The BLACK BOX

"That's all right now," Quest told him. "I'm ringing up Inspector French myself. You'd better stand by the other fellows there and keep your eye on Red Gallagher and his mate."

"I guess Mr. Quest is all right," the sheriff intervened. "We're ringing up headquarters ourselves, anyway."

The plain-clothes man did as he was told. Quest took up the receiver from his telephone instrument and arranged the phototelesme.

"Police station No. 1, central," he said—"through to Mr. French's office, if you please. Mr. Quest wants to speak to him. Yes, Sanford Quest. No need to get excited!"

"All right I'm through, am I?"
"Hello, Inspector?"

A rare expression of joy suddenly transfigured Quest's face. He was gazing downward into the little mirror.

"You've found Lenora, then, inspector?" he exclaimed. "Bully for you! . . . What do I mean? What I say! You forget that I am a scientific man, French. No end of appliances here you haven't had time to look at. I can see you sitting there, and Lenora and Laura looking as though you had them on the rack. You can drop that, French. I've got Red Gallagher and his mate, got them here with the sheriff of Bethel. They went off with my auto and sold it.
We've got that. Also, in less than five minutes my chauffeur will be here. He's been lying in a farmhouse unconscious, since that scrap. He can tell you what time he saw me last. Bring the girls along, French—and hurry!"

Quest hung up the receiver.
Inspector French was as good, even better than his word. In a surprisingly short time he entered the room, followed by Laura and Lenora. Quest gave them a hand each, but it was into Lenora's eyes that he looked.

"I mustn't stop to hear your story, Lenora," Quest said. "You're safe—that's the great thing."

"Found her in an empty house," French reported, "out Grayson avenue way. Now, Mr. Quest, I don't want to come the official over you too much, but if you'll kindly remember you're an escaped prisoner—"

There was a knock at the door. A young man entered in chauffeur's livery, with his head still bandaged.
Quest motioned him to come in.

"I'll just repeat my story of that morning, Mr. French," Quest said. "We went out to find Macdougall, and succeeded, as you know. Just as I was starting for home those two thugs set upon me. You know how I made my escape. They went off in my automobile and sold it in Bethel. I arrested them there myself this morning. Here's the sheriff who will bear out what I say, also that they arrived at the place in my automobile."

Inspector French held out his hand.
"Mr. Quest," he said, "I reckon we'll have to withdraw the case against you. No hard feelings, I hope?"

"None at all," Quest replied promptly, taking his hand.
Quest stood upon the threshold watching the sheriff and his prisoners leave the house. The former turned round to wave his adieux.

"There's an elderly guy out here," he shouted, "seems to want to come in."

Quest leaned forward and saw the professor.
"My dear Quest," he exclaimed, as he wrung his hand, "my heartiest congratulations! As you know, I always believed your innocence. I am delighted that it has been proved."

The professor sank wearily into an easy chair.
"I will take a little whisky and one of your excellent cigars, Quest," he said. "I must ask you to bear with me if I seem upset. After more than twenty years' service from one who I have always treated as a friend this sudden separation, to a man of my age, is somewhat trying. I do not allude, as you perceive, Mr. Quest, to the horrible suspicion you seem to have formed of Craig."

"All the same," the inspector remarked thoughtfully, "someone who is still at large committed those murders and stole those jewels. What is your theory about the jewels, Mr. Quest?"

"I haven't had time to frame one yet," the criminologist replied. "You've been keeping me too busy looking after myself. However," he added, "it's time something was done."

He took a magnifying glass from his pocket and examined very closely the whole of the front of the safe.
"No sign of finger prints," he muttered. "The person who opened it probably wore gloves."

He fitted the combination and swung open the door. He stood there for a moment speechless. Something in his attitude attracted the inspector's attention.

"What is it, Mr. Quest?" he asked eagerly.
Quest drew a little breath. Exactly facing him, in the spot where the jew-

"Inspector!" She Cried, Rushing To wards Him.

CHAPTER XVI.

Something in the nature of a conference was proceeding in Quest's study. The professor was there, seated in the most comfortable easy-chair, smoking without relish one of his host's best cigars, watching with nervous impatience the closed door.
Laura and Lenora were seated at the table, dressed for the street. They had the air of being prepared for some excursion. Quest, realizing the professor's highly strung state, had left him alone for a few moments and was studying a map of New York.
The latter, however, was too ill at ease to keep silent for long.

WOMAN'S COLUMN

NEWEST SKIRTS ARE KHAKI.

Since sports are to take up much of "Mademoiselle's" time this summer, it is not surprising that she has fitted herself out with a wardrobe representing more sport skirts than ever before. She can do this with very little trouble, for there are certainly more than enough to select from. The last word in separate skirts is the khaki sport skirt, which was inspired, no doubt, by the recent display of enthusiasm for Preparedness. It is a dashing affair, rather short and cleverly pannelled in front, with double row of brass buttons over seam on either side of the panel. Large patch pockets with box pleat in the centre are also rather soldierly details. The cartridge belt is none the less attractive on this useful garment. Among the other smart separate skirts is the plain linen models that fasten down the front with pearl buttons. Invariably all of these skirts feature roomy pockets, varied in some details. White serge and flannel is also popular, as is the tussah skirt which is featured in circular style or pleated. The most attractive feature of most of these garments is that they are all tub skirts.
They are developed in workmanship and cut so that the tubbing does little or no harm to them.

HOUSEHOLD HELPS.
