Had Palpitation OF THE HEART

ALSO WEAK and DIZZY SPELLS.

When the heart begins to palpitate it will beat fast for several seconds, then slow, then start to flutter, and a feeling of utter depression will come over your whole system, accompanied by weak, fainting and dizzy spells, and if you should happen to wake up in the night with your heart palpitating, and that "all gone" sinking sensation, you feel as if you were surely going to die.

When you feel this way, you may be sure that both your heart and nerves are out of order, and what you require is a real good heart and nerve tonic; one that will build up and strengthen both the heart and nerve system.

For this purpose nothing can equal Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. Mrs. J. S. Nicholls, Listowel, Ont., writes: "I was weak and run down, my heart would palpitate, and I would take weak and dizzy spells. A friend advised me to take your Heart and Nerve Pills, so I started at once, and found that I felt much stronger, and my heart was ever so much better in a short time. I cannot praise your medicine too highly for it has done me a world of good. My husband has also been bothered with heart trouble, ever since childhood, and finds great relief by using your valuable pills."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50 cents per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

STALLIONS FOR SALE

I have decided to offer my entire stable of Stallions for sale. Their record in the Show Rings is proof that they are good individuals; and best of all, their record as breeders is unsurpassed.

DAY DREAM, No. 12801—Brown Clydesdale, prize winner in Maritime shows as well as in the shows of Ontario. The best breeding Clyde I ever knew; 1825 lbs. and the best looker on the streets.

BLACKBAND SENSATION, No. 9476—Brown Clydesdale, 1850 lbs., a sturdy, heavy-boned horse that will get good business anywhere, and a great breeder.

POTTER PALMER, No. 47432—A Standard Trotter, handsome as a picture, 1225 lbs., and a great show horse and a No. 1 breeder.

TRYFAST, No. 58509—Standard Trotter, the best bred in the land, has a 2-year-old record of 2:24 1/4, and can trot as fast as any horse.

Above horses are offered for sale because of no fault. I will sell them with a guarantee they are O.K., and at prices that are right.

Molly Beamish

"I give in. I give in. Lal what's the use? I give in."

"Well, if you give in," said the mollified one, "there's no more to be said, but don't say it again. I've troubles enough to fight without dissensions between us. Troubles and worries—that's all the world's made of—my dear child!"

His eyes became moist and his hands fell on her shoulders—Molly, plucking a flower from the vase, was placing it in his coat.

"This beautiful," said she, patting the yowler with her little palm. "Now pay me for it."

He took her in his arms and began kissing her face, and, as he held her to him, her little hands went rummaging about the great pockets of his coat.

"That's enough. I don't want kisses. I want money—money—money."

"Money!" cried Sir Patrick, now laughing and holding her from him. "That's your cry, is it? Faith, I could almost believe it was your late lamented mother speaking!"

"Then listen to her voice."

"It wasn't her voice I was referring to, but her sentiments. Money, Zounds! And where do you think I'd get money?"

"The bank—anywhere. My faith! What do I care so long as you give it to me!"

"And what do you want money for?" asked Sir Patrick, slipping into an arm-chair and taking her on his knees.

"What do I want it for, and six people coming to dinner this very day and nothing in the house and no credit in the whole of Tunbridge Wells! I can get Rose Cowslip's mother to help in the cooking, but I must have a man to take the place of William—"

"Six people coming to dinner! cut in Sir Patrick. "Who asked them?"

"You," said Molly, straightening his cravat.

"I? Never?"

"Listen to him!" cried Molly. "Six people, and I with all this law business on my head! Who asked them?"

"Did you not ask Mr. Mufton?"

"Oh, faith, I did!" cried Sir Patrick, clapping his hand to his wig as if the remembrance had suddenly struck him there.

"Lady Poyns—Lady Dexter."

"I forgot."

"Mr. Shawbury?"

"I remember now!"

"And no money to feed them with, and no credit! Byles, when I sent down this morning for the fish, sent me back his bill and said I would find plenty of fish on the bill. Wright, the butcher, said he would be delighted to serve us—with a writ. It has given us a bad name, that wretched cook and housemaid going off like that the day before yesterday. I mean, they must have given us a bad name, for what the green-stuff shop said, Rose Cowslip, whom I sent on the message, would not repeat—it was monstrous!"

Sir Patrick rose and put his hand into one of his capacious pockets and drew forth a long, green silk purse.

"Did I ever deny you anything?"

he said. "Haven't you always been my first thought? Money—of course you must have money."

He spoke as though he were about to plunge his hand into the coffers of the Bank of England, and as he spoke he slipped a ring off the purse, inserted his fingers and drew forth a coin.

"What's this? A brass farthing with a hole in it for luck."

He opened the other end.

"What's these? Card room counters! I remember now, I stuffed them in to give the old purse a show. I had a five-pound note, what went with it—what went with it?"

"Lord Langrish went with it, I expect," said Molly. "I saw you at Hadame Bezique's last night—you and he playing piquet."

"Faith, so you did!" replied Sir Patrick, putting the counters in the purse and the purse on the table.

"And that reminds me, - owe him thirty guineas. Never mind, you can't find money when there isn't any, and the long and the short of it is, I'll have to borrow some."

"Oh, lud!" said Molly.

"What now, miss?"

"Whom are you to borrow from?"

Sir Patrick turned.

"Whom I to borrow from—with the whole of Tunbridge Wells before me!"

Molly laughed.

"Yes, but when it comes to a question of borrowing money, I expect you'll find the whole of Tunbridge Wells behind you. Oh, did you but see these people as I see them! They have purses instead of hearts, and half the purses are empty."

"Empty or full," said Sir Patrick Beamish, "never have I been better received than here, never have I had so many invitations, never have I had so many warm hands held out to me as here—"

"For your guineas."

"From the highest to the lowest. Did you not see Lady Trumington last night, and she turning to me like a queen—"

"Yes, and I saw her turning the king at cards two minutes before. Dear Father, did these people know our condition, every door would be closed on us, and I fear our condition is very nearly known, else these tradespeople would not have acted so this morning."

She turned—some one had knocked at the door. The door opened, and Rose Cowslip appeared with something in her hand and half under her apron.

HELP FOR MRS. NEWLYWED

"I want to try and take the shine off this old serge dress," said Mrs. Newlywed. "Can you tell me how to do it?"

"First sponge the garment with vinegar as hot as the hands will stand, then press in the usual way. Press the right side of the goods under a cloth folded twice. The skirt will look like new," said Mrs. neighbor.

FASHION'S FADS

All the precious flounces, veils and edgings that are being kept as heirlooms, made of various laces such as Chantilly, blonde and Brussels, and not applique, and can be blended ideally with taffeta and tulle in the production of rarely graceful gowns for the house. It is bad economy to lay it by in lavender indefinitely and therefore when the opportunity for use of it is encouraged by fashion it is a pleasant duty to answer the call.

There is nothing more useful than a really picturesque pinafore-overdress. It is a delightful garment which can be thrown on in a moment and which never fails to look attractive and uncommon.

POPOVERS.

Ingredients: two cupfuls of milk, two cupfuls of flour, two eggs, (whites and yolks beaten separately), salt to taste.

Mix salt and flour well together and then add them slowly to the flour, making a smooth batter. Then turn in the whipped whites, folding these gently into the mixture. Put the batter immediately into hot greased pans, half filling them, and bake in hot oven for thirty minutes. As popovers fall when cold they must be eaten as soon as baked.

EGG WHITES.

When mayonnaise, gold cake or custard has left an abundance of egg whites in the pantry try a whip for dessert. It is one of the daintiest and most tempting of all sweets, and yet has an element of food value that is important.

White of egg, beaten stiff, is the foundation of all whips. This is sweetened and flavored—and the whip is ready to serve. It is daintiest served in dessert glasses of some sort. Small cakes, nut or coconut macaroons or lady fingers may be passed with whips.

Orange whip is delicious. To make it cut sweet oranges into small dice, free from seeds and inner skin. Sweeten the egg white and add orange pulp and juice, as much as the eggs will take without getting thin. This whip may be garnished with a few pieces of candied orange peel.

Chocolate whip is made in the same way. Melt an ounce of unsweetened chocolate with half a cupful of sugar and a very little water enough to make a thick syrup. Cook for three or four minutes and cool, and then pour slowly and carefully over four stiff egg whites mixing it in thoroughly.

A wise girl never lets the young man she has spotted for her own see her with her hair in curl papers until after the parson has said his fatal words.

BUT HE HAD GONE.

Stranger (entering)—Is the cashier in?
Manager—No.
Stranger—Gone for a rest?
Manager (sadly)—No; goes to avoid arrest.
