She Coughed Day and Night.

Mrs. Fred. Feairs, Cedarville, Ont., writes: "I am sending you this letter telling what Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup did for me. Ten years ago I had a terrible cold. For days I could not speak above a whisper. I coughed day and night. One evening I was so bad I went down to our storekeeper, and when I went in he said, 'You better get something done for that cold of yours.' I told him, as well as I could, that I had just come to get a bottle of the best cough medicine he had. He told me Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup was the best he had, and said for me to take a little of it before I left the store. I took some, and in fifteen minutes I could speak as well as ever. I think 'Dr. Wood's' is the very best on the market."

That persistent cough must be gotten rid of immediately, for if it hangs on to you it may develop into some serious lung trouble, such as bronchitis, pneumonia and perhaps consumption.

Get rid of it by using Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. A remedy that has been on the market for twenty-five years. A remedy that cures when all others fail.

When you ask for "Dr. Wood's" see that you get what you ask for as there are many imitations on the market.

"Dr. Wood's" is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price, 25c and 50c.

Manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Helping Hersey

BY BARONESS VON HUTTEN

Author of "Pam," "Kingmead," "The Black Patch," etc

He saw a play at His Majesty's, in which he greatly admired Sir Herbert Tree; he fell in love (at a distance), with clever Miss Gertrude Miller, and he sat through, with the stolidity of an American, a "show" at a music hall-hall.

Then he felt that he had done his duty and his London and was on his way to engage his passage home, when Fate overtook him.

It was a Saturday afternoon and a layer of very thin sunlight lay on the street. Barnes was swinging along Pall Mall when he heard his name called in a man's voice:

"Mr. Barnes! Oh, Mr. Barnes!"

Turning, he saw a hansom drawing up at the curb and over the apron beamed the face of Mr. Alfred Cox.
Beside him sat the prettiest girl that Barnes had ever seen in his life.

She wore a large black hat, in her black furs nestled a bunch of violets, and she looked like Flora, like an angel, like—Barnes bowed ceremoniously and gave up looking for comparisons.

"I've told her about you," Cox explained. "And she's delighted to meet you, aren't you, Hersey?"

"I am," said Hersey, smiling.

Barnes would have been, he felt vaguely, embarrassed by the meeting —for how much had the communica-tive Cox told her?—but for her overwhelming quality. This prevented clear thought on his part. He felt breathless.

"We're going to see the Russian Dancers," declared Cox. "I've got a box. Will you come?"

Barnes had read of the Dancers, but had not seen them. He felt no wish to see them but he felt a strong distrust for losing sight of Hersey Frewen.

So he hailed another hansom and rejoined the young couple at the doors of the Palace.

Cox was vastly proud of his box, and his naive hospitality pleased Barnes. The boy was nice. But Pavlova and Mordkin had one blind observer that day. Barnes glanced at them occasionally and the rest of the time watched Violet Barston's daughter. Violet had never been as beautiful as this, even in her first youth.

Presently the girl turned to him and began to talk in an undertone.

"Aren't they perfect?" she murmured.

"Who?"

"Why, the dancers."

"Oh, yes, of course."

She asked him questions about his doings in London. Had he seen dear Charles Wyndham's play? And did he loathe the fogs? She did, but she and her mother were too disgust-ingly poor to go away.

He answered her, rather at random, and presently Cox turned.

"I say, you two," he commanded, good naturedly impatient, "do shut up."

Miss Frewen laughed.

"All right. He's perfectly mad about these people," she explained to Barnes. "They are good, of course, but—"

Barnes watched the dancers for a moment and then she leaned over and whispered:

"What part of America do you come from? We are Americans, you know."

"St. Mark," he said briefly, uneasily.

But it meant only one thing to her.
"Why, I was born there and so was Mother. How quaint!"

Evidently Cox had not told her what he knew about her Mother.

Barnes was glad.

"Mother will be interested," the girl went on, still whispering.

It gave him a curious feeling of intimacy with her, the way she leaned over to avoid disturbing the en-raptured Cox, who had frankly and unashamedly turned his back to her and was gazing at the stage.

When they had left the theatre, Cox hailed a taxi.

"I've got to tear down to the office or my ears will be nailed to the door as a warning," he explained. "I'll come tomorrow night, dear. Perhaps you'll take her home," he added to Barnes.

The girl, who was already seated in the taxi, looked out and smiled invitingly.

"Oh, yes, do," she said, "if you aren't busy?"

The drive was very short or seemed so to Barnes. When the taxi stopped before a shabby house in a shabby street near Russell Square, Miss Frewen asked him to come in.

"Mother will be delighted," she said. "We never see a soul from home, you know."

He hesitated. He did not know whether he wished to see Violet Barston or whether Violet Barston would wish to see him. Besides, he was going home next week.

"Do come," urged the young girl cordially.

But he did not go. Without attempting to analyze his reasons, he decided that he would go back to the hotel.

As the taxi turned, he watched Violet Barston's daughter, who was still standing where he had left her, by the door. The joy and life seemed to have departed from her; her head dropped, her mouth turned down at the corners and the very feathers in her hat seemed afflicted by sudden depression.

Evidently the poor child was going to a sad home.

Barnes went to a play that evening and after it supped at the Savoy, of which he had heard and read much.

Many interesting people were there —the heroine of the latest theatrical divorce, an Indian prince, a great tenor, Miss Phyllis Dare, an aesthetic peeress whose wan, bony face he had often seen in the papers. The place was crowded, the supper and wine excellent.

Woman's Column

CAKES THAT KEEP.

There is always a demand for cakes that keep—that can be kept in the cake box for a week or two ready to furnish savory slices for afternoon tea or the glass of lemonade offered to a guest on a warm day or add to the luncheon desert if need be. Here are recipes for some very good cakes that can be relied on for freshness for a good many days.

PORK CAKE.

This is an old recipe for a very good cake, and it is rather odd that it is not made oftener nowadays—for it is not very difficult to prepare. It will keep for a year, and there are stories of old time housekeepers who used to make next year's pork cakes on the day when they began to eat those made last year. The recipe for this cake calls for one pound of salt pork chopped fine. Pour a pint of boiling water over this and add two cupfuls of molasses and two of sugar stirred with a tablespoonful of cinnamon and half a teaspoonful each of cloves and nutmeg. Then add eight cupfuls of pastry flour and a pound of seeded raisins, and three quarters of a pound of currants, a quarter of pound of citron, shredded, all the fruit dredged with some of the flour. At the last add a heaping teaspoonful of soda dissolved in boiling water. Bake for about two hours in a moderate oven.

NUT SPICE LOAF.

Cream half a cupful of butter with two cupfuls of sugar; add the yolks of four eggs, well beaten, and half a cupful of molasses. Sift two and a half cupfuls of flour—

MINARD'S
"KING OF PAIN"
LINIMENT

The old reliable remedy for rheumatism, neuralgia, sore throat and sprains.

Best Liniment Made
MR. A. E. LAUNDY, EDMONTON, writes:
"I fell from a building and received what the doctor called a very bad sprained ankle, and told me I must not walk on it for three weeks. I got MINARD'S LINI-MENT and in six days I was out to work again.
I think it the best liniment made."

Minard's Liniment
always gives satisfaction. For any ache or pain. It gives instant relief.

Minard's Liniment
Co., Limited
Yarmouth, N.S.

sifted once before measuring—with a teaspoonful of cinnamon, half a teaspoonful of cloves and a quarter of teaspoonful of nutmeg.
Dredge a cupful of raisins, chopped, half a cupful of cleaned currants and half cupful of English walnut meats in the flour and add to the liquid ingredients. Then add a teaspoonful of soda and a teaspoonful and a half of baking powder and bake. These ingredients make two loaves, but half the amount can be made satisfactorily.

MOLASSES POUND CAKE.

Cream two-thirds of a cupful of butter with three-quarters of a cupful of sugar. Add two eggs, two-thirds of a cupful each of molasses and milk and two and an eigh cupfuls of flour sifted with a teaspoonful of cinnamon, a quarter of a teaspoonful each of mace and cloves and half a teaspoonful of allspice. Mix a third of a cupful of citron cut in thin shreds and half a cupful of raisins that have been put through the coarse part of a meat chopper with some of the flour and add with three-fourths of a teaspoonful of soda.
