SIR THOMAS WHITE, EX-FINANCE MINISTER, TELLS MANUFACTURERS DARK CLOUDS ARE ROLLING AWAY

Toronto, June 7—"I am happy to say from wide and reliable sources of information within the past few weeks there has been marked improvement. There is a much more hopeful sentiment prevailing and a new light of hope in the faces of men" said Sir Thomas White, noted financier and former Dominion minister of finance, tonight, addressing the final meeting of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association convention here.

"Unquestionably in the United States, with whose prosperity our own is always closely connected, and increasing employment and better business generally. The wheels of our great manufacturing plants are beginning to turn with accelerated speed."

Coupled with his words of optimism, however, was a solemn warning. "I trust," he said, "the recent sudden upturn in prices and in business generally on this continent will not adversely affect the success of the world conference. The danger is that the conclusion may be reached, now that better conditions are to be looked for, that there is not the same need for international cooperation."

Points Out Fallacy

"The fallacy involved in this argument is that the failure to perceive that the high expectations which have been aroused as to the success of the conference is one of the chief factors in the improvement which has taken place. Failure of the conference would mean an immediate recession to conditions such as those from which we trust we are emerging," he said.

During the day, the convention elected L. L. Anthes, of Toronto, as its president for the coming year, and briefly discussed the report of the committee on industrial relations. District reports were also presented, with practically all sections of Canada, reporting better business conditions and an upturn generally.

Sir Thomas said: "We have had a drastic deflation for more than three years. Deflation is a most painful process but given time and the ability on the part of mankind to endure it deflation will produce a basis or foundation upon which prosperity can again be firmly built. But without doubt depression through the process of deflation has always in time accomplished its own cure."

Replacement Demand

Another cause for the present improvement, he maintained, was "that things wear out and have to be replaced." Replacement meant demand and employment.

Once the price level began to rise, he thought, people would buy. They would not buy if they expected or feared prices would sink lower.

Sir Thomas paid tribute to President Roosevelt, who, he said, had moved the keylog in the log-jam of the world's confused economy, and whose leadership was "precisely what was needed to galvanize into fruitful activity the dormant economic condition which had been brought about by three years of intensive deflation."

"As to the outcome of this great world conference I make no prediction," he said, "but I do most earnestly pray for its success. International currencies must be stabilized. To stabilize currencies either in relation to gold or by 'pegging' operations, barriers to international trade and exchange restrictions must be removed or materially modified."

After referring to the causes of the depression, he said "it may be what humanity needs most is the spiritual uplift which will purge it of excessive love of riches, or greed of gain and of other sordid passions which keep its face to the ground and its eyes from the stars. 'Perhaps,' he concluded, 'the task is one for the preacher rather than for the economist or even the statesman.'"

The convention closed tonight with more than 300 delegates leaving almost immediately. For two days they had listened to reports on business and other activities in all parts of Canada.

SCHMELING AND BAER TANGLE EXCITES FANS

New York, June 7—The backdrop of another big heavyweight battle—fantastic medley of crowds and color, thrills and action—slid down today to complete the setting for the 15-round duel of Bax Schmeling and Max Baer in the Yankee stadium tomorrow night.

All the old essentials were there for another episode in the list of ring struggles that have raged over the years in the big American League ball park, even though this time the scenery lacked the gawdiness of the afluence it knew in the days of Tex Rickard and the multi-million dollar gates.

There is no heavyweight battle at stage, the special lure Rickard used to dangle before the eyes of the faithful, but the attractiveness of two young punching punchers, one a former champion, the other a reckless headstrong young giant, seems to have excited the populace as few other battles in years.

Tonight, Jack Dempsey, Rickard's greatest fighting asset and now his would-be successor as a promoter, believed his first metropolitan venture would draw a crowd of at least 60,000 and gate receipts close to $300,000, a financial triumph considering the times and ticket prices scaled from $1 to $10. A complete sell out of the ball park, something that never yet has happened for a fight, would gross $400,000.
