HON. MR. STEWART KNOCKS

THE PROPS OUT FROM UNDER

LEADER DYSART'S CHARGES

A Swan Song

Hon. members opposite claimed that opponents of the Government are always harping about the debt of the Province. Why should not they be concerned, he would ask, about such a tremendous problem. About everything under the sun had been utilized to bring about the increase. There had been trips to South America, rock piles, worn-out foundries, gravel crushers, automobiles and even scissars, yet the government claimed they had money to spend on hard-surface roads. At the same time they had none to spend on school books, nor could they afford pensions for the old people who were in want. A lot of old people had died since 1930 and their last memory of politics had been the way in which the government had broke faith with them. Perhaps hon. members opposite were looking forward to an election when they would try to make those promises do duty again. He could tell them that thousands of old men and women were also thinking of an election. The Hon. Minister of Public Works in his exhaustive defence of his Department had pointed to the great saving made in the purchase of road machinery, but he had failed to point out that that machinery had put hundreds and thousands of men out of work. The government had also established six garages, that had cost last year $109,894, had entered into five gravel contracts, while six gravel-crushing machines had remained idle all summer. He (Leger) had gathered from the impression on the faces of hon. members opposite that the logic of the Hon. Minister had struck them as being sound. He (Leger) would add that it had struck the members of the opposition as sound, and nothing more than that.

Hard Surface Roads

The Amendment, which he had the honor of seconding, dealt with a matter which had been much to the front in recent years. In 1930 the government forced through a bill giving them authority to spend $10,000,000 on the construction of hard-surface roads. The money had all been distributed and the government had succeeded in getting back into power on the strength of those roads. Now it was proposed to make a fresh start. His own opinion was that the government had better work out some other plan so that the money could find its way into the pockets of the poor man. While the government was disposed to look after its friends, he did not see why all the money should go to a few contractors and to buy machinery and gasoline in order to put the laboring man out of a job. Some attention should be given to the needs of the fishermen and the farmers and to the men who worked in the woods and others who earned their daily bread by the toll of their hands. They should be the first to be considered, if good times are to be restored to the Province.

Hard Times Talk

In his own County of Gloucester, in spite of all the talk about prosperity from hon. members opposite, times were very hard. The country could not prosper when men were required to work long days in the woods for fifty or sixty cents a day. He knew of a case where twenty men came out of the woods last fall and, on reaching Bathurst, had no money to pay for lodging at an hotel. They were finally, through the influence of charitable people, given a room in the lockup, where they had a good fire and something to eat. The next morning they had to walk fifty or sixty miles to their homes. The health of women and children could not stand forever the strain of hunger and want, and it was surely the business of the government to see that they got enough to eat and wear.

Fishermen's Bonus

It had been stated that a small bonus had been granted by the government to the hake fishermen of Gloucester county, but so far as he could learn they had not yet received a single cheque. If the bonus was a good thing, why not spend a few thousand more dollars and give the fishermen more help and encourage them in their work. It would certainly be a better plan than the building of seventy miles of hard-surfaced road, which many of the people would never see.

The Unemployed

He would like to know what the government intended doing with regard to the unemployed young men. They could not be kept forever in relief camps at a wage of twenty cents a day, plus food and clothing. He held that a lot of those boys should be establishing farms for themselves, so that they could marry, raise families and become an asset to the Province. Everything the government did seemed to be with the object of making the rich man richer and the poor man poorer. He hoped they would reverse the order of things for the present year at least. Let them forget the rich contractors, who are even now crowding around looking for a fat contract. They should forget the fellows who had machinery to sell and all the other parasites who get a living at the expense of the people.

Change of Premiers

He had heard it stated by one of his colleagues in the opposition that the government had had three premiers since 1930. An hon. member on the government side had retorted that the same thing had happened prior to the election of 1908. It was true that the Province had three Liberal premiers prior to 1908, but they were leaders of a coalition government. He (Leger) recalled the 1908 elections very well, as he was one of the successful candidates. In Gloucester there were ten candidates in the field, including three Conservatives, supporting the then government, three supporting Mr. Hazen, one Independent, and three good Liberals, including himself. He and his two colleagues drew the lucky number. Just before the general election of 1912 he had been asked to join the government ticket, and was promised the entire patronage of the county, all the funds he needed, and something else he did not care to mention. He had refused the offer, although at that time there was nothing against the party in power, as the process of demoralization had begun afterwards.

In conclusion, he said it gave him great pleasure to be able to second the Amendment moved by his hon. leader. It was a constructive amendment, and if the government really wanted to help the working people of the Province, they would readily accept it.

MR. DIOTTE moved the adjournment of the debate.

MR. DYSART gave notices of inquiry as follows:

As to stumpage payments by E. C. Atkinson of the Little Lepreau Ltd., and as to whether the money was paid by cheque; as to alleged sales of the New Brunswick Liquor Control Board on premises other than government stores.

HON. MR. TILLEY moved for leave of absence until Thursday to Hon. Mr. Smith on account of illness.

HON. MR. LEGER moved for leave of absence for Mr. Wood until Thursday, on account of illness.

Adjourned at 6.10 p.m.

A FAIR SIZED MARKET

Mild weather attracted a fair number of farmers to the market at Phoenix Square this morning. The rain kept a few away but there was a wide variety of produce present. Eggs were settling in price going for 30c a dozen. Pork prices are fairly steady going at 11 to 15 cents a pound. Butter is steady at 25 cts a lb and wood prices are easing down steadying going for from $7 to $8 a cord. A good demand for hay brought $9 to $10 a ton. Prices were as follows:—

WAS ATTACKED BY A ROOSTER

Vader, Wash., March 13—Mrs. John Evans was under a doctor's care yesterday as the result of injuries received when she was attacked by a large rooster after she went to the chicken coop to tend the poultry.

The rooster, enraged at the invasion, flew at her face and then sank his spurs deep into her right ankle. Mrs. Evans escaped from the coop but not before losing a large quantity of blood.

There are hundreds of weeds that could be made ornamental by cultivation and experiment.

port or other action any question, matter or thing arising or required to be done in respect of a municipality under any general or special act, and the commissioner will, without unnecessary delay, comply with the order-in-council, and will have full power to require any municipality to furnish such information as he considers necessary for the purpose of complying with the terms of the order-in-council.

Can Make Audit

The bill provides that every municipality and every member of the council or a local board thereof, and every officer thereof, shall comply with any system, methods or forms prescribed. The commissioner may, with the approval of the governor-in-council at any time he deems it advisable to do so, direct an auditor to make an audit of the financial affairs of any municipality either in whole or in part, to be paid for by the municipality.

The governor-in-council, as a result of an audit may make such orders as he may see fit requiring the municipality to carry out, put into effect, observe, perform or enforce such matters or things as the audit may have disclosed as being necessary or desirable in the interest of the municipality.

AN ONTARIO COUPLE WEDDED 71 YEARS

Kingston, Ont., March 13—A bride and groom of 1863, married in a little church in Pictou, today prepared to celebrate their 71st wedding anniversary. They are Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Mabey, now 92 and 90 years old respectively, who will mark the end of 71 years of married life in Prince Edward County next Thursday.

As soon as the frost leaves the ground Mr. Mabey plans to begin his summer gardening activities. Every year he plants, cultivates and harvests the vegetables which supply the couple during the winter months.

Mr. Mabey is not only the senior husband and gardener of the County but also the senior Sunday School teacher. For 42 years he served as superintendent of his church Sunday School. He taught the Bible class until he was 86.

U. N. B. CAGE SHOOTERS LOSE TO MOUNT A.

Rough Intercollegiate Play-off—Final Score Was 59 to 56.

The Mount Allison quintet are 1934 provincial intercollegiate basketball champions. They added three points to the four-point lead obtained at Sackville when they defeated the U. N. B. basketball squad 59-56 here last night. The first game had gone 41-37 and the Mounties took the round 100-93.

The home squad, led by Lilley, started the scoring and looked good to more than equal their rivals' lead. The unmarked and elusive Andrews put the Garnet and Gold back into the lead as he sank shot after shot from under the basket. He was easily the high scorer of the game, garnering 24 points for his squad, while Thomas of U. N. B. led his team in every offensive and defensive move and scored 16 points for second place honors.

Lilley opened the scoring and then continued to drive deep into the enemy territory where he scored four baskets before he suddenly slowed up. Mount Allison took control from here and the first period ended with the visitors leading 31-26.

In the second period Mount A. continued to hold their lead as U. N. B. launched scoring drives. As the pace quickened the game roughened and with minutes to go Laidlaw and Brodie of Mount A. were ruled out of the game for overworking their quota of fouls.

U. N. B. Co-eds Lose, Too

In the preliminary game, the Mount, A. ladies short-passed their way to a 19-17 victory over the Red and Black co-eds to win the round by 4 points. The game was remarkably fast and accurate, with the U. N. B. ladies showing a superior game in the first period, which was played under men's rules. When the second period started under ladies' rules the Garnet and Gold were behind, 9-13, but they spurred the Red and Black off their feet.
