TAKE "CASCARETS" IF
HEADACHY, BILIOUS
AND CONSTIPATED

Best for Liver and Bowels, Bad Breath, Bad Colds, Sour Stomach.

Get a 10-cent box.
Sick headache, biliousness, coated tongue, head and nose clogged up with a cold—always trace this to torpid liver; delayed, fermenting food in the bowels or sour, gassy stomach.
Poisonous matter clogged in the intestines, instead of being cast out of the system, is re-absorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue, it causes congestion and that dull, throbbing, sickening headache.
Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.
A Cascaret tonight will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist means your head clear, stomach sweet and your liver and bowels regular for months.

A Romance of Monte Carlo

"Beast!" said Julia. "Beast, beast! I asked him not to go with those wretches. I felt what was coming—even in the train I felt it—and he would. Beast, beast, beast!" She was in front of the Cote d'Azur now and she stopped, went in, found the luggage had been removed to the Riviera Palace and, having said goodbye to the manageress, followed the luggage.

CHAPTER VII.

At six o'clock, when Jack entered,
Julia was seated in her room.

He had guessed nothing of the disaster he had brought about. Having left Bachelry, he had returned to the tables, and, again playing for small stakes, had been wonderfully lucky, increasing his hundred francs to five hundred.

"Hello, Julie!" said he.

Julia dropped the book she was reading into her lap and looked up at him. She did not say a word.

"I've made a pile of money," said Jack, flinging his hat on the couch.
"If I'd only had the courage of my convictions, I'd have made a fortune."

He went to the window and glanced out, to see what sort of view the new room had, and turned again.

"I began by putting ten francs on manque. Manque turned up six times running. If I had only doubled my stakes each time I'd have made a pile but I haven't the courage of my convictions. Why, what's the matter with you, Julia?"

"When did you leave those people?"

"What people?"

"What people! Those cads you disgraced me by being seen with."

"Bachelry?"

"Don't mention his name!"

"Disgraced you?"

"Yes, disgraced me. And that was not bad enough; you must not only recognize me, but come to our table."

"Your table! I'm awfully sorry, but—see here, I didn't know. I saw you with a couple of fussy-looking old people and I thought maybe you'd be bored and would like to join us, and then I saw you go out. You promised to meet me and never turned up."

"And you promised me to have no more to do with that lot."

"Did I?" said the easy acquiescer, scratching his head.

"Did you? You did! And then—then, at the most important moment of my life, you turned up with them, branding me with your own brand!"

"For goodness' sake, Julia, do talk sense! I brand you—with what brand and how was it the most important moment of your life? It seemed to me, you were having luncheon."

"Do you know the people with whom I was?"

"Not from Adam."

"Well, they were the Frekes."

"They looked it," said Jack. "The old woman stared at me as if she was stuffed."

"The Frekes of Holm Hall, the only people who could, possibly help me to get back into the position I have lost."

"The position you have lost! How have you lost your position?"

"By narrying you."

"I don't see what position you have lost and all I can say is, if only those two old images can raise you into it, it must have been a d—silly position."

"That's right, swear. You'll be breaking the furniture next."

"I didn't mean to swear but you go on as if you were half cracked. Here I come back feeling jolly, and I find you flying at me as if I'd committed a murder. What have I done?"

"Nothing," said Julia, closing her lips on the word.

"You don't think—you're now imagining that I've any—that I care for that painted woman?"

Julia laughed in a cracked and discordant manner.

"It does not matter to me whom you care for. What does matter to me is the fact that you don't care for my reputation."

"In what way?"

"Can't you see the object you made of yourself today and of me, before those people?"

"The Frekes?"

"Yes, the Frekes. They know every one I know; they fancied I was living among respectable people. Mrs.

Freke invited me to her house, and then—"

"I'm awfully sorry," said Jack.

"Look here, Julia, it wasn't my fault I didn't know you'd be there, or I shouldn't have come, and I didn't know the sort of people you were with, or I should not have come up to you. I know what you mean; Bachelry and that girl aren't the sort of people that those sort of people would cotton to, but, good heavens, I'm not married to Bachelry!

Any one may meet a man like that as an acquaintance. He told me himself that the Grand Duke what's-his-name gave him a diamond pin. Do you know there's a lot of people who would think it an honor to be seen with him? I know your point of view and those people's and I'm awfully sorry—"

"It's not only they; it's the whole position," said Julia hardly.

"I don't understand."

"You couldn't—you have become one of them. Even in your dress it shows—it's like a disease—even the necktie and collar you are wearing."

"No, that's nonsense," said Jack.

"Can't a man be a gentleman and wear a collar that doesn't choke him?"

"Oh, you can't understand," said Julia, taking up her book.

"All right, then," said he in a huff, and off he went, shutting the door, almost banging it.

HOW TO PUT ON WEIGHT AND IMPROVE YOUR LOOKS

You know you are too thin—you eat and eat, but never get an ounce fatter. Nerves are weak, color is bad, strength seems exhausted. It's not hard to get fat. You must eat more, digest more, exercise more. Try Ferrozone and watch your appetite grow. It turns all you eat into nutriment and building material—fills your veins with rich, red blood—gives you ambition and vigor. For a tissue builder, a fattening tonic, one that restores permanently, there is nothing to compare with Ferrozone.
Try it and see, 50c. at all dealers.
