the Election in the Irish Free State on January 24.

Dalkey, County Dublin, Irish Free State, Jan. 13—Sean MacEntee, Minister of Finance in President Eamonn de Valera's Government, tonight held before the electors of County Dublin the vision of an all-Ireland Republic.

"We have laid the foundation of a prosperous Ireland," Mr. MacEntee said in a speech at the little town hall here, "which will one day embrace the whole country under the flag of an Irish Republic."

If the Republicans won the Jan. 24 election, he declared, the oath of allegiance to the King would be abolished in two months.

"We have not been misled by false enthusiasm," he added. "We are going on from one step to another, marching on till the final goal is reached."

"We ask you in this election to march with us, to set your eyes as ours are set toward the goal of Irish independence."

Uprising Recalled

In the hall where Mr. MacEntee spoke arose of the Republican uprising in Eastern week, 1916.

Miss Margaret Pearce, Dublin County Republican candidate and sister of two men executed for their part in the Easter uprising, was on the platform. One of her brothers was Patrick Henry Pearce, commander-in-chief of the rebel forces, who, as provisional president, read the proclamation of a republic only to surrender later and face a firing squad.

By supporting the Republican Party, she said, electors would show that the "ideals of the Pearces are absolutely those of our noble chief, Mr. de Valera," who would be faithful to the end.

The chairman introducing the speakers, said President de Valera had always made it clear when he founded the Republican Party that its ultimate aim was a republic of thirty-two counties (including the six counties in Northern Ireland).

With election day more than a week off major parties in the fight for control of the new Dail Eireann counted their chickens today, and each announced the belief it would secure a working majority of the 153 seats.

Another Fire

Another slight fire occurred in yesterday's sub-zero weather, at the residence of William Hayes, Charlotte St. The fire was caused by an overheated pipe, but did no damage.
