Opening

The good ship Nedra, flagship of the Fredericton squadron, anchored near Bert Atherton's boathouse came to a sudden and ignoble end today just before noon when she was raked fore and aft by relentless flames. The blaze originated in a backfire from the carburetor of the Studebaker engine of the craft when Jim Sterling, son of Dr. Sterling the owner attempted to start it in order to take it down stream to the Star Line wharf. The fire made swift progress and in a very few minutes the windows of the cabin of the ship were shattered. Spouting flames forced Sterling Jr. to make a hasty departure in the ship's tender and before he was able to do so he was scorched to some slight extent which boded evil for a stay of longer duration. An alarm was run in from Box 24 and apparatus of the Fredericton Fire Department was quickly on the scene. Unfortunately the boat was moored some distance from the shore and the line of hose that was laid failed to reach the stricken craft. A general fear prevailed that as the flames approached the gasoline tank that an explosion would follow. Several minutes of inactivity followed until Dr. Sterling suggested that the boat be hauled into the shore where the stream of water could be played upon it. His son immediately leaped to the task accompanied by another youth utterly disregarding the possibility of the explosion which was momentarily expected. The two young men commanded a motored craft lying alongside the wharf and speeded out to the burning boat, by this time a mass of yellow flames. The mooring rope was cut and the two men proceeded to swing the craft towards shore. In so doing the anchor line of another craft was fouled by the burning craft and for an exciting two minutes the two boats were cheek by jowl until separated by swift and frantic efforts of firemen and boatmen. In another short minute the boat was within range of the drenching stream of the line of hose laid by the city fire department and the flames were quickly extinguished but not before the craft was practically a total loss. No insurance was carried by the owner and the loss is keenly felt, not only from a monetary point of view but because of the day and the occasion, with the fleet of a visiting club in port.

The ship was up to date in every regard and worthy of its post of honor as flag ship of the A. and B. Club. The compact, but spacious cabin was equipped with lavatory, dining and sleeping accommodation. The other masters of the Fredericton fleet will doubtless miss the grey trim lines of the Nedra, only the hull of which is left, and this almost beyond repair.

Experimental Farm Reports More Than 30
Tons in 10-acre Field

The report today from the Dominion Experimental Station here that haying operations there this week has averaged over three tons to the acre, strengthens the presumption that central New Brunswick, particularly this area, will be favored in the 1934 output.

Officials of the Experimental Farm said today that so far hay has been cut and stored on 75 acres and that an average of three tons to the acre has been harvested this week on a ten acre field of timothy hay.

Good Haying Here

The optimism expressed for a good yield of hay hereabouts is the result of good haying weather here, whereas other parts of the province have suffered. The upland haying in this part of the province is unequalled any where else in New Brunswick.

In other parts of New Brunswick the yield is light because of the dry weather. Especially in the northern parts does this situation exist. Farmers in the north are reported to be selling their hay at $25 per ton, while here the price is around $12.

NEW SHINGLE MILL

Arthur Burt, son of Elwood Burt of North Devon has erected a shingle mill at Maple Grove in the Parish of Stanley and now has it in operation. He is at present engaged in turning out sample of shingles suitable for the English market.
