WELCOME TO FREDERICTON

Fredericton tonight will be honored by a visit from His Excellency the Earl of Bessborough, governor-general of Canada, and his gracious consort, the Countess of Bessborough. It is needless to say that a right royal welcome awaits the vice-regal visitors. They will arrive from Saint John by the 6.15 train, will spend the night here and depart at an early hour to-morrow morning for Moncton by way of McEwen Junction.

The previous visit of His Excellency to Fredericton soon after his appointment three years ago, is remembered with pleasure by the citizens. Her Excellency is coming to Fredericton tonight for the first time, and naturally her visit is being looked forward to with special interest. She does not come here, however in the capacity of a stranger, as our people have closely followed her career in Canada and share in the love and esteem in which she is held in all parts of this great Dominion.

The province of New Brunswick and its capital city greatly appreciate the honor of a visit from the personal representative of His Majesty the King and his gracious consort. It is a matter for great satisfaction that their visit to Fredericton is being made at a time when our city, robed in its summer garb, is looking its best. Fredericton is the smallest of provincial capitals, but it is big in all other ways, and its people take second place to none in their loyalty and devotion to the sovereign and British institutions. We bespeak for the Earl and Countess of Bessborough a most hearty and cordial welcome and feel sure that they will greatly enjoy their brief sojourn in our city.

WAR DEBTS DEFAULTERS

The Glasgow Herald, one of the leading newspapers of Great Britain, in discussing war debts defaults, says: "The kernel of the whole difficulty is that the people of the United States have been allowed by their rulers for years to live in a fool's paradise. They have been encouraged to believe that the pretence of war debts being something different from and independent of reparations was one which could be indefinitely kept up; they have never been informed of the practical difficulties of transfer; they have never been made to see that their high tariffs, prevented payments being made in their obvious way—by increase of imports; and they have been permitted to regard Europe's obligations to them as possessing a peculiar "scaredness" — Mr. Roosevelt's own word—which did not pertain to any other obligations arising out of the Great War. A process of education on these matters was inevitable. The British Government has attempted it several times—in carefully elaborated arguments addressed to the State Department. But the fact of the case—and especially the organic connection between reparations and war debts—never penetrated beyond a limited circle of educated people".

Toronto Star—The mace just returned to Toronto by courtesy of the United States is, as maces go comparative-ly young. The British House of Commons still uses the mace of 1649, with the head somewhat altered. Maces were originally weapons, and medieval bishops, who could not carry swords because of the canonical law against priests shedding blood, are said to have used maces to club the enemy, armor being no protection against this heavy weapon.

Calgary Herald: Mr. Bennett has developed during the past four years into a great parliamentarian. He has established an almost unique ascendancy in the present House of Commons, and he left this afternoon for Ottawa. He has few equals as a parliamentary orator, as has been demonstrated on for admission to Germany.

several occasions during the recent session. Equally outstanding are his prodigious capacity for work and his comprehensive grasp of all questions coming before the House.

The cost of dying is high in Great Britain. The estate of the late Lord Tredegar, valued at $11,000,000, paid death duties in the sum of $5,900,000, or more than 50 per cent. It is a typical instance. It is grimly significant. Behind that balanced budget, lately announced, are taxes that draw blood. They inevitably intone the requiem of a vanishing order.

The surrender of personal liberties and the sacrifice of freedom would be high prices to pay for economic gain even if these conditions could be bought in such mediums of exchange. Germany's lesson to the citizens of this and other great Democracies is that they cannot and that those who barter old political forms for such promised gains make double their loss.

Punctuation marks are not required in Chinese, owing to the serviceable particles which indicate the end of a sentence, an exclamation, an interrogation or an ironical remark.

"How to Attain Strong Old Age"—headline. Why not ask a piece of cheese?

WILL PROMOTE WORLD PEACE MOVEMENT

Woodstock, July 23—Rev. Dr. Harold B. Camp, pastor of the First Baptist, Oakland, California, left here today en route to Germany, where he will present the plan of the World Peace Federation, Inc., before the World Conference of Baptist Churches in Berlin next month. Dr. Camp, and his wife and family came to Woodstock several days ago with the intention of spending a six week vacation. He had previously been asked to go to Berlin in the interests of the world peace movement by Francis Lederer, its originator. His decision to accept the invitation was not made until Saturday. He has few equals as a parliamentary orator, as has been demonstrated on for admission to Germany.

STOCK MARKET IS STILL ON THE DOWN-GRADE

Many Issues Had a Further Decline Today—Lowest Prices of the Year Prevail.

New York, July 24—The stock market was again on the downgrade this morning on a light volume of trading. Industrials, Utilities and rails were all affected. The Pound Sterling was quoted at $5.04½ (Montreal $4.96½) and the United States dollar was at a discount of one and seven sixteenths per cent.

CHICAGO, July 23—A "girl in a red dress" tonight was popularly credited with being the "finger" who put the desperado John Dillinger 'on the spot' last night.

With a male companion, the girl was said to be secluded under police and federal guard in a downtown hotel suite, protected from the possible vengeance of the remnants of the Dillinger gang.

While Melvin H. Purves, the youthful head of the Department of Justice's bureau of investigation here, refused to disclose whether it was a woman's tip which led Dillinger to a death trap outside a North Side theatre, statements by Chicago and Indiana police pointed to its probability.

"All I can say is that I won't discuss it," Purves said. "Wouldn't I be a fine guy to reveal a tip?"
