

THE CHIEF CHARM OF LOVELY WOMAN

Soft, Clear, Smooth Skin Comes With The Use Of "FRUIT-A-TIVES".

NORAH WATSON
86 Drayton Ave., Toronto.
Nov. 10th, 1915.

A beautiful complexion is a handsome woman's chief glory and the envy of her less fortunate rivals. Yet a soft, clear skin—glowing with health—is only the natural result of pure blood.

"I was troubled for a considerable time with a very unpleasant, disfiguring Rash, which covered my face and for which I used applications and remedies without relief. After using 'Fruit-a-tives' for one week, the rash is completely gone. I am deeply thankful for the relief and in the future, I will not be without 'Fruit-a-tives'."

GREEK STEAMER NOT LOST.

The Barbara, Reported Torpedoed, Arrives at St. John's, Nfld.

St. John's, Nfld., Nov. 24.—The Greek steamer Barbara, recently reported torpedoed by a German submarine while on a voyage from Cardiff to this port, arrived here today.

Her captain reported an uneventful passage of sixteen days.

Sir Robert Borden's Dignity Offended by Sir Sam Hughes

The Premier Stood for the Numerous War Scandals But Did Not Like the Tone of Sir Sam's Last Letter---War Lord Behaved Like a Load of Hay for Two Years But, When He Got Saucy He Was Fired---Intrigue in the Cabinet.

(By H. F. Gadsby.)

Ottawa, Nov. 25.—The Duke of Devonshire will certainly be interested in Canada. His first official duty on arriving at Ottawa was to read a bunch of letters between Premier Borden and his thorn in the flesh, Sir Sam, which are as full of surprises as a pumpkin is of seeds. "My word!" one imagines His Excellency saying. "Things do happen here."

Perhaps the Governor General does not appreciate the surprises inherent in this correspondence to the same extent as we do who have been watching the cat jump for the last two years. For example, Premier Borden's ultimate indignation hinges on the smallest kind of grievance—the tone of Sir Sam's letter. He stands for paper shoes, Ross rifles, spavined chargers, the Bertram Shell Committee, Colonel John Wesley Allison, the fuse contracts, Camp Borden and a hundred other crimes against the Dominion, and then fires Sir Sam for what? For his offences against the state? No. For an affront to Premier Borden's dignity—he doesn't like the tone of Sir Sam's last letter.

Sir Sam's Plain Talk.

True, Premier Borden mentions the fact that Sir Sam has been acting off his own bat, not consulting his colleagues, disobeying orders, in fact, but all these misdemeanors pale beside the frank language Sir Sam uses in writing to the head of the government. Sir Sam may behave like a load of hay for two years—that is to say, take up the whole road—but he mustn't be saucy to the Premier. That is the unforgivable sin.

Incidentally, Premier Borden is the nearest little stable-locker after the horse is stolen now extant on the northern half of the North American continent. Sir Sam's resignation after most of the harm has been done is Premier Borden's latest feat in this direction. But before that we had the ex-communication of W. F. Garland, M.P., and A. DeWitt Foster, M.P., both gentlemen having previously got away with the goods. This is, perhaps, the briskest thing Premier Borden does—making others do penance for his lack of firmness.

Looking for Way Out.

Another surprise in Sir Sam's correspondence—a surprise which is in the nature of a rumor confirmed—is the intimation that Premier Borden was nosing around for a way out, either as High Commissioner in London, or as Chief Justice of Canada, via Sir Charles Fitzpatrick to be superannuated. Of course the Premier denies that he contemplated quitting in the face of the enemy, but the fact that Sir Sam noticed a wistful look in the Premier's eye is worth remembering.

Another surprise to his Excellency, but not much of a surprise to us who have been keeping tabs on Ottawa, is the fact to which Sir Sam draws attention in his own artless way—namely, that the cabinet fairly bristles with leaders. What the cabinet suffers from is not lack of leaders, but an embarrassment of riches in this respect.

Premier Borden is only one leader among many—and a rather listless one at that—not even primus inter pares. Sir Sam mentions at least two more—the Honorable Bob, of course, and Sir Thomas White. Sir Thomas White seems to me moving rapidly. Sir Sam also mentions Sir George Foster, the Trade Wind, as being far too gay for a subordinate. The glimpse Sir Sam's letter gives into the seething vortex of personal rivalries which goes by the name of the Borden cabinet, is like a peep into Vesuvius. They seem to be united on only one thing—to give their friends, the profiteers, every opportunity to bleed the people to their last dollar.

Perley a Chairwarmer.

Another surprise is the emergence of Sir George Perley. Sir George has in his time been acting minister for all his colleagues in the cabinet. They had no fear in leaving him in charge. He was understood to have no personal ambitions, and his colleagues knew his as a safe sort of chairwarmer who would never set the world on fire.

Premier Borden felt so sure of him that he made him High Commissioner in London pro tem—mark that "pro tem." Premier Borden may not be as aloof from that High Commissioner as he professes. At all events Sir George Perley is still High Commissioner pro tem besides being Overseas Minister of Militia, a position he is said to have filled for a year past and which is now given its real name.

With pardonable cheerfulness Sir Sam points out that Sir George Perley has been responsible for most of the Canadian military management in England for the last twelve months, which is equivalent to saying that Sir George is responsible for a pretty bad mess. And who would have thought it of Sir George Perley—that oyster of a man, and against Sir Sam's say-so! It was like being kicked to death by a beetle.

Like Demon and Pythias.

Another surprise is Sir Sam's fatal fondness for Sir Max Aitken. Canada had no idea that this affair of the heart had gone so far. Canada knew of Sir Max as the Canadian eye witness at the front who did his eye-witnessing of battle dangers. Sir Max was the London Morning Post. Sir Max was left eye free to follow Sir Sam's numerous visits to London, and the right eye bent on the main chance, which Sir Max never loses sight of at any stage of the game.

Canada also knew Sir Max as a vicious writer of books of common praise for Lieut. Gen. Sir Sam Hughes, his friend and patron and companion on roller skates.

And Canada knows Sir Max as an expatriated Canadian, somewhat cloudy in his beginnings, who won fame and riches as the midwife of the cement merger and other progeny of the same kind, who became the partner of R. B. Bennett, M.P., in an elevator combine whose object was to give the Northwest farmer another squeeze, and who subsequently took his money over to England, where he bought a Unionist nomination for parliament and in due

HARD WORKING WOMEN

Will Find New Strength Through the Use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

It is useless to tell a hard working woman to take life easily and not to worry. Every woman at the head of a home; every girl in offices, shops and factories is subjected to more or less worry. These cannot be avoided. But it is the duty of every woman and every girl to save her strength as much as possible, and to build up her system to meet unusual demands. Her future health depends upon it. To guard against a breakdown in health the blood must be kept rich, red and pure. To keep the blood in this condition nothing can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They strengthen the nerves, restore the appetite, bring the glow of health to pallid cheeks, and renewed energy to listless people. Women cannot always rest when they should, but they can keep up their strength and keep away disease by the occasional use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Mrs. N. E. Tompsett, Ottawa, Ont., writes: "For several years I suffered terribly from nervous debility and was scarcely able to do a thing. During that time I consulted several doctors and many medicines without getting any help, and I began to think that I would never get better. One day I saw Dr. Williams' Pink Pills advertised and thought I would try them. I was much better, but I continued using the pills for several months when I was again in the best of health. When I began taking the pills I weighed only 100 lbs. While under their use with my renewed health I now weigh 140. I recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to every one whom I know to be ailing."

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills from any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The career of Sir Max in England is such as to cause the average Canadian to say, "If he can get along, then anybody can." Sir Max is a promoter—he will promote anything, including himself. Some day he will be caught trying to sell the dear public a milk mine in the moon.

Meanwhile he has three valets—one for his necktie, another for his shoes and a third for the rest of his clothes. Working together they dress Sir Max in three minutes, their distinguished employer talking the while to half a dozen reporters and telling them what a great man he is. Not to put too fine a point on it, Sir Max is a bit of a bounder and in England is known far and wide as such. It is difficult to see what dignity Canada would have conferred on her by making this swanker Overseas Minister of Militia.

However, Sir Sam believed in him, as he believed in Allison, but this is another conspicuous example of Sir Sam's penchant for picking the wrong kind of friends.

MOST AMBITIOUS AMATEUR PRODUCTION

Will Be Next Week's Performance of "The Climbers" by St. John Players.

The most ambitious theatrical entertainment that has ever been undertaken by an amateur aggregation of players will be presented in the Opera House next week, under the auspices of the Women's Volunteer Reserve, for Red Cross purposes.

"The Climbers" has been only undertaken by the largest and best known theatrical companies of the bigger cities, and Fredericton theatregoers are fortunate in having this famous comedy-drama brought to their very door. The climax of this play is filled with dramatic incidents; it comes just when it is expected, as all climaxes should, and its outcome is indeed a touching scene.

Great care has been exercised in the picking of the caste, as it is a play with many parts, equally balanced and each character can get something real and important out of his or her interpretation.

"The House Next Door" cast made a hit here last year. Well, this is by some of the same cast. This entertainment is well worthy of a large audience apart from the fact that the proceeds are entirely for Red Cross. The amateurs are only asking us to pay railway fare.
