cloth, and I was leaning over the rail myself when you shrieked. There wasn't anyone else near me, and no one can possibly have passed round the deck, as you can see for yourself."

"Very well, then," she said, "you people had better get a strait-waistcoat ready for me. If I didn't see Craig there, I'm going off my head." Quest had disappeared some seconds ago. He came thoughtfully back, a little later.

"Captain," he asked, "what shall you say if I tell you that I have proof that Craig is on board?" The captain glanced at Laura and restrained himself.

"I should probably say a great many things which I should regret afterwards," he replied, grimly.
"Sit down and we'll tell you what has happened in my room," Quest continued.

He told the story, calmly and without remark. The captain held his head.

"The ship shall be searched," the captain declared, "once more. We'll look into every crack and every cupboard."

Lenora turned away with a little shiver. It was one of her rare moments of weakness.

"You won't find him! You won't find him!" she murmured. "And I am afraid!"

Lenora grasped the rails of the steamer and glanced downwards at the great barge full of Arab sailors and merchandise. In the near background were the docks of Port Said.
It was their first glimpse of eastern atmosphere and color.

"I can't tell you how happy I am," she declared to Quest, "to think that this voyage is over. Every night I have gone to bed terrified."

He smiled grimly.
"Coming on shore, any of you?"
Harris inquired.

"We may when the boat moves up," Quest replied. "The professor went off on the first barge. Here he is, coming back."

A little boat had shot out from the docks, manned by a couple of Arabs.
They could see the professor seated in the stern. He was poring over a small document which he held in his hand. He waved to them excitedly.
"He's got news!" Quest muttered.

He came straight to Quest and Lenora and gripped the former by the arm.

"Look!" he cried. "Look!"
He held out a card. Quest read it aloud:

There is not one amongst you with the wit of a Mongar child. Good-by!
The Hands!

"Where did you get it?" Quest demanded.

"That's the point—the whole point!" the professor exclaimed excitedly.
"He's done us! He's landed! That paper was pushed into my hand by a tall Arab, who mumbled something and hurried off across the docks. On the landing stage, mind!"

The captain came and put his head out of the door.

"Mr. Quest," he said, "can you spare me a moment? You can all come, if you like."

They moved up towards him. The captain closed the door of his cabin.
He pointed to a carpet-sweeper which lay against the wall.

"Look at that," he invited.
They lifted the top. Inside were several sandwiches and a small can of tea.

"What on earth is this?" Quest demanded.

The captain, without a word, led them into his inner room. A huge lounge stood in one corner. He lifted the valance. Underneath were some crumbs.

"You see," he pointed out, "there's room there for a man to have hidden, especially if he could crawl out on deck at night. I couldn't make out why the dickens Brown was always sweeping out my room, and I took up this thing a little time ago and looked at it. This is what I found."

"Where's Brown?" Quest asked, quickly.

"I rang down for the chief steward," the captain continued, "and ordered Brown to be sent up at once. The chief steward came himself instead.
It seems Brown went off without his wages, but with a huge parcel of bedding, on the first barge this morning, before anyone was about."

Quest groaned as he turned away.
"Captain," he declared, "I am ashamed. He has been here all the time and we've let him slip through our fingers. Girls," he went on briskly, turning towards Laura, who had just come up, "India's off. We'll catch this barge, if there's time. Our luggage can be put on shore when the boat docks."

The captain walked gloomily with them to the gangway.
"Professor," Quest asked, "how long would it take us to get to this Mongar

PERILS OF THE SEA.

Barge in Tow of Tug Goes to Bottom,
But Crew All Saved.

Halifax, Aug. 14.—The tug Under-writer arrived at Halifax from New York last night, having in tow a four-masted schooner, the H. and L. Upton, and a barge, the Chas. S. Hearne, both coal laden.

When the Underwriter left New York she had two barges, but the other, the Perculas, with 1,200 tons coal, sprang a leak in Friday's gale and had to be abandoned. The tug took off the captain, his wife, two young daughters and two sons and three of the crew. Shortly afterwards, during a heavy sea, the Perculas collided with the Hearne and the former went to the bottom.

hoof of a man until after she gets a whiff of his "cloven" breath.

KODAK As You Go

Before starting on that holiday trip come in and select a Kodak or a Brownie Camera to take with you.

Kodak photography is so very simple that you can make good pictures from the start and is less expensive than you think.

And afterward the Kodak Album brings the added delight of living over again the happy days of that "Too Short Vacation".
