Coughed Almost All Night WITH THAT DRY, TICKLING SENSATION IN HER THROAT.

How many people have lost a good night's sleep by that nasty tickling sensation in the throat?

The dry, hard cough keeps you awake, and when you get up in the morning you feel as if you had had no rest at all. Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is a specific for just this kind of a cough, as it is composed of the most soothing and healing expectorant herbs, roots and barks known to medical science.

Mrs. Joseph Hiley, Orangeville, Ont., writes: "Just a few lines to let you know what Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup did for me. I took a severe cold, and coughed almost all night with that dry, tickling sensation in my throat. The first bottle did me so much good I thought I would try the second one, and I am pleased to say 'Dr. Wood's' resulted in a complete cure."

There is nothing that can take the place of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. There is nothing "just as good."

"Dr. Wood's" has been on the market for the past twenty-five years.

It is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price, 25c and 50c.

Manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

STALLIONS FOR SALE

I have decided to offer my entire stable of Stallions for sale. Their record in the Show Rings is proof that they are good individuals; and best of all, their record as breeders is unsurpassed.

GRESHAM No. 1553—Imported grey Percheron, champion of all the Maritime Exhibitions, 1850 lbs., sound and perfect in every way.

DAY DREAM, No. 12801—Brown Clydesdale, prize winner in Maritime shows as well as in the shows of Ontario. The best breeding Clyde I ever knew; 1825 lbs. and the best looker on the streets.

BLACKBAND SENSATION, No. 9476—Brown Clydesdale, 1850 lbs., a sturdy, heavy-boned horse that will get good business anywhere, and a great breeder.

POTTER PALMER, No. 47432—A Standard Trotter, handsome as a picture, 1225 lbs., and a great show horse and a No. 1 breeder.

TRYFAST, No. 58509—Standard Trotter, the best bred in the land, has a 2-year-old record of 2:24 1/4, and can trot as fast as any horse.

Above horses are offered for sale because of no fault, I will sell them with a guarantee they are O.K., and at prices that are right.

A Romance of Monte Carlo

She had taken Jack back without any formality of speech and pretty much as a mother takes back a truant child.

She now proceeded to lay him across her knee—metaphorically speaking—and comb him.

"Well, it will be you that will suffer. We will go back third class—you'll enjoy that. And I'll have no new clothes this spring—but that's a detail—and you'll come to England. What's that you're taking from your pocket? A cigar done up in silver paper—what did that cost?"

"Three francs," said Jack, stripping the paper from the cigar.

"What I like about you," said Julia, with chilly calm, "is your care and thought for me. You never think of yourself. If you put that thing in your mouth, I'll never speak to you again. Three francs, and I wanted a new blouse! And I wouldn't even get a cup of chocolate this morning at Berger's, just to save the money."

Jack put the cigar back into his pocket.

"What I like about you," said he, "is the way you never listen to reason—or, rather, you never ask for a reason. Do you think I'd smoke a three-franc cigar if I wasn't able to afford one now and then?"

"I do," said Julia. "And what do you mean? You told me a moment ago that you had lost all that money. You know our position, or ought to, and now you talk about being able to afford extravagances like that."

"Yes, but you didn't let me finish," Julia blurted at him and her color heightened. He wore such a self-satisfied look that she could not help feeling there was something behind all this.

"Well, finish, then—"

"I will. I went to the tables last night and I lost every cent. I came out, and had not enough to buy a cigarette. I had just put my empty cigarette case back in my pocket when I saw something shining on the ground. It was a plaque—a hundred franc piece. I picked it up and went back to the rooms. It was my only chance and I felt luck was with me at last. I put the plaque on Number Three."

"Yes!"

"It won."

"And what did you win?"

"Well, you see, I put five louis down, and I won thirty-five times my stake. That is to say, I won a hundred and seventy-five louis."

"Oh, thank goodness!" cried Julia. "What luck!"

She had forgotten their differences; the overwhelming sense of relief made her forget everything for the moment. "Wait a moment," said Jack. "I was counting my notes when the ball spun again and next moment the croupier handed me another hundred and seventy-five louis. You see, I had forgotten to take up my stake and three had won again."

Julia stared at him in astonishment.

"So you made over three hundred louis?"

"Three hundred and fifty louis. I made."

"Jack," she said, "there is more than luck in that. It was Providence. Ah, to think of it! We're richer than we started—nearly."

"I haven't done yet," said Jack.

"When I made that money I hadn't really begun to play. The thing seized me all at once. I felt I was going with the stream and that I could not lose. I went mad, I believe, for in my calm senses I never should have dared to stake as I did. I won and won; sometimes I lost, but the luck always came back."

"What did you win?" cried Julia.

"Don't keep me in suspense."

"I won over four thousand pounds."

"Four thousand—pounds?"

"Four thousand pounds."

He took the notes from his pocket and showed them to her, and at the sight of the ninety thousand-franc notes Julia gasped and caught her hand to her heart. Then she took them and felt them and laughed over them like a child. As far as they went, they represented everything worth having: peace, and time to write in, clothes, escape from petty worries.

"They're yours," said Jack.

"Mine!"

"Of course; didn't I win them with your money?"

She turned to him and kissed him. There were tears on her cheeks. Then, holding his coat open, she put the notes back in his breast pocket.

"They belong to us both. Oh, Jack, I've been a fool! And so were you—but I was the first, for I went off and left you. When I met you yesterday morning I told a lie, too. At least, I pretended I'd been sitting up waiting for you. You see, it was so hard to explain all that when I was in a temper. I could have told you easily enough, and laughed over it as a joke, if I hadn't been angry with you, and with that fog for playing me such a trick."

"Never mind, Julie," said he. "It's over now and there's no use crying over spilt milk. Besides, only for that row, I should never have made that pile. Isn't it fine? I don't want to think of anything else. A man doesn't have such a piece of luck once in a thousand years."

IF SLEEPLESS AND NERVOUS

YOUR HEALTH WILL SOON GO

Two horrors crowded into one life—the product of poor digestion and a poisoned system. There is just one cure for this terrible condition—plenty of food—but, mind you, food properly digested; that's the difficulty, to improve the digestive power of the stomach. Get rich, nutritious blood, strengthen the system and drive out poisons—then comes vitality, endurance, power. Ferrozone does all this and more, it makes sick people well, weak people strong, changes "nervous" and insomnia into robust health. Take Ferrozone and health is yours. 50c. at all dealers.

Drink to me only with thine eyes, Oh, pledge me not in wine. To all your faults and more I'm wise Your lips taste of the vine.

SPRING COSTUME MODELS
ACCENTUATE THE HIP LINE

Let it be forgotten, it is again repeated, in spring costume modes the hitch is at the hip. Bodices may mold the figure's lines and be snug fitting, but skirts, whether draped or not, must be modeled to accentuate the hip line of the silhouette.

Strangely enough, it was an evening frock that presaged this new note in costuming. And what is of still greater interest, the frock that sounded the note was introduced a full year ago. The style appeared, was admired and then seemingly slumbered.

With a modesty unusual in a distinctively new mode, it refused to force itself. Now it is in demand. Smart evening frocks for spring show many versions of this favored mode. When sheer transparent fabrics are employed, the finest of milliner's wire is used to achieve the desired effect. When heavy or brocaded silks are used the manipulation of drapery produces the same result.

Taffeta for Dressy and Street Wear.

When the tale of this spring's tailleur comes to be written, one chapter will be headed "Taffeta." First editions of spring modes reveal taffeta as a prominent character in the style story. And there is ground for assuming that later editions may disclose this fabric as the character around which tailleur modes revolve.

The crispness of this material lends itself to achievement of the approved silhouette for spring. Dressy tailleurs, intended for afternoon wear, must follow a line that prescribes flaring skirts and flaring coats. Taffeta, gathered or circular cut, gives a skirt as bouffant an effect as one might wish. As for coats, taffeta can be relied upon to give the desired "pep."

Narrow tucks and stitching are two forms of embellishment favored in the fashioning of the spring tailleur of taffeta.

A Russian Tunic Blouse.

Among the new blouses is a most alluring model called "The tunic." Of course it is Russian in type and its important feature is an extension below the waist line, which gives the long Russian tunic effect. This extension is either gathered or circular, and falls from a trim belt to midway between hip and knee. Worn over a separate skirt of harmonizing material, the new Russian blouse gives the effect of a complete costume.

The idea is a practical one, for any woman can furnish the simple, well-cut skirt and purchase one of these smart blouses to complete a really stunning new frock.

HELPS FOR HOUSEWIVES.

When a wax candle is too large for the holder the end should be held in hot water until it is soft. It can then be pressed into shape to fit the hole and there will be no waste of wax, as in the case of shaving slices off the end.

To renovate a shabby serge skirt, sponge it all over with hot vinegar until all the stains and grease marks disappear. Then thoroughly press on the wrong side with a fairly hot iron.

To keep the clothes from freezing to the line, wipe the line with a cloth dipped in strong salt water.

Mend clothes, especially starched ones, before sending them to the laundry, so that when they are returned clean and nicely folded there will be no need to disarrange and crumple them for mending purposes.

Sliced eggs showing both the white and yellow parts are nice for chicken salad.

Coffee beans, sugar or parsley moistened with sugar, eaten after onions, will prevent the latter from being noticeable on the breath.

Potatoes will be more mealy if a cloth is put over the saucepan before putting on the lid.

THE GORED SKIRT.

Every variation of the gored skirt is in four pieces. One seen a short while ago was in four pieces, but the front and back were finished and lapped on the sides to give the effect of panels or box plaits. The finish could be made at either the raised waist line or at the natural waist line. In the model seen broadcloth was trimmed with braid, a good one for all seasons.

SALAMAGUNDI SANDWICHES.

Wash, skin and bone a herring and chop fine. Add a chopped chicken breast, one-third of a cup of ham, two hard-boiled eggs, chopped fine. Season to taste with chopped onion and salt and pepper. Blend together with a French dressing and spread on buttered slices of bread.
