

CANADA'S BIGGEST ROLE In Play of Nations is in the Future.

Forecast of Lord Shaftesbury before sailing from New York.

NEW YORK.—Lord Shaftesbury, president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, who sailed for Europe on Wednesday on the Kronland, in an interview, made the following statement before his departure:

"Though bleeding with sacrifices and bending with effort in behalf of the great Empire of which she is an integral part, Canada's biggest role in the play of nations is not now, but in the future. Bright though her record may be, it is only a glimpse of what is to come. Her greatest opportunities, although secured through a trying present, will be shown when, with the war settled, she undertakes to assume the place she has fought for. Success will come measured by forethought. By fulfilling duties as presented to-day, Canada will be able to reap abundantly of the prosperity which the years, surely not far distant, will bring.

"Canadian history shows that what mistakes have had to be rectified have been those due to short vision, and that the deeds most criticized have been of over-anticipation. Between the two is the straight course of steady development. Blind faith in the country has been, to a large extent, the guiding star of the men who have built. Speculation has been a ready growth in a ground rich beyond the dreams of the most hopeful. Calm, conservative business sagacity bade the pioneers discard the thought of spanning the prairies with a transcontinental line, while bold daring built not one, but three. The success of the Canadian Pacific, the pioneer, urged others to be reckless, perhaps, but then there were those who said the construction of the Canadian Pacific was folly.

"Canada's course is the centre one, and to choose is no easy task. We do not wish to cramp our future by a narrow, limited imagination, neither do we wish to greatly over-develop and thus render the load we are now carrying too great. It is sometimes hard to realize that on the shoulders of the present the material for the future must be carried.

"Canada is an empire in itself. Its population is not a fraction of what it should be, of what it is capable of becoming, or of what it will be after the war. We are taking steps to prepare for the future, and are anticipating an immigration that should be unprecedented in Canadian history.

"When peace is declared Canada will naturally be looked upon as the promised land by many peoples of Europe. She will be in a position to choose carefully. She need take not but the best, and only by so selecting her citizenship will she build up a nation capable of performing the tasks which undoubtedly will be allotted to her.

"The war has taught Canada self-reliance as probably nothing else would have done. She has been forced to do rapidly and efficiently things which were impossible. She has expanded commercially and industrially faster than ever before, and has confidence in herself to do the things which she formerly expected others to do for her.

"In the same manner that she unhesitatingly mobilized the largest army that ever crossed the Atlantic, she has developed a sea traffic on both the Atlantic and the Pacific that is tremendous. This will be undoubtedly further developed, proving to be a powerful aid in moulding trade connections favorable to Canada after the war.

"Canada cannot go back. She is committed to expansion, but not to over-expansion. Keeping within limits justified by conditions has been hard. It is difficult in being optimistic to be not too optimistic, and here perhaps is the greatest problem.

"In the past Canada has been too eager and is now faced with the problem of over-development in certain lines.

"Politically Canada will undoubtedly take a more prominent part in the destinies of the British Empire than ever before. She will probably be asked to become one of the senior members of a firm in which before the war she was merely regarded as a junior, bright, full of promise, to be sure, but one on whom a full share of the burden should not be placed. The future is undoubtedly bright, but the advancement is fraught with problems which will require good judgment and forethought rather than good judgment in afterthought."

WHEN HE AND SHE WERE AT THE SHOW

They Look, Listen and Learn Some Secrets of the Theatre—and Other Secrets.

(New York Sun.)

He—I knew we'd be late.
She—But you said it began at 8.30.
He—But you said 8.15.
She—But you said I was crazy.
He—I thought you were. I take it back.

(Peace while they observe the antics of some of the most beautiful perfect ladies in New York.)

She—That's good, isn't it?

He—Yes, pretty good. She's not so much of a dancer as I thought she was.

She—But she's pretty, don't you think? That color is always effective.

He—I'd only give her about 60 per cent. What until "she" comes on.

She—Is "she" the one you are crazy about?

He—She is.

She—That little one there in the bathing suit and the long hair.

He—No. "She" doesn't come on until the next act.

She—You seem to know her every movement (amazedly.) George, have you been to this show before?

He—I have indeed.

She—Do you really like this sort of thing?

He—Oh, fifty-fifty. But I wouldn't bring you here unless I had seen it first. Now would I?

She—I don't want that kind of protection. What I want—

He—Hush, she "she" is—(dead silence while she enters in an urban blue bathing suit, followed by Hawaiian singers and three men in yachting costumes.)

She—That little one in front there with all the hair?

He—That's her.

She—She's terribly little, isn't she?

He—She's not as little when you are talking to her as she seems to be standing up there on the stage.

She (excitedly)—George, have you met "her"?

He (with the air of one for whom life has lost its savor)—Oh, I went on a couple of parties where she happened to be.

She—George, do you like that girl?

He (carelessly)—Oh, she's a nice little kid, she is. She's got a nice way about her, and I take off my hat to her.

She—I bet you do—to fall into your own idiom.

He—Your own language gets rather rough sometimes. Why should I keep my hat on when a lady is present? There—watch her dance. (She dances and they applaud.) Great stuff!

She—She's a good dancer, isn't she? But I don't like her hair very much. I like curly hair.

He—Opposites always attract. She told me she wouldn't have curly hair if she had the chance—that there was a certain type that banked on curly hair and that she wanted to make a name on more than her hair.

She—You have certainly become a terrible rounder, George. You are too wild for me. (Suddenly the dark hero of last year's hit appears on the stage—she gasps and leans forward.) There is he, the man I am crazy about. Do you see him, George. I didn't know he was in the show.

He (disgustedly)—Yes, I see him, the poor nut.

She—Isn't he good, George? Now, really?

He—He's good, but must you give him your heart?

She doesn't hear him.

Te (severely)—Why must you always be more partial to one actor than to another?

But she is deaf, apparently forever.

AND HE GOT IT.

"Just a moment," interrupted The Man, patiently, "I may have no objection to testing this article you are trying to substitute, all other things being equal—but are they? For example, what I want can be used internally for coughs, colds, sore throat, cramps, chills, etc., as well as externally for sprains, strains, muscular rheumatism, various other aches, pains and almost any soreness anywhere. Now can you guarantee me this double value of internal and external use? Can you also guarantee that yours is the favorite prescription of an old family physician? Do you also guarantee that it has a wonderful record of over 100 years of splendid success? Do you also guarantee—"

"Oh, of course," interposed the now embarrassed storekeeper, "I can't guarantee all that, but—"

"Then," said The Man, wearily, "give me my bottle of Johnson's Anodyne Liniment, and let me be on my way."

And he got it.

GAS IN A NEW WELL EXPLODES.

A Freak Happening at the Boring of a Well in Ontario.

Lindsay, Ont., Oct. 30.—Charles Webster, a farmer, of Fenelon township, suffered a broken arm when the gas accumulated in a well being bored on his farm ignited as he was passing with a lighted lantern.

He was blown against the house, the crown of his derby hat blown out and mud and sand were imbedded in his neck. The lantern was blown against the barn, and a three-inch plank was blown over the roof of the house. The well was 80 feet deep.

French chemists have discovered that coating the interior of containers with aluminum paint will prevent the accumulation of deposits that often come from hard water.

In the land of the living the main idea of some people seems to be to have it dead easy.
