Unightly Pimples Covered His Face.

All diseases and blemishes of the skin are caused by the blood being in an impure condition.

You cannot make a good complexion from the outside; you must get to the seat of the trouble. You must make the blood pure and rich by taking a medicine that will drive out all the impurities and poisons from the blood; one that drives out everything from the system that is the cause of these unsightly skin eruptions.

The best blood cleansing medicine on the market today is Burdock Blood Bitters; a medicine that has been used with the greatest success for the past forty years; a medicine you don't experiment with when you buy it.

Mr. Lennox D. Cooke, Indian Path, N.S., writes: "I am writing you a few lines to tell you what Burdock Blood Bitters has done for me. Last winter my face was covered with pimples. I tried different kinds of medicine, and all seemed to fail. I was one day to a friend's house, and there they advised me to use B.B.B., so I purchased two bottles, and before I had them taken I found I was getting better. I got two more, and when they were finished I was completely cured. I find it is a great blood purifier, and I recommend it to all."

B.B.B. is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Helping Hersey

BY BARONESS VON HUTTEN

Author of "Pam," "Kingsmead" "The Black Patch," etc

"Mother and I have often lived for a week on no more than this one meal has cost, haven't we, Mother?" she asked.

Mrs. Frewen nodded gently.

"Yes, dear," she said.

Barnes, the simplest living of men, was appalled. That women were careless of their food, he knew, but that two could live for a week on fifteen dollars was news to him.

Hersey would never do it again, he told himself, with a thrill of authority. Ah, what good care he would take of her! His blue eyes were very pleasant to see as he watched the girl, and Mrs. Frewen watched him with a curious expression on her face.

After lunch she sent him home with Hersey. They were to walk, she said; the exercise would do them both good, and, besides, she had things to do.

The sun had come out. Hersey said the day was fine, at which Barnes laughed, not being acquainted with the euphemisms due to the British climate. To him the weather was just not abominable and that to her it was fine amused him. It also seemed to express not only the humility, in the matter of weather, innate in Londoners, but also a quite personal beauty of character on the girl's part.

They went to a jeweller's in Bond Street and chose her ring.

"I ought, I suppose, to come to you with it in my pocket," he said, "but tastes are so different and I don't yet know yours."

He selected, without asking their various prices, half a dozen beautiful rings from the velvet cases set before them and then asked the girl to take her choice. There were among the rings two solitary diamonds, a ruby, an emerald, a sapphire and a pearl. Without an instant's hesitation, Hersey took the ruby.

"If it isn't any—any more expensive," she said shyly, "I'll have this. I love rubies more than any other stone."

"Good. You shall have it. We must go to my bank now—I haven't the money with me."

On their way through the crowded streets she said suddenly:

"You are very good to me, Mr. Barnes."

He laughed and she went on quickly:

"I mean to say, Michael. It is such a pretty name."

And to him it was suddenly beautiful. While he cashed a check she wandered away from him and presently he heard her laugh and turned.

She was talking to a youth with a white carnation in his coat, who had evidently just come in.

"It's ages, simply ages, since I saw you," the youth was saying, in his delight dropping his glass from his young eye. "I say, it really is most awfully jolly!"

"You look fit," was her answer.

"I am, thanks, jolly fit. As to you—oh, well, words simply fail me. I say, Miss Frewen, are you stoppin' in town?"

Hersey made a face.

"'Stoppin'," she answered, imitating him, "livin'—livin' in Bloomsbury, Rotten, what?"

Barnes listened, bewildered. The jargon was to his ears so extraordinarily ugly. "Rotten" he considered a low word.

On their way back to Bond Street, Hersey explained that her friend was Sir Billy Humphreys.

"His father was a great surgeon, or something, and they gave him a baronetcy for cutting out something or other from some one of the R.F."

"R.F.?"

"Royal Family. Then the old man died and Billy got the baronetcy and the beams. We knew him two years ago in Bordighera, after I had the influenza. A nice boy," she added.

"Oh, Michael, I am so glad you are really grown-up! I couldn't have borne marrying a boy."

He laughed.

"Oh, yes, I'm grown up, all right," he answered, as they reached the jewellers'. "I—I felt an old man the day before yesterday, and now you have made me a—well, years younger."

The ring was ready, and, hurrying back to Bloomsbury, Barnes put it on her pretty, slim finger.

"I will do my best to make you happy," he declared, a little solemnly.

Then he added, "dear."

They sat down by the fire and she told him how happy she was. She said not a word about her mother, but Barnes felt that a not inconsiderable part of her happiness lay in the fact that by marrying him she would put the ocean between herself and her objectionable parent. Her loyalty pleased him.

"I should have loathed the stage," she said later. "Managers are such pigs. But I simply could not marry poor Alfred. And he really is rather a dear. I had conscience-ache all the time, ever since—ever since—the last few days."

Barnes took her hand in his. "Ever since what, dearest?" he asked, a little shyly. "You can't possibly mean that—"

She leaned her head against his arm, so that he could not see her face.

"I do, mean it, though," she said. "An Englishman would have guessed it long ago. Are all Americans as modest as you?"

Even in his bliss Barnes smiled.

"I guess we aren't any more modest than other men," he answered. But, Hersey, how on earth could you care for—me?"

The real humility in his voice touched her. She kissed his hand and then rested her cheek against it.

SUSPECTED.

One day, among other questions, relates a school teacher, I asked: "Who wrote Hamlet?" expecting some of the older pupils to answer the question, but all sat silent.

After a long pause, little Johnnie, aged seven, held up his hand, and on being called on, said:

"I didn't."

That evening, at a meeting of the township trustees, to which I was invited, I told of the incident, but before the story could be appreciated one of the trustees, a shrewd business man with very little literary knowledge, burst forth with:

"The little rascal, I bet he did!"

Woman's Column

THE "TIRED BUSINESS MAN."

(Southern Woman's Magazine.)

Are not all business men tired? If not, why do we hear so much about musical comedies and vaudeville performances that are constructed especially for the purpose of "resting and refreshing the tired business man."

If there is any one claim that has been conceded for ages past, it is this: Fatigue is much more fatal to a man than to a woman. We seldom hear of a tired washerwoman or a tired housekeeper. Nobody ever wrote a musical comedy for tired schoolmarm. It has always been held that if a man has to work at night he must sleep in the day time; but everybody knows that a woman can walk the floor all night with a sick baby in her arms and still be able to perform strenuous duties next day.

"Man's work is from sun to sun"—that being the limit of his endurance.

HOUSEHOLD HELPS.

If onions are cooked in milk in a double boiler they are very much nicer than boiled in water. Salt and butter when done, to prevent curdling.

Beets should not be cut or scraped before they are cooked, or the juice will run out and make them insipid.

To cook potatoes, put them in boiling water with a little salt. Old potatoes are very much better when peeled and let stand in cold water at least one hour before cooking.

For suet puddings or dumplings, if the suet is scraped instead of chopped the puddings will be much lighter.

WHAT WOMEN SHOULD KNOW.

To wash brushes and combs, put a teaspoonful of ammonia in a basin of hot water and dip the brush up and down in it, letting the comb remain in the water for a few minutes. In this way all the grease will disappear and after rinsing in cold water both combs and brushes will be perfectly clean.

When cleaning a carpet peel a pound of potatoes, scrape them, stir the pulp in a pail of water and strain. Wring out a cloth in the water and rub the carpet, rinsing the cloth as soon as it is soiled. Do not tread on the carpet until it is quite dry.

To clean gold lace, crumble a piece of bread without crust and mix with enough jeweler's rouge to color it. Rub this on the lace with a piece of flannel and finally with a piece of velvet.

When a tag comes off a boot or shoe lace, press a little melted black sealing wax round the end of the lace and shape it to form a tag. It will answer almost as well as the original.

Mildew on leather may be removed with a little pure vaseline. Rub this into the leather till quite absorbed, and then carefully polish with a clean chamois leather.

GRAPEFRUIT TRIFLE.

To make a grapefruit trifle, remove the fruit from two large firm grapefruit; spread some macaroons with apricot jam and line the bottom of the comport with them, cover them with a layer of the grapefruit pulp and sprinkle all with powdered sugar.

Make the boiled custard and when it is chilled color it a delicate green with the Breton coloring; heap the top with the whip and garnish the top with candied mint leaves and candied violets.

ALMOND RINGS.

Equal weight of butter, sugar and flour, one egg, almond essence. Work butter and sugar to a cream. Add with egg and essence and half the flour. Whip the white of an egg very stiff and add the remaining half of flour. Pipe in plain rings on a baking sheet. Bake quickly and sprinkle caster sugar over immediately they are done.

"SALONIKA."

If you are a Greek you will call it "Thessaloniki"; if a Turk, "Sela-nik"; if a Frenchman, "Salonique"; if an American, "Salo-niki," but if you are an Englishman—or a Scotchman or an Irishman, for the matter of that—you will call it "Salon-ika," or, as some people write it, "Salon-ica."

The old reliable remedy for rheumatism, neuralgia, sore throat and sprains.

Best Liniment Made

Mrs. A. E. LAUNDEY, Rimontor, writes: "I fell from a building and received what the doctor called a very bad sprained ankle, and told me I must not walk on it for three weeks. I got MINARD'S LINIMENT and in six days I was able to walk again. I think it the best liniment made."

Minard's Liniment always gives satisfaction. For any ache or pain. It gives instant relief.

WHAT MIGHT BE.

Kids never really see pixies and gnomes. Playing around in their queer woodland homes. Still, with the fairies much time the kids spend; they just pretend.

'Tis not a bad plan to help us through life. Most of us tire of the struggle and strife.

Just for an hour you can make fortune mend. If you pretend.

A woman's taste in selecting frockies for her husband is as good as a man's taste in selecting millinery for his wife.

A woman seldom loves her husband enough to refuse to work him for the benefit of her folks.
