The GIRL and the GAME

A Story of Mountain Railroad Life
By FRANK H. SPEARMAN

AUTHOR OF "WHISPERING
SMITH," "THE MOUNTAIN
DIVIDE," "STRATEGY OF GREAT RAILROADS," ETC.

NOVELIZED FROM THE MOV-ING PICTURE PLAY OF THE SAME NAME. PRODUCED BY THE SIGNAL FILM CORPORA-TION. COPYRIGHT, 1913, BY FRANK H. SPEARMAN.

Tears welled into her burning eyes as she looked into the faces smiling around her.

"Annette," said Rhinelander briskly to the maid, "Miss Holmes wishes to go to her room."

Like one dazed, Helen turned to ward the foot of the stairs but she did not go up. Instead, she ran impulsively to Rhinelander, threw her arms about his neck and kissed him. The two stood for a moment in silence, neither of them equal to speaking.
Then Helen turned to Annette who waited and Rhinelander, blowing his nose vigorously, walked out into the garden.

Some hours later he and Helen were on the lawn when Spike came hurrying up the drive carrying in his arms two little dogs. "They're for you," he muttered gruffly to Helen when she asked about them. "I knew what Mr.
Rhinelander was doing all this time," he said, relaxing into a grin, "and I couldn't keep up with his pace in making presents, but I wanted to bring you something."

"Why, these little dears are a royal gift," insisted Helen. "Spike, you ought never to have done such a thing.
They're beauties!"

"Oh, no," demurred Spike.
"But they are," declared Rhinelander.
"Where did you get them, Spike?"

Spike made light of the matter.
"They didn't cost much," he said modestly. "I traded an old kit of burglar tools for the pair of them. I thought," he added simply, "I might never need the tools again—they were mostly old models—and you might need the dogs.
That's no joke," he insisted, when he saw how Helen and Rhinelander were laughing. "These dogs are better than all kinds of burglar alarms. And," he nodded slightly toward Rhinelander, "as I've been given the job of watchman on these grounds, I'm thinking about myself, too. They'd be a big help to me as well as a guard for Miss Helen."

Everything that day seemed to come just right. While the three were together a messenger boy appeared with a telegram for Helen. She opened it and read:

Miss Helen Holmes,
Signal.

Will be on Local today.
GEORGE STORM.

Helen's face reflected the pleasure the news gave her; she handed the dispatch to Spike and asked him to meet Storm at the station.

When Spike had gone, Rhinelander, who had been telling Helen of his plans for the future, resumed his subject. "And Helen," he said, at length, "I'm going to make a request of you now that may seem very peculiar. You know, as well as I do, how my nephew, Earl Seagrue, has treated both you and me. He has been about as mean as a man could be, in spite of our efforts to treat him fair. But the fight is over and we have won. He is my only sister's child. She died when he was a mere boy and asked me, on her death bed, to look after Earl and be to him what she would have been, had she lived. You know whether I've tried to carry out her injunction; you know what it has cost me in more ways than one; you know as well as anyone that I have been patient with him." Helen regarded her friend intently.
"Seagrue is going to pieces," Rhinelander went on. "I cannot tell you all I know; but I know enough to distress me very much. I want to help him for my sister's sake, to make a man of himself again, if he will be one. And for this reason—and to show his associates in his prosperous days that his own relatives are not going to turn him down—I want you, when your friends whom I have invited are here today, to invite him to come, also."

He saw the grave look on Helen's face. "I know that you don't like to do it. It's almost an impossibility to ask you to do it; but for my sake, Helen, I wish you would." He said no more, but left her alone. It certainly was rather a bitter thing for her. But she knew she owed more than that to her benefactor.

Rhinelander was quite right. Seagrue had been rapidly going to pieces. He was conferring that day with Ward and with Adams, his servant, concerning their unsuccessful attempt to obtain possession of the Superstition mine. The slightest mishap to Seagrue's plans served now to infuriate him to a degree of anger such as he had never previously given way to.
He upbraided both the men roundly and dismissed Ward with abuse. Hardly a moment afterward, a man appeared at the apartment door with a note. Seagrue opened it impatiently:

My dear Mr. Seagrue:

I shall be at home today to my friends. There will be tennis and tea.

HELEN HOLMES.

He studied the note in some surprise. It certainly was not overcoordial, yet, it might mean an opening in a direction in which he would be glad to gain advantage and he decided at once that he would accept. He gave orders for the trip to Signal, resolving to drive out and tell Adams he was to accompany him. They left the room together a little later and getting into a new roadster, started for Signal.

Spike, in the meantime, had gone to the station and was talking to the agent when the local passenger pulled in and Storm got off, saw Spike and the two left for the house.

It was a delightful moment when Storm greeted Helen and Rhinelander under the old oaks. The young railroad man seemed bubbling over with happiness and Rhinelander, perceiv-ing his great anxiety to segregate Helen for a little talk, summoned Spike and left the couple to themselves.

Storm led Helen to the shade of one of the big trees. "I was coming up today, anyway, Helen," he began, "even if I had not got your note. You know what I have been doing for two weeks —about five men's work."

"I know," returned Helen happily, "but the best of it is, you are equal to it."

"I'm not so sure of that. But I do know it has been the hardest two weeks' work I have ever done in my life to keep away from you." He looked at her evenly. Her eyes fell under his gaze. "I think you realize, Helen," he went on, speaking rapidly and not always connectedly, "how I've felt toward you for a long, long time. The trouble has been, I've never felt in a position to speak until now. You know I love you; I think you understand why I've held my peace—I had nothing, it seemed to me, to offer you.
But Mr. Rhinelander has put me in a position where I need no longer be afraid or obliged to keep silence. I want to ask you, Helen, to be my wife."

She could not speak. It seemed to both that though they had long anticipated the moment, they had not have anticipated the happiness now upon them. He drew her, unresisting, into his arms and placed upon her brow his engagement ring. "This isn't the conventional way of doing it, Helen, but this ring has been waiting for two long weeks for its place on your finger."

They wandered some distance from the house. But unfortunately for their tete-a-tete the guests were arriving.
Rhinelander, meeting them as well as he could, was compelled to dispart Spike on a mission for Helen.

Opposition Platform

The following platform was adopted at the Opposition Convention held in St. John recently: In the event of the Opposition being returned to power, we pledge ourselves:—

NO PARTIZAN CONTROL OF CROWN LANDS.

1. We pledge ourselves to completely reorganize the Crown-Lands Department, so that its administration shall be entirely severed from politics and administered on sound business principles under systematic plans by a non-partizan commission specially appointed for that purpose, responsible to the Legislature and working in co-operation with the Dominion Commission of Conservation.

TAKE THE HIGHWAYS OUT OF POLITICS.

2. We pledge ourselves to take the highways out of politics, giving the expenditure of the money collected from the people and the control of the labor, together with the Government appropriations, into the hands of supervisors, chosen by the people of each parish, to whom a detailed and audited account must be rendered every year at the annual meeting, and a duplicate thereof forwarded to the Department of Public Works, the work of the supervisors to be under the inspection of a competent provincial engineer.

We also pledge ourselves to set aside the money collected from the licenses upon automobiles and other motor vehicles, together with an equal appropriation from the revenues of the Province each year, to pay the interest upon the bonds to provide for permanent roads, which shall be constructed as rapidly as possible.

PROHIBITION PROVINCE WIDE.

3. We pledge ourselves at the first session of the Legislature to pass a law prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors within the Province to the fullest extent allowed by the Constitution, and within three months after the passage of said Act to submit the same by referendum to the electors of the Province, and should the majority of votes cast be in favor of the said law, then to bring the same into force by proclamation within one year thereafter.

ELECTION LAW.

4. (a) To amend the electoral law so as to make it impossible for members of the Legislature to traffic with the Government and still retain their seats.

(b) To make it possible for young men, when they reach the age of 21 years, to register their names and be placed forthwith upon the voters' lists, instead of waiting for the tedious machinery of revision as it now exists.

(c) To divide the counties into electoral districts which shall each be represented by one member.

(d) We will also consider amendments to the election law to make bribery in municipal as well as provincial elections impossible.

PROVINCIAL FINANCES.

5. To obtain at once a correct statement of the financial condition of the Province in order that the people may have definite knowledge of the vastly increased public debt and the enormous obligations of guaranteed bonds they will be called upon to pay; and to so reduce the cost of the administration of affairs and the number of useless officials as to avoid the necessity for direct taxation now confronting us.

AGRICULTURE.

6. To give the farmers all the practical assistance that the resources of the Province will permit, to improve agricultural methods and the quality and quantity of the stock upon the farm; to reduce the enormous salary list in the department, and to spend the educational grant received from the Federal Government without regard for political patronage.

VALLEY RAILWAY.

7. To complete the Valley Railway from a point on the Transcontinental Railway at or near Grand Falls, to St. John, and insist upon the Dominion Government carrying out the terms of the original legislation and allow the Province forty per cent. of the gross earnings thereof.

EDUCATION.

8. To always maintain and improve the educational service of the Province and to co-operate with the Federal Government in carrying out the recommendations of the commission upon technical education.

IMMIGRATION.

9. The inauguration of a vigorous immigration policy to properly place before intending immigrants, whose number will be large after termination of the war, the advantages of the agricultural possibilities of New Brunswick.
