

R. B. HANSON AND PREMIER TILLEY STRIKE OPTIMISTIC NOTE IN BRILLIANT ADDRESSES

Sir John A. Macdonald Club of Young Conservatives Reorganized Last Night—Several Members of the Provincial House Spoke — Political Resume.

A large and enthusiastic gathering of young Conservatives were privileged to hear and meet two of the leading men in Canadian affairs of state R. B. Hanson, M. P., for York-Sunbury and Premier L. P. D. Tilley at a meeting held last night in the Oddfellows' Hall, Carleton Street. The meeting was held primarily for the re-organization of the Sir John A. Macdonald Club, the young Conservative organization. W. J. West presided and an intensely interesting and instructive program was provided. Following the installation of a new state of officers. Mr. W. W. Hubbard addressed a few remarks to the young men. Tracing the growth of responsible government Mr. Hubbard pointed out that Canadian government as at first established was neither fully responsible nor fully democratic. Imperial intervention, he pointed out, is, in many instances desirable as witnessed by recent changes in the Newfoundland administration. Sir Leonard Tilley and his cabinet were, however, by their ability and patriotism able to give the country responsible government, and one of the objects of the club is to get one thinking about what one, as a citizen, should do and how to do it. It is necessary, he stated, that the men in power ought to be responsible to public opinion, and should strive to attain the public good. The speaker added that despotism as we know it calls for a superman and goodwill all around. The selection of the best men that can be found is a better solution to the problem. To do this voters' lists must be kept up to date with all those qualified by age and residence included. Names may be added most readily and cheaply when the revisors courts are open, the lists being prepared during September and October. Mr. Hubbard urged those present to combat abuses which may creep into the work and assured information and co-operation from the central office re the work of the club.

Dr. Jewett Spoke

Dr. Jewett, M. L. A., of Millville, in a few well directed remarks exhorted his hearers to learn the history, resources and government of New Brunswick. Richly endowed, the province is well worth fighting for. The keynote of his address was "Equal rights to all and special privileges to none", as upheld by the Conservative party. "The Conservatives may have erred", he stated, "but not intentionally". As a final point he urged loyalty to one another and loyalty to the Crown.

E. C. Atkinson

E. C. Atkinson, government member for Sunbury, extended a welcome to the young men present from Sunbury. In his address, he pointed out that world affairs have been especially difficult and trying during the past few years. In Premier Tilley he earnestly believed the province has one of the best premiers that New Brunswick has yet produced and in him we have a man who is honestly trying to do the job for the best interests of the country. In conclusion he added that the club will afford an opportunity to its members for useful work and excellent experience.

R. B. Hanson's Address

One of the most instructive addresses of the evening followed when R. B. Hanson, member of the Federal House for York-Sunbury, addressed the meeting. "The history of the Conservative party is the history of the nation", he began, "In the intervening sixty seven years since Confederation, Canada has become a country to be considered. The character of Canadian citizenship and the character of Canadian resources, our national heritage have gone together to build up the nation".

"The Liberal-Conservative party was founded by Sir John A. MacDonald, and no name among Sir John's colleagues and confreres was held in higher regard than that of Sir Leonard Tilley, father of the Hon. Premier", he said.

Achievements Of Party

Mr. Hanson then dealt briefly with the achievements of the party, not the least of which was the establishment of Confederation, and the laying of the plan which now forms the basis of the nation.

In 1873 a national policy was formulated by the Sir John A. MacDonald government and from then until now the Liberal-Conservative party has stood for the preservation of the nation.

In 1891 the Conservatives fought the Liberal policies of commercial union with the United States. "In both 1887 and 1891, we stood for the commercial integrity of the country".

In 1896 there came a defeat for the Conservative government which lasted over a period of fifteen years. But at another crisis in 1911 the Liberals invited the Liberal-Conservatives to support them in a pact with the United States. The Liberal-Conservatives opposed and defeated the pact which would have made Canada an adjunct of the United States.

At another crisis at the commencement of the late war the Conservatives again took hold "We kept the faith with our Mother Country. It was a terrific sacrifice but the Conservative carried through".

In 1929 there came the greatest economic crash the world has ever seen. But then, as before the people turned to the Conservatives for guidance.

Able as have been the preceding leaders of the Conservative government, there never has been a man who, for sheer ability, self sacrifice and devotion to the life of the nation ranks high than Premier Bennett. On the 8th of August, 1930, Mr. Bennett found the world upside down with the revenues of the country shrinking and its obligations mounting. He found the affairs of the country exceedingly difficult but backed by a loyal group of men, both loyal to their country and moved by a sense of public duty, he has been able to bring Canada through the crisis. The impartial historian will give Mr. R. B. Bennett the highest pinnacle of fame.

"In aligning with the Conservative party, you are aligning with the party that has made Canada", Mr. Hanson pointed out. "Liberalism, as typified by Laurier and others was an ideal. The Liberal leader Mackenzie King on every great question has had one opinion one year and another the next as numerous cases testify".

British Preference

In 1897 Mr. Fielding, Canadian minister of finance, following up an idea originating with Sir Charles Tupper proposed that trade preferences be made to England with the understanding that the Imperial Government would give preference to Canadian goods. The British government did not, however, respond at the time to Mr. Fielding's gesture. Sir Wilfred Laurier in a speech which is recorded expressly asked for a response to the Canadian gesture of preference. At that time, Mr. Chamberlain of the Imperial government stated that under existing conditions the Imperial government found it impossible.

The Liberals on the other hand have consistently desired mutual agreements with the United States. As late as in 1926 Mr. King sought to obtain a U. S. concession but failed to get it.

With the establishment of the National Government, Great Britain has been compelled to revert from her policy of free trade to one of protection. At the Imperial Conference in 1931, R. B. Bennett represented Canada at London and spoke in behalf of Canadian interests. The conference adjourned until the following year to convene in Ottawa and there, for the first time, arrangements were made with the Mother Country for trade on a mutual basis.

That achievement, after the failure of Sir Wilfred Laurier and succeeding leaders, marks one of the greatest developments that we have witnessed.

The agreements arrived at were put into effect for a period of five years with any necessary readjustments to take place at the end of that time.

"The Liberals fought the measure from the first", continued the speaker. "Commerce with the Mother Country has since expanded and our relationships with the Mother Country are now such as we have never had before. Canadian farmers, immediately realized thirty six million dollars more for bacon hogs than before the agreements".

"Barriers are erected only when it is in the interests of Canadians", asserted the speaker. "All the barriers against Canada were erected during the regime of Mr. King and nothing was done by him at the time to alleviate the situation".

"During the present administration trade agreements have been negotiated with countries throughout the world and an agreement with the United States will be carried through but only if it can be done on a favorable basis. We desire to preserve for Canadians the industrial life which we have created."

Premier Tilley Optimistic

Hon. L. P. D. Tilley in a few lucid and pointed remarks outlined the future of the province and country. "The older I grow the less partisan feeling I have. I desire to put my province and my country before politics."

The support of the people, he pointed out, is only to be obtained by obtaining for the people that which they desire and which they are entitled to.

"The problem of unemployment forms the basis of the opposition platform."

"Is the condition any different from any other province or country in the world?" demanded the speaker. "No, not a particle," he answered. "My job is to try to bring the Province back to its natural condition—to find employment."

This job has carried the premier from one end of the province to the other in the wake of which numerous successful and amiable conciliations and progress are on record.

"If you believe the present government is a government of action, doing everything possible to better conditions, vote accordingly," added the premier.

Recovery

"The lumber industry is coming back," stated the premier, and in reference to recent minimum wage rulings he asserted that "every man is worthy of his hire."

"The farmer should get a decent living and the consumer should pay for what he gets. This outlook is the only fair and proper one, and in this connection every province has established a marketing board whereby satisfactory arrangements may be reached."

In conclusion Premier Tilley urged his hearers to play the game squarely, stating that "This country of ours is the right arm of the British Empire."

Refreshments and speeches by several of the young men followed and the meeting closed with the King.
