OLD FASHIONED WINTER

The signs and the prophets agree in saying that we are at the threshold of what the middle-aged like to describe as an old-fashioned winter, says the New York Sun. If the students of sun spots are not astray winters of this sort are neither old-fashioned nor new-fashioned, but eternal examples of nature's predilection for the cycle. There were hard winters when grandpa was a boy, but the passing of the years has added two feet to the snow, subtracted ten degrees from the thermometer readings, multiplied the hardships and privations, thickened the film of ice on the water in the washbowl, given added force to the wintry blasts—so do the winters of long ago live with an eager vitality in the memory of man.

The law of averages, through which the unscientific man may get an understanding of sun spots, would point to a severe winter about now, for New Year's winters in the recent past have been bitter days and howling storms since the winter of 1917-18, but it is noticeable that those in a reminiscent mood usually go back to that winter of the war for their comparisons. In the main it may be said that recent New York winters have been no test of hardihood or stamina.

One thing that should be remembered by the fortunate is that an old-fashioned winter will sharpen the suffering of the unfortunate. A severe winter ought also to sharpen the sense of responsibility of those who have it in their power to lighten the sufferings of others; it ought to accent and underline the need of helping those who cannot help themselves.

In New York city 25 defendants fined for parking their cars in city streets all night had no money to pay and went to jail. Just how such people manage to fuel their automobiles is an interesting question.

The fact that a Seattle burglar carried away nothing more than a pair of slippers gives some assurance. He must be preparing to spend his evening at home.

For headline purposes the Pennsylvania Liquor Control Board has become the "State Rum Board", which is not quite so dignified but may be squeezed into smaller space.

It is said that a weak solution of chloride of lime will remove peach stains from linen, if you have any linen to be stained and any peaches to do the staining.

Rudy Vallee says he's not worth three millions but only $160,000 which a lot of us think is still a wide overestimate.

A state like New York which can cut taxes by $81,000,000 with a budget increase of $36,000,000 may be described as sitting pretty.

It's tough work to persuade the man with a $20 weekly income and $25 of weekly expenses that rising prices will put money in his pocket.

There are vast quantities of moral principle in existence. Occasionally, a leader crystalizes and capitalizes it.

Don't think because a grouchy man makes no sign, he doesn't appreciate a compliment; but what's the encouragement for passing him one?

ENTERTAINED FOR FRIENDS

Mr. and Mrs. Luke S. Morrison entertained at a very pleasant dance for their two daughters, Miss Marion and Miss Margaret Ann, and son Frank, last night at the Barker House. The entertainment was in the nature of a dance and about one hundred and thirty were present. The dining room and upper portion of the hotel was shaded in soft lights, with gay streamers and balloons, part of the decoration scheme. Mrs. Chauncey Coleman was in charge of this and performed her task well. Fifteen dances, three extras and two novelty dances were carried out with the music supplied by Walter McGinn, and his orchestra. Supper was served near midnight. The affair was one of the best arranged social events of the winter season in the capital.
