KING ALBERT I

The entire civilized world will mourn the tragic death of King Albert I of Belgium, who on Saturday had the misfortune to fall while engaged in cliff climbing and suffered death from a fractured skull. The regrettable accident occurred at Namur, about twenty miles from Brussels late in the afternoon, but the news did not reach the public until the body was found at an early hour on Sunday morning. His Majesty will be succeeded by his son, who will on Friday of this week ascend the throne as King Leopold III.

It is doubtful if the world will ever forget the heroic part that the late King Albert played in the great war of 1914-18. At the outbreak of hostilities His Majesty took command of his troops and personally lead an army in the field. The German war lords expected to be able to overrun little Belgium without the slightest difficulty, and march right on to Paris. They struck a snag, however, when the gallant Belgian army confronted them. The Belgians pluckily contested every foot of ground and were able to keep the enemy in check until reinforcements arrived from France and England. But for the splendid resistance offered by the Belgian army under the command of their noble King, the war may have been lost by the allies during its early stages.

After the fall of Antwerp the Belgian royal family took refuge in France, as practically the whole of their little kingdom remained in the hands of the enemy. When the great struggle was brought to a close by the signing of the armistice, the King and Queen returned to their own country and were acclaimed with joy by the people.

Canadians and Americans who participated in the great war formed a high opinion of King Albert, and the news of his tragic death, has occasioned great sorrow all over this continent. Many graceful tributes were paid to His Majesty yesterday from the pulpit and over the radio. The sympathy of the entire world will go out to Queen Elizabeth, his worthy consort, who shared with him the tribulations and vicissitudes occasioned by the great struggle waged on behalf of human freedom. It may be well said of His Majesty that he was a King blessed of the King of Kings, and his name will ever be cherished by all lovers of human liberty because of the great service he rendered the world.

According to the Comptroller general's report the province had on Oct. 31st, 1933, accounts receivable and inventories totalling $1,380,292.86. There is due on such items as stumpage, royalties and wild land tax the sum of $49,092.49. Unpaid succession duties total $136,427.08. There is due from the New Brunswick Liquor Control Board the sum of $545,252.97 represented by stock on hand, $149,464.25 is due from the Electric Power Commission, $95,456.63 from the gasoline tax and $57,095.34 from the Federal government for unemployment relief.

It will probably be some time before the government house trust fund develops sufficiently to defray the cost of providing an official residence for the chief executive. On October 31st, 1932, the amount to the credit of the fund was $892.56. The interest on the $50,000 trust fund, swelled the amount by $2,635. and bank interest amounted to $11.40, making a total at the end of the last fiscal year of $3,539.55. Deducting the expenses of His Honor for 1933, amounting to $2615.70 leaves a balance of $923.35.

The civil service superannuation fund of the province totalled $49,380.65 at the end of the last fiscal year. Refunds and payments to government employees and pensions paid totalled $7,051.80, leaving a balance of $42,333.79. The amount paid out for school teachers pension during the last fiscal year was $59,347.72, of which the government provided $38,277.77 and the teachers the balance.

THROUGH OUR SIEVE

Brevity doesn't necessarily confer sense on a platitude.

We all work for publicity for that matter: Praise.

Broken hearts may be kinder, but they are not stronger.

Everyone thinks of the past and wonders why he made it as it was.

If Rip van Winkle hadn't waked up, wouldn't he have been happier?

The higher things of life are the ones you can keep right on pursuing in times like these.

Awful thought! After the depression will come books by big guns telling how they ended it.

Sects do not quarrel over the good deeds done in the name of any religion; only over the theology.

Sedentary sports; conclusion jumping, asperion casting infinitive splitting, budget balancing.

No woman is old, says Eleanor Clarke, until she stops patting herself on the back and begins patting herself under the chin.

Another thing we must ask about: Did Clyde Moores little boy, who wanted to borrow one of Kate Smith's stockings to hang up for Christmas, succeed in doing so?

Nothing depresses an attractive man so much as to discover that he has reached the age when all the girls under 25 are beginning to regard him as a confidante and to use him as a "spare."
