The BLACK BOX

The professor repeated the address to himself softly. For a moment he stood quite still. His manner showed signs of growing anxiety. He seemed to be trying to remember something.
"The name," he admitted finally, as they moved towards the door, "suggests to me, I must confess—we are going to see the house inspector?"
"We are on our way there now, sir —that is if the young ladies are willing?" he added, glancing at Laura.
"We've been waiting here with our hats on for the last half hour," Laura replied promptly. "You've stretched your ten minutes out some, Mr.

French."

The inspector maneuvered to let the others pass on, and descended the stairs by Laura's side.

"Couldn't help it," he confided, lowering his tone a little. "Had some information in about that house I couldn't quite size up. You're looking well this morning, Miss Laura."

"Say, who are you guying?" she replied.

"I mean it," the inspector persisted.

"That hat seems to suit you."

Laura laughed at the top of her voice.

"Say, kid," she exclaimed to Lenora, "the inspector here's setting up as a judge of millinery!"

Lenora turned and looked at them both with an air of blank astonishment. The inspector was a little embarrassed.

"No need to give me away like that," he muttered, as they reached the hall.
"Now then, ladies and gentlemen, if you are ready."

They took their places in the automobile and drove off. As they neared the vicinity of Gayson avenue the professor began to show signs of renewed uneasiness. When they drew up at last outside the house he gave a little exclamation. His face was grave, almost haggard.

"Mr. Quest," he said, "Inspector French, I deeply regret that I have a statement to make."

They both turned quickly toward him. The inspector smiled in a confidential manner at Laura. It was obvious that he knew what was coming.

"Some years ago," the professor continued, "I bought this house and made a present of it to—"

"To whom?" Quest asked quickly.

"To my servant Craig," the professor admitted with a groan.

Lenora gave a little cry. She turned triumphantly towards the inspector.

"All recollection as to its locality had escaped me," the professor continued sorrowfully. "I remember that it was on the anniversary of his having been with me for some fifteen years that I decided to show him some substantial mark of my appreciation. I knew that he was looking for a domicile for his father and mother, who are since both dead, and I requested a house agent to send me in a list of suitable residences.
This, alas! was the one I purchased."

Quest glanced around the place.

"I think," he said, "that the professor's statement now removes any doubt as to Craig's guilt. You are sure the house has been closely watched, Inspector?"

"Since I received certain information," French replied, "I have had half a dozen of my best men in the vicinity. I can assure you that no one has entered or left it during the last twenty-four hours."

They made their way to the piazza steps and entered by the front door.

The house was an ordinary work one of moderate size, in need of repair, and showing signs of great neglect. The rooms were barely furnished and their first cursory search revealed no traces of habitation.
There was still the broken skylight in the room which Lenora had occupied, and the bed upon which she had slept was still crumpled. French, who had been tapping the walls downstairs, called to them. They trooped down into the hall. The inspector was standing before what appeared to be an ordinary panel.

"Look here," he said, glancing out of the corner of his eye to be sure that Laura was there, "let me show you what I have just discovered."

He felt with his thumb for a spring.
In a moment or two a portion of the wall, about two feet in extent, slowly revolved, disclosing a small cupboard fitted with a telephone instrument.

"A telephone," the inspector remarked, pointing to it, "in an unoccupied house and a concealed cupboard. What do you think of that?"

The professor shook his head.

"Don't ask me," he groaned.

French took the receiver from its rest and called up the exchange.

"Inspector French speaking," he announced. "Kindly tell me what is the number of the telephone from which I am speaking, and who is the subscriber?"

He listened to the reply and asked another question.

"Can you tell me when this instrument was last used? When?"

"Thank you!"

The inspector hung up the receiver.

"The subscriber's name," he told them dryly, "is Brown. The number is not entered in the book, by request. The telephone was used an hour ago from a call office and connection was established. That is to say, that someone spoke from this telephone."

"Then if your men have maintained their search properly, that someone," Quest said slowly, "must be in the house at the present moment."

"Without a doubt," the inspector agreed.

"I am going to search the front room on the first floor before we do anything else," said Quest. "I think that if you wait here I may be able to show you something directly."

Quest ascended the stairs and entered a wholly unfurnished room on the left-hand side. He looked for a minute contemplatively at a large but rather shallow cupboard, the door of which stood open, and tapped lightly with his forefinger upon the back part of it. Then he withdrew a few feet and, drawing out his revolver, deliberately fired into the floor, a few inches inside. There was a half-stifled cry. The false back suddenly swung open and a man rushed out.
Quest's revolver covered him, but there was no necessity for its use.

Craig, smothered with dust, his face white as a piece of marble, even his jaw shaking with fear, was wholly unarmed. He seemed, in fact, incapable of any form of resistance.

WOMAN'S COLUMN

ANENT VEILS AND BAGS.

Veils

Are plain.

Are also ornate.

They're worn tight.

They're worn flowing.

They cover the entire hat.

Or they are placed around the edge.

Filet and honeycomb meshes show thread-run designs.

Patterns are for the most part of a sprawling character.

Black, gray, tete de negre and brown are the chosen colors

Handbags

Of shapes there is no end.

Materials are quite as varied.

There may be the conventional frame.

Or the bag may be gathered up with cords.

Embroidery in numerous forms appears on bags.

And some of them are trimmed with ostrich plumes.

Two-fabric bags are seen, along with kid, suede and silk and bags of the various sorts.

IRONING SUGGESTIONS.

Garments to be ironed in cold arch should be immediately dipped in boiling water and ironed as soon as starched. You will have no trouble with flatirons sticking to the cloth.

In laundering lingerie waists, wash as usual, but do not starch.
When dry, dip in borax water, using one tablespoonful of borax to one quart of water. Wring out and fold in a towel a few hours.
Then iron dry. The waists will not muss nearly as soon as when starched. They are also much easier to iron.

When making starch shave off some fine pieces of soap and put in it also a piece of beeswax. This will give a beautiful glossy finish and will also stop the irons from sticking.

Sometimes scorch marks may be removed by merely laying the garment in the sunshine until the rays fade it white again. If the stain remains, it may be dipped in soapsuds of some strength, and placed in the sun again until the spot is gone.

Every man admires a good cook and would marry one if it were not that he is usually too busy courting some fluffy little thing with a pair of eyes and one brain cell.
