YORK-SUNBURY SOCIETY GETS ODD ADDITIONS

Foot Protectors and a
Queer Little Bible Are
Added To Museum

BIBLE A WAR RELIC

Miss Alice Murray and
Sergt.-Major Brewer
Donators

The museum of the York-Sunbury Historical Society this week was the recipient of two additions to its ever-increasing collection of historical oddities. The latest are a small bible, relic of the Great War, and a pair of foot protectors which were used before the days of rubbers.

Sgt.-Major H. T. Brewer, city, has presented the Society with the bible. The bible formerly belonged to Major F. P. Day, once member of the faculty of the University of New Brunswick. During the early days of the war, Sgt.-Major Day swore in 2,500 recruits for services overseas.

The old fashioned foot protectors have been donated to the Society by Miss Alice Murray, of Kingsclear. These protectors were used before the days of rubbers. They are made like the old-fashioned wooden skate and are strapped to the foot in the same manner. In place of the blade, or runner, there is a round piece of iron, shaped like a saucer.

Both specimens should attract considerable attention from visitors to the York-Sunbury Historical Society museum.
